Follows Testimony on Their 'Desertion' of Passengers.

To Face Grilling By Grand Jurors

No Fire Alarm Given, S O S Long Delayed, Probers Told.

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—After a day of startling disclosures in the Morro Castle disaster, including testimony before the Department of Commerce inquiry that two lifeboats were lowered with only three passengers aboard, the first assistant radio operator of the fire-destroyed Ward liner and members of the crew were served with civil warrants tonight by United States Attorney Martin Conboy to assure their appearance before the Federal grand jury.

The warrants were issued after Conboy complained to Federal Judge T. Blake Kennedy that the Ward Line was signing up some of the crew to leave port tomorrow on the Siboney.

George I. Alagna, the radio operator, was held as a material witness after his published report that he had intercepted Saturday morning a wireless query from another nearby liner, asking if there was fire aboard the Morro Castle, almost half an hour before the call to "stand by" was sent.

Questioned by Jurors.

As scenes of chaos and confusion among the passengers were described at the Department of Commerce hearing—including the charge that passengers were allowed to shift for themselves as fire raged aboard the liner—Alagna and George Rogers, the chief radio operator of the Morro Castle, were questioned at length by the grand jurors who were investigating the possibility of criminal negligence in the holocaust at sea.

Conboy refused comment on their testimony.

It was understood, however, that Rogers—who was reported to have said previously the "real story" hasn't been told—was questioned about a report a wireless station on the Jersey shore asked if the Morro Castle was afire—also before the "stand by" call was ordered by acting Capt. William F. Warms.

Heard No Alarm.

Dr. Gouverneur Morris Phelps, his wife and their son, Gouverneur, jr., all charged before the Department of Commerce inquiry that they were left to look out for themselves as fire raged on the Morro Castle decks. They all denied hearing a general fire alarm before they were forced by the intense heat and encroaching fire to jump and risk their lives in the ocean, swept by a lashing nor'easter.

They also testified no effort was made to supply passengers with life preservers.

Among the disclosures brought out during the day were:

1. The chief engineer of the fire-destroyed Ward Liner, Eben S. Abott, and his first assistant, Anthony Bujia, were not summoned by officers on the bridge when the fire was first discovered and slept in their cabins until an alarm was sounded for passengers.

2. The chief engineer did not go down to the engine room. He and his assistant were in the first lifeboats to leave the ship. In these two boats were only three passengers.

3. The Federal grand jury summoned John Kempf, veteran New York City fireman returning on the Morro Castle from a vacation cruise, who told newspapermen he was awakened by the smell of smoke almost three hours before the S O S was sent out. He said members of the crew he saw showed ignorance in how to handle the fire hose.

With both Federal inquiries in full swing, the count of dead and missing still stood at 133 persons.

2 More Inquiries Planned.

In addition to the Department of Commerce investigation, conducted by Dickerson N. Hoover, of the Steamboat Inspection Service, and the Federal grand jury quiz to determine if there was any criminal negligence in the tragedy, two further inquiries were planned: One by the American Marine Insurance Syndicate and Lloyds, of London, who carried a total of $5,500,000 on the once luxurious cruise ship—now but a hulk of smoldering wreckage on the beach off Asbury Park's famous boardwalk.

Italian National Band Director Dies in U. S.

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—Cavalier Domenico Valenti, noted director of the Banda Milizia Nazionale of Italy, a 75-piece band organized in Rome at the order of Premier Mussolini, died here today of bronchopneumonia.

Valenti, according to Dr. Antonio Ferme, acting Italian consul in Chicago, was recently granted the title of cavalier by the King of Italy. He was one of the best-known band leaders in Europe.

Gas and Guns Stifle Strikers In Textile Riot

Armed Guards Quell 4,000 at Rhode Island Mill; 3 Shot, Many Hurt.

Saylesville, R. I., Sept. 11 (AP).—Shouting "let's get the militia," a crowd estimated at more than 2,000 broke through "deadlines" here tonight and started a wild battle with 250 National Guardsmen in what local police, by telephone, described as the worst fight of the present textile strike in this area.

The Central Falls police, who had formed a line, in cooperation with the guardsmen, around the main section of the city, were swept back as the rioters, swinging clubs and hurling rocks, forced their way to where a large contingent of guardsmen had assembled.

The guardsmen met the onslaught with both tear gas and nausea gas bombs, using the latter for the first time.

The riot started only a short time after a dozen guardsmen had battled for nearly four hours with

New Orders Will Be Sent to Textile Unions, He Says in Warning.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Withdrawal of a proposal for neutral arbitration of the Nation-wide textile strike was announced last night by Francis J. Gorman, union chairman.

Despite his action, the Presidential mediation board continued conferring with manufacturers, and Gorman conceded he would consider any proposals which might result. Developments today may give definite indication of how long the tie-up will last.

A hint that labor was preparing for the worst came with announcement by William Green, president, that a majority of the 108 organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor had agreed to bolster the textile union's fading war chest.

Gorman withdrew his arbitration offer at 6 p. m. on expiration of his once-extended deadline. "The responsibility is on the shoulders of management," he warned.

"We have sought the way of peace from the beginning—from long before the strike. Peace is denied to us, and we must face management on the field of conflict—we with folded arms; they with paid thugs, militia, machine guns and gas.

"We shall win because our cause is just. The lines will be tightened. New orders go to all local unions

Scientists Baffled By 'Electric Woman'

Venice, Italy, Sept. 11 (AP)—Anna Monaro, Italy's "electric woman," was exonerated today by a committee of experts of suspicions that hers was a psychopathic case, or that the bluish glow seen to emanate from her thorax was a product of her own suggestive powers

The published report, however, left as much of a mystery as ever the actual cause of the phenomenon, which was observed and reported upon by several scientists some months ago.

Court Halts Liquor Poll By Takoma

Commissioner Can Not Delegate Power, Says Judge Letts.

Board to Meet Today to Discuss Future Course of Action.

Holding that a public utterance of Commissioner George H. Allen to the effect that he would be bound by the results of the Takoma Park referendum constituted an illegal delegation of the powers of discretion and judgment lodged in the Commissioners by the District's liquor law, Justice F. Dickinson Letts late yesterday issued a temporary restraining order barring the holding of the election, which was scheduled for today.

His decision that the election was invalid and unlawful, Justice Letts said, was based primarily on Commissioner Allen's statement.

"The most serious thing, the most controlling factor in this case is the fact that one of the Commissioners says that while technically the referendum is only advisory, he has also publicly announced that he will be controlled by it," the court said.

Discuss Allen's Stand.

"The court can not avoid the conclusion that one of the Commissioners is committing his judgment, his authority, to the residents of this district. If that is so, he will not deliberate with the other two Commissioners on the facts and circumstances and his opinion will be controlled entirely by the people of Takoma Park. He should consider the public interest at large; he has excluded from his consideration the will and wishes of the minority views and those persons who reside outside the area, but who own property within it. This is not a proper exercise of judgment and discretion lodged in the District Commissioners by the law."

"This referendum, which is in no sense authorized by law, could not be truly advisory to the Commissioners and should be restrained."

Upholds Taxpayers' Rights.

In his ruling on the case, Justice Letts said that the plaintiffs, four business men in the Takoma Park area, had a lawful right to seek the injunction. That was so, he indicated, because a taxpayer could always object to "interfere with the consummation of a wrong; to prevent the misuse of corporate powers and to prevent the illegal incurrence of a debt with the consequent illegal payment of public money."

He traced the wide discretionary powers with which the Commissioners were vested by Section 7 of the liquor law. This enabled them to do what they thought proper in the public interest and even enabled them to declare certain areas dry.

"It is elementary," he said, "that such duties are only to be performed by the proper exercise of their judgment. Such discretion is vested only in them, and it can not be delegated, can not be surrendered. They are duties that must be performed. To adopt other views (the results of the vote) is tantamount to a surrender of their duty and a delegation of their power to some one else."

Must Act on Own Initiative.

The Commissioners, Justice Letts emphasized, must act on their own initiative after making due inquiries which are to be purely advisory. He indicated that but for the statement that "one of the Commissioners" would be bound by the results of the referendum, his opinion might have been different.

District officials, confronted by a

'New' NRA Cuts Powers Of Johnson

Executive, Legislative, Judiciary Sections to Be Created.

By Leon Dure, Jr.
(Post Staff Writer).

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 11.—President Roosevelt and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, his industrial recovery administrator, today completed the broad outline of a reorganization plan which will convert the NRA into a miniature of the United States Government itself.

Three distinct departments—executive, legislative and judiciary—will be created, each with functions entirely separate from the others. As pictured here, control of the NRA—hitherto almost entirely in the hands of Gen. Johnson—will be broken up as follows:

Executive department—Administration and enforcement.

Legislative—The making of policies, including such questions as code consolidation and simplification of the unweildy recovery structure.

Hopes to End Confusion.

In this manner the President hopes to eliminate the confusion, overlapping and working at cross-purposes which has characterized the Recovery Administration to date. On his behalf it was stated that "very definite progress" had been made in his conversations with Gen. Johnson.

Although actual announcement was lacking, it was taken for granted that the latter will continue, for some time at least, as "administrator" of the NRA in charge of the executive branch, but in any event it was clear that, under the reorganization, his authority will be drastically curtailed.

Thus it appeared that the hard-hitting general had virtually abdicated his position at the helm, in view of the fact that he apparently will be restricted both by policies formulated by the legislative branch and by decisions handed down by the judiciary department.

Johnson Proposed Board.

Gen. Johnson himself more than a month ago proposed the creation of a board to administer the recovery act, but his plans ran counter to the thoughts of Donald R. Richberg, who has been rising steadily in the councils of the Administration, and Secretary Frances Perkins, who has been at odds with the general more than once.

The part all played in the new scheme to reorganize the NRA was not clear, but undoubtedly the President exercised the compelling influence. In reaching an agreement with the fiery general, the President also was seen to have effected a partial settlement at least of the dissension between the Johnson and Richberg factions.

In friendly manner, the President and Gen. Johnson discussed the NRA until midnight after the latter's arrival early last evening. The conversations were renewed early this morning, with Gen. Johnson

Ritchie Sweep In Maryland Is Seen Today

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.
(Post Staff Writer).

Baltimore, Sept. 11.—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, who already has served longer as chief executive of an American State than any other person, is certain of renomination for a fifth term in tomorrow's primary election, it was generally agreed by observers today as more than 200,000 Marylanders prepared to cast their votes on Defenders Day, a State holiday.

George L. Radcliffe, known as President Roosevelt's one-time "boss" and an ardent advocate of the "new deal," is expected to have no trouble in winning a substantial majority in his fight for the Democratic Senatorial nomination. Mr. Radcliffe is senior vice president of the Fidelity & Deposit Co., of which the President was one time New York vice president.

The outcome of the three-cornered fights for the Republican nomination for Governor and Senator remain in doubt and probably will not be determined until the last vote is counted, due in part to the

Senatorial Vote Recount Foreseen

Dubord Will Press Fight; Dry Laws Are Repealed.

Portland, Me., Sept. 11 (AP).—Senator Frederick Hale, Republican and uncompromising foe of the New Deal, tonight depended on the slender margin of 1,238 votes to send him back to the United States Senate for his fourth successive term.

Gov. Louis J. Brann (Democrat), whose defeat Republicans particularly urged as a symbol of Maine's repudiation of the New Deal, was returned to office with a triumphant majority of more than 33,000 over Alfred K. Ames, conservative retired lumberman. Maine's first Democratic Governor in 16 years and the fifth since the Civil War, Brann was the first in more than three-quarters of a century to be accorded a second term.

New Deal Centered Fight.

In no contest was the New Deal issue more closely joined and in none was the outcome more spectacular. Accustomed in previous contests to be swept into office on a mighty wave of ballots, Hale's political position had long been regarded as impregnable.

Six years ago his majority was 82,000, in 1922 it was 26,000, in 1916 is was 10,000.

Tonight, with all but seven small precincts in the State reported, the totals were: Hale, 139,220; Dubord, 137,982. The outstanding precincts, remote and inaccessible, had a combined voting strength of 82 ballots in the election two years ago.

Dubord immediately made known his intention of appealing for a recount. "I concede nothing," he said, indicating he would file his request as soon as the official returns are certified by the secretary of state.

The near-defeat of Senator Hale, however, was not the only disaster which beset the Republican effort to record Maine as a foe of the New Deal.

G. O. P. Wins One Seat.

In the First Congressional District, Representative Carroll L. Beedy, Republican, who felt so confident of reelection to his eighth term that he abandoned his own personal campaign to lead the New Deal attack throughout the State, went down to defeat before Simon M. Hamlin, a "dirt farmer," whose principal previous experience in politics was a term as mayor of South Portland.

Complete returns gave Hamlin a majority of 1,638, compared with Beedy's 1,500 margin of victory two years ago, when he was the sole Republican Congressman in the State to survive the Democratic resurgence.

In the Second District Representative Edward M. Moran, jr. (D.), was returned to office by a majority of 5,970 votes over Judge Zelma M. Dwinal, outspoken critic of the "New Deal." Moran's margin was 2,000 votes larger than two years

Blease Loses, Johnston Wins In S. C. Contest

Young Lawyer's Election as Next Governor Seems Sure.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 11 (AP).—Olin D. Johnston, young Spartanburg lawyer and World War veteran, swept to a clear-cut victory over the veteran Cole L. Blease, former Governor and U. S. Senator, in today's run-off Democratic primary to nominate a Governor.

In the contest for Lieutenant Governor, the only other State office involved, J. Emile Harley, Barnwell Legislator, won decisively from Joseph R. Bryson, former State Senator and Representative from Greenville County. The nominations are equivalent to election.

Taking the lead in the first returns, the 38-year-old Johnston, making his second race for the governorship, steadily pulled away from his more experienced adversary, as additional counties were heard from, and early in the night it was apparent that his margin could not be overcome.

Many counties that were regarded in past years as Blease strongholds were found in the Johnston column when virtually complete reports were received.

The outcome made the second consecutive failure of Blease, a col-

Disorders Fail To Materialize

City Quiet With Swing to 'Machine' Due in Rural Areas.

New Orleans, Sept. 11 (AP). — On incomplete unofficial returns Huey P. Long's candidates apparently had defeated those of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley by substantial majorities in the Democratic primary election today. Walmsley candidates led in early returns.

Mayor Wamsley, who fought Long with all the fury he could muster, failed to obtain sufficient majorities in the City of New Orleans to overcome Long's certain majorities in the country parishes, comprising, with the city, the First and Second Congressional districts.

Shrewd political observers conceded the election to Long, and Mayor Walmsley at 9 p. m. was pacing the floor of his headquarters in a perturbed manner. Long was celebrating at his.

Fernandez Reelected.

On returns from the city, where Walmsley had expected to run up a large majority, Long's candidate for Congress in the First District, J. O. Fernandez, jumped ahead of Herve Racivitch, Walmsley's man, and with the majorities that will come up for Fernandez in St. Bernard and Plaquemines Parishes, he appeared to be reelected to the National House of Representatives.

Returns from 71 of the 132 precincts in the city proper of the First District gave Fernandez 12,417, against Racivitch's 12,008.

At 10 p. m., the New Orleans Item, an anti-Long newspaper, conceded a complete victory for Long candidates.

Maloney Wins.

In the Second Congressional District, composed of a part of the City of New Orleans and four outside parishes, Long strongholds, Paul Maloney apparently was reelected also against Walmsley's candidate, Gus Blancand.

Returns from 105 of the 130 precincts in the city proper of the district gave Maloney 17,626 and Blancand 17,553.

Vesuvius failed to erupt in New Orleans' election today. It smoldered with hidden fury, but on the surface the election was as quiet as a Sabbath day.

The gladiators, Huey P. Long and T. Semmes Walmsley, had worn themselves out with arguments and parades of troops and police before election day and they sustained the street-corner battlers' theory that "one who argues seldom fights."

Forces Checkmated.

Both Walmsley and Long lived up to their agreements to keep the Long soldiers and the Walmsley police in the background. The force of each checkmated the other, but each was ready to spring at the throats of the other at the first sign of an overt act.

Outside of New Orleans an equally quiet election was reported over the State, where votes were

Barbara Hutton's Prince Is Injured In Polo Contest

Biarritz, France, Sept. 11 (AP).—The handsome features of Prince Alexis Mdivani, husband of Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, were marred today when he suffered a broken nose during a polo match.

The young prince was hit in the face during a game, and sent tumbling from his mount. Women rushed screaming from the sidelines, surrounding him and offering him handkerchiefs to stop the flow of blood. He was helped off the field.

Meanwhile, Barbara was reported refusing to accompany the prince to India this fall, where he plans to go for a series of polo games. The rumors were that she objects to polo, which some said takes up too much of Alexis' time, causing renewed intimations that all is not well in their romance.

Scores Dies as Typhoid Sweeps Austria State

Leoben, Styria, Austria, Sept. 11 (AP).—A typhoid epidemic resulting in scores of dead has broken out in northern Styria. Hospitals already are overcrowded and relatives are not permitted to visit members of their families who have the disease.

The unhygenic conditions in the overcrowded prisons of Styria, where thousands have been held since the Nazi putsch in July, was regarded as responsible for the typhoid outbreak.

Rise in Food Prices Here Leads Nation

Gain 4.6 Per Cent Last 2 Weeks in August as Against 3.2 for Whole Country; Increase 9.1 Per Cent in Year.

An increase of 4.6 per cent in retail food prices in Washington for the two weeks ended August 28 was reported yesterday by the Labor Department. For the entire country, an increase of 3.2 per cent was recorded.

Prices reported were 9.1 per cent higher than those in Washington a year ago and 12.9 per cent higher than two years ago. For the country they were 7.7 per cent higher than two years ago, and 14.4 per cent higher than two years ago.

These figures mean, for the country as a whole, that the same amount of food that could be bought with $1 in 1933 would cost $1.15 now, as compared with $1.07 a year ago and $1.11 two weeks ago.

Each of the 51 cities covered by the report of the Bureau of Statistics showed increases in retail food prices which ranged from one-tenth of 1 per cent in Los Angeles to 6.3 per cent in Dallas.

"Of the 42 articles of food included in the retail price index," the report stated, "25 showed advances, 4 declines, and 13 remained at the level of two weeks previous."

The largest increases were made by the meat group, an increase of 7.6 per cent. The advance was said to be due to a rise of 26 per cent in the price of pork chops, 7.7 for bacon and 4.8 for plate beef.

The report stated that cereal foods jumped eight-tenths of 1 per cent, and dairy products, 2.1 per cent. Foods other than meats, cereals and dairy products rose 3.2 per cent.

Lower prices were shown for four articles of food, bananas, oranges, onions and cabbage. Corn flakes, corn meal, wheat flour, rolled oats, wheat cereal, evaporated milk, navy beans, oleomargine, prunes, raisins, red salmon and sugar showed no change.

Both 'In Love and Very Happy,' Say Prince George and Marina

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Paris, Sept. 11.—The Princess Marina and her fiance, Prince George, arrived second-class from Munich tonight to buy her gown for their wedding, this autumn.

"We must economize now," she explained, laughing in the excitement and confusion of their arrival. "We are about to set up a home."

She was the center of attraction, and the handsome, tall English prince, shy in the crowd, was almost neglected by the photographers.

"I am delighted," said the prince, "to be both a bridegroom-to-be and neglected. "It is quite an experience—I am glad. I enjoy it."

Both he and the princess a moment later spoke of their coming wedding in England as a love match. They said they were profoundly happy, and looked it.

"I knew people in love were happy," the princess said, "but I never knew how happy they could be until now.

"If it would not sound silly, I would say the same thing I suppose every engaged girl says—that I am the happiest girl in the world.

"Prior to going on to England, I will buy part of my trousseau, but I intend to purchase most of my wedding clothes in England because England is going to be my future home."

Marina explained that George was continuing to London tomorrow in the private airplane of his brother, the Prince of Wales, adding:

"I expect to continue the journey, joining him after a few days in Paris. Then we will plan our wedding—and home-making. I am delighted to settle down to the life of an English princess."

Their wedding this autumn will be one of the most brilliant in England since Prince George's elder brother, the Duke of York, was married, and both were eager to "get on with it."

Lost Gates Heiress Believed Seeking Road to Romance

Pinedale, Wyo., Sept. 11 (AP).—The romantic yearnings of a Philadelphia society girl today sent Department of Justice agents and law officers of several States in a search for Virginia Ewing Gates, 23, daughter of President Thomas S. Gates of the University of Pennsylvania.

Sheriff W. D. Holt, who set in motion the effort to trace the young woman after she disappeared from a dude ranch August 14, discounted suggestions of kidnaping and described Miss Gates as just "an heiress searching for romance."

Department of Justice agents who, at Sheriff Holt's request, had listed Miss Gates as a "missing person," abandoned interest in the search tonight. The family expressed confidence the young woman was on her way home.

"It would have been almost impossible to kidnap her because the ranch is so isolated," the sheriff said.

"I was told the girl had been sent to the ranch a year ago to forget a love affair back in Philadelphia.

"She disappeared August 14, apparently walking away from the place after she told a ranch hand she planned to go for a stroll.

"About 12 days later I learned she stopped at a Rock Springs (Wyo.) tourist camp and two days later she was reported seen in Omaha, Nebr.

"I am convinced she merely got tired of the quiet ranch life and decided to run away, probably back to Philadelphia to see her parents.

Holt said the girl could easily have found a ride after walking six or seven miles from the ranch to the main highway. At the time she disappeared she was dressed in a black cowboy sombrero, a man's shirt, corduroy trousers and moccasin boots.

At Washington, however, Department of Justice agents said it was a "missing person" case, with no kidnaping angle.

After Conference With Hulls, He Says No Brakes Have Been Applied.

By Robert C. Albright.

A veritable deluge of representations from foreign governments, growing out of Senate disclosures of munitions transactions abroad, yesterday culminated in a two-hour luncheon conference between Secretary of State Hull and members of the Senate munitions investigating committee.

Subpenaed witnesses were kept waiting an hour while Secretary Hull carefully went over foreign implications of the inquiry, after President Rodriquez of Mexico figured as an interested party in the committee's morning recital of Mexican arms deals.

A vigorous denial that any "brakes" have been applied to the inquiry was made by Chairman Gerald P. Nye. Secretary Hull himself withheld comment until later in the day, when he released a letter written him by Nye. The letter said reports reaching the committee show "a misconception as to the nature of some of the allegations" made.

"We have been endeavoring to find the truth in a mass of documents found in the files of munitions manufacturers," read the Nye letter. "The placing of such material in the record from foreign agents of American companies does not necessarily imply the substantiation of the statements found in these agents' documents."

Mention of President Rodriquez in connection with Curtiss-Wright negotiations for Mexican airplane sales for the second time in a week involved the head of a foreign government in activities of munitions merchants. King George of England last week was charged with intervening with the Polish Ambassador to Great Britain in behalf of a British arms sale to Poland.

"There will be no slowing down in this inquiry," the North Dakota committee chairman told newspapermen following the Hull conference. "And so far as I can see there need be no foreign complications."

In an authoritative quarter it was stated that protests and requests for information have been received at the State Department "from all sides." Only two such representations have been confirmed by the department, however—one written complaint from the Argentine and one formal query from Chile.

With two officials of the Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation on the witness stand—large, blond President J. S. Allard and dark, heavy-set C. W. Webster—the committee yesterday reviewed that company's plane sales in the Far East and to warring and neutral South American republics.

Letters to Webster from the company's former Mexican representative, Lawrence Leon, contained such statements as the following:

"I have never seen a country where graft is so freely taken for granted."

"I promised a sedan to the chief engineer in charge of the shops if he is successful in switching this initial order to us."

President Rodriquez was mentioned in a letter from Robert L. Earle, Washington representative of the export corporation, to President Allard. The letter reported that Earle had heard the Mexican President had been interested in a Mexican airplane factory and "lost quite a bit of money."

"It might be desirable for an executive of the export company to make one or two trips to Mexico City, at which time it might be well to try to talk with the President himself, to be sure that he is in sympathy with us, and is satisfied with the way our affairs there are being handled," read a letter from Earle on November 29, 1933.

Allegations that the Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation sold 50 planes to Colombia and four more to its potential enemy, Peru; and that it sought sales in Paraguay while it was selling planes to hostile Bolivia, in 1932 and 1933, were entered by Alger Hess, a committee investigator, who took over questioning.

Must Work "Quietly."

Referring to efforts to develop a Paraguay market, Lawrence Leon wrote Webster on February 10, 1933:

"If we are able to sell them anything, we will have to work very carefully and quietly, and possibly through you as an individual, as the Bolivian government would naturally raise 'merry hell' if they believed we were dealing with their enemies."

Following are some of the highlights of yesterday's testimony:

Prominent Mexican officials mentioned in connection with Curtiss-Wright efforts to get Mexican business included Gen. Juan Azcarate, formerly with the Mexican president's staff but now an attache at the Mexican Embassy here; Gen. Francisco J. Aguilar, formerly with the Mexican Embassy here, and Col. Rodriguez Familiar, reputedly close to the Mexican president.

Comptroller General Lopez, of Bolivia, was described as a "silent partner" in Webster & Ashton, Curtiss-Wright representatives in Bolivia, where the company did a large business in planes. At the same time, letters read into the record referred to Lopez as "one of the few honest men" in Bolivia.

several hundred men in the Moshassuck Cemetery, in Central Falls, both sides using gravestones for protection. In the earlier fight, girls were seen handing stones to the men and urging them to make good use of them.

This afternoon three persons, including a 73-year-old woman, had been shot, after rioters had wrecked hundreds of windows in the Sayles Finishing Co. plant.

Ten Troopers in Hospital.

Within a short time after hostilities started, at least ten Guardsmen were reported undergoing treatment at a field hospital set up by the 153d Ambulance Company. Two of the men were attacked and beaten while walking post in an isolated section some distance from the scene of the main fight, but the others were injured in the general strike. All were said to have been victims of rock throwers.

As the hours wore on the severity of the battle seemed to increase. The streets in which the battle waged were pitch black, all lights in the section having been broken with rocks, and billows of choking, blinding gas flooded through the yelling mob that was estimated to have increased to 4,000. The mob attacked sporadically, retreating before the gas, then resuming their rock attack, the missles finding unwary targets in the dark.

Residents of the section were distressed by the flood of gas that seeped into their homes. Some became ill and futile calls were sent to the police to remedy the condition. The battleground now had shifted within the borders of Central Falls.

Boston, Sept. 11 (AP).—Rhode Island mobilized its entire National Guard tonight as new rioting broke out in the textile strike and nearly 3,000 more workers joined the ranks of the idle in New England.

A radio order was issued ordering all members of the Rhode Island Guard to report at their armories at once after a 73-year-old woman and two men were wounded by gunfire at Saylesville, R. I., where a throng of more than 3,500 clashed with deputy sheriffs and State police at the gates of the Sayles Finishing Co.

Earlier in the day Gov. Theodore Francis Greene had ordered 200 National Guardsmen into the area. The State troops were stoned as they attempted to drive the crowd from the area.

Patrolman William Fletcher, a Central Falls police officer, was overcome and dozens of other persons affected as tear gas was used freely to drive back the crowd. Today's shootings brought the number of persons injured there by gunfire in the strike to five.

National Guardsmen were also on strike duty in Connecticut and Maine. In Massachusetts Sheriff Patrick Dupuis, of Bristol County, asked Commissioner of Public Safety Daniel Needham for the assistance of State police in Norton, where strikers today refused to permit the shipment of $20,000 worth of goods from the Defiance Bleachery to a New York firm. Sheriff Dupuis said there was "insufficient" protection in Norton and that it would not be practicable to swear in more deputies to handle the situation.

Seek Complete Shutdown.

"Flying squadrons" of picketing strikers turned their attention to western Massachusetts and Vermont today in their attempts to enforce the order of the United Textile Workers of America for a complete shutdown of the industry until their demands were met.

Three Pawtucket plants, the J. & P. Coats Co., the Hope Webbing Co. and the Acme Finishing Co., all of Pawtucket, announced they would open their gates tomorrow. The management of the Coats company, a thread mill, told Gov. Green that 2,738 of its 3,000 employes had signed a petition asking to return to work, provided sufficient protection was granted them.

The Hope Co., which has not been closed, but has been heavily picketed, obtained an injunction today to prevent interference with its business and announced it would continue.

In Proctorsville, Vt., 150 townsmen, armed with clubs and ax handles and led by State's Attorney A. J. Parker, turned back 250 strikers from Winooski and Claremont, N. H., who came to picket the Black Bear Mill, employing 150. John Sucharzebsky, of Claremont, was arrested after a large stone concealed in a stocking was said to have been found in his possession.

Louis J. Guilmet, of Winooski, State organizer of the U. T. W. A. and leader of the squadron, indicated that the strikers would return and that he would attempt to organize the Black Bear workers.

Chicopee Mill Closed.

However, the Chicopee Manufacturing Co., of Chicopee, Mass., employing about 1,000, was forced to close today when only about a dozen workers reported for duty. The company is a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson, of New Brunswick, N. J., makers of surgical dressings.

Other losses in the ranks of the workers and the closing of smaller mills in Massachusetts and Rhode Island brought the total number of textile workers in New England idle to 160,431, with 77,144 still working, an independent survey made by the Associated Press indicated.

Horace A. Riviere, of Manchester, N. H., vice president of the U. T. W. A. and New England director of the strike with headquarters in Pawtucket, waited upon Gov. Green to demand action be taken to end "the 24 hours of terror" which he said had reigned in the Saylesville section. He blamed gangs of hoodlums for the disorder, and charged that there was intimidation of strikers by deputy sheriffs on duty there.

The National labor leader declared the strikers would welcome the militia "if they are sent to protect those who seek justice, but we do not want them if they are to array themselves with those hired guards who have been shooting and clubbing us as we follow our program for industrial betterment."

Dynamite Pricked With Pin; Mother And Girl, 3, Hurt

Chambersburg, Pa., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Mrs. Clarence Shultz, 38, of Greencastle, Route 3, was seriously injured late yesterday when a stick of dynamite, which she was scratching with a safety pin, exploded.

The explosion tore off the ends of three fingers and thumb, burning the palm of her left hand, face and leg. Ruth Schultz, 3, her daughter, was burned on the face and hands.

Some time ago a workman "lost" a stick of dynamite at the Schultz farm where he had been blasting. He was unable to find it, but yesterday, Ruth, playing in the yard, picked up the explosive. She took it to her mother who, after washing it at the pump, scratched it with a safety pin to find out what it was.

Mrs. Schultz was reported today in fair condition.

Schools in Knoxville Ban New Deal Study

Knoxville, Sept. 11 (AP).—A course of study to be known as "Economics of the New Deal" has been turned down by the city board of education. At a board meeting last night H. J. Betts, principal of the Knoxville night school, proposed that the new course be added.

"You'll get into too much Communism, if you do," interposed Harry Clark, superintendent of city schools. The board voted it down without discussion.

Mrs. Pettengill is well known in Washington for her work in connection with parent-teacher organizations over a period of several years.

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 11 (AP).—Finding of $86,000 in Alabama State and U. S. Liberty bonds today brought the total "treasure" found in the modest home of Mrs. Margaret Steele Cox, recluse who died Saturday, to $101,725.52.

Mother and 4 Children Die in Flames on Yukon

Anchorage, Alaska, Sept. 11 (AP). A mother and her four children were burned to death today in a fire caused by the use of gasoline in their home at Ruby, on the Yukon River. They were Mrs. Andrew McDonald; William, 15; Christine, 14; David, 12, and Grace, 1.

The husband started a fire for breakfast and stepped outside the house for an armful of wood when the gasoline ignited and exploded.

Airplanes Hunt Ship Aground Off Mexico

Vera Cruz, Mexico, Sept. 11 (AP). A south-bound airplane of Pan-American Airways arrived today bringing word that its crew had seen a red steamship of 2,500 tons aground on a reef north of Point Zapotitlan, between Puerto Mexico and Vera Cruz.

The local port captain sent out a call for more information from Puerto Mexico, and ordered two airplanes to fly to the scene.

North Carolina Increases Army On Strike Duty

Additional Plants Close as Walkout Ranks Gain Strength.

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 11 (AP).—Additional troops were ordered out on North Carolina's strike front today as textile union leaders tightened their lines, regained some of Monday's lost ground and launched an active organization campaign.

At Asheboro, N. C., the local militia company was called when authorities expressed apprehension due to the hosiery strike call.

Three companies were ordered to duty in Gastonia, where an investigation indicated, a statement from the Governor's office said, that many mills were idle because of outside interference and not because of actual walkouts by their employes.

Plants Demand Guards.

A number of plants, some of which previously had said they would not attempt to operate without guardsmen for fear of rioting such as developed during the Communist-led strike of 1929, expected to open their doors tomorrow.

Today's troop orders brought the number of companies on duty in North Carolina to 28, comprising some 1,700 men.

The day brought no change in South Carolina, where 95 mills remained closed and 65, most of them in the Greenville area, operated.

The union "flying squadrons," largely abandoned yesterday in favor of peaceful persuasion as a means of causing additional mills to close, were revived briefly this morning when approximately 1,200 pickets formed a motorcade and invaded Kannapolis, only to disperse in the face of a large force of special deputies and National Guardsmen with machine guns, mounted atop the Cannon Mill, largest single plant in North Carolina.

Additional closings marked the Georgia situation. The Clark thread mill, at Austell, which normally employes 650 workers, closed "indefinitely" as pickets blocked the entrance and shoved back automobiles which sought to enter.

40,500 Idle in Georgia.

Georgia estimates placed the number of idle textile workers in that State at approximately 40,500, out of an estimated 60,000 normally employed. Newly closed plants included mills at Macon, Rossville, Calhoun, Atlanta and Roswell. Union leaders and mill officials continued to dispute the number of strikers at Augusta.

Alabama also reported slightly increased figures for its strike idle, estimating nearly 16,000 of a normal employment of 38,000 were out.

As in the Carolinas, all was quiet in Mississippi, where National Guardsmen patroled strike areas.

Mills at which a majority of workers walked out before "flying squadrons" got busy last week, are receiving no National Guard protection for reopening attempts in North Carolina.

High Point hosiery workers became incensed last night when National Guardsmen inflicted bayonet flesh wounds on six pickets, and the Huntley-Jackson mill was not able to operate today because of an insufficient force. There were sharp reductions in forces at the Amos, Slane, Melrose, Harris-Vocington and Guilford hosiery mills.

Peace Offer Off, Gorman Declares

and division headquarters tomorrow."

Gorman insisted the union had been sincere in offering to be bound by the board's decision if the employers would submit the quarrel to arbitration.

"Our action," he added, "demonstrated our great faith in the fairness and high-mindedness of the President's board. We extended the time 24 hours in order to do everything possible to be helpful to that board in its efforts to promote peace.

"Our generous gesture has been to no avail. Management seems still determined to ride high and to ride hard, as it has always ridden."

Mill owners, Gorman protested, have armed the "most vicious characters" they could find. He objected to use of National Guardsmen in the strike area as unnecessary.

"The Governor of Maine," he complained, "called out his militia at midnight last night, the moment he knew he was reelected. Let me say there will be more elections and we shall not need to be told how to vote."

Gorman said efforts of employers to "starve the workers into submission" would be challenged by a group of "public-spirited Washington citizens" who have established a relief organization. He declined to name them. Later, in a radio speech, he solicited public contributions.

Green canceled a meeting of international union officers due to have been held here today, with the explanation that he already had obtained sufficient pledges of financial help. He said the meeting will be held in San Francisco prior to opening of the A. F. of L. convention October 4.

"I am calling upon all National and international unions, upon all State federations of labor and upon all central bodies and trades councils," he said, "to lend all possible assistance to the United Textile Workers at once, in advance of the San Francisco meeting.

A new round of conferences will be held today between the board and cotton manufacturers. Silk and wool employers also will be called in later in the day.

Arkansas Labor Asks U. S. Control of Codes

Pine Bluff, Ark., Sept. 11 (AP).—The Arkansas State Federation of Labor, in annual convention here today, indorsed "the spirit of NRA," but condemned present operation as being "against labor."

The organization called on the Federal Government to adopt the NRA policy as a permanent policy, through passage of a law "placing enforcement of all codes in the hands of the Government."

General Code To Rule Fuel

Solid Retailers Placed on Temporary Basis Pending Vote.

The retail solid fuel industry, whose code authority recently resigned, was placed temporarily under the new General Code Authority by NRA yesterday. Dexter Tutein, of Philadelphia, was appointed to the authority to deal with matters affecting the industry.

The General Code Authority was set up recently to supervise basic codes for service industries and small groups not warranted in setting up elaborate code authorities of their own. It is headed by Dr. Willard Hotchkiss, president of the Armour Institute of Technology, Chicago.

The Retail Solid Fuel Code Authority resigned recently because it objected to NRA's insistence on reviewing retail coal and coke cost figures, which are used as the basis of minimum prices. The industry wished these figures to be reviewed in the areas to which they applied.

Ship Officers Are Grilled on Crew's Flight

No Fire Alarm Was Given; S O S Long Deayed, Inquiry Told.

Hoover, insistent in his questioning as to why more passengers were not in the lifeboats, made the first mention of criminal negligence in his inquiry.

The head of the steamboat inspection service said his inquiry had no jurisdiction to prefer charges of criminal negligence, that it was concerned only with the licensing of officers and ships, and added that the criminal jurisdiction rested with Conboy's investigation.

Engineer's Testimony.

Chauncey Clark, attorney for the Ward Line, was constantly in attendance at the Hoover inquiry, held in a crowded room in the Federal Building. It was shifted from the Customs House, which was unable to hold the hundreds of curious who sought entrance yesterday.

"We take judicial notice," Hoover once said, in response to objections of Clark's presence, "of the fact that he is attorney for the Ward Line."

Chief Engineer Abott, after testifying he was not summoned by the bridge when fire was first discovered, was closely questioned by Hoover as to why he did not go below to his men in the engine room.

"Did you go to the engine room first?" he was asked.

"No. I went first to the first officer's cabin to see if he was up."

"Did you at any time go to the engine room?"

"No, sir. I did not."

"Why not?"

Only Crew in Lifeboat."

"I telephoned and everything was in perfect order."

"Was it possible to get down to the engine room?"

Hesitatingly, the chief engineer answered:

"Yes, sir, it was."

After he went to the bridge, Abott said Acting Capt. Warms—who assumed command when Capt. Robert R. Willmott died Friday night—told him to get off the No. 1 lifeboat.

"Who was in that boat besides yourself?"

"Thirty-two altogether."

"Any passengers?"

"Two, sir."

"What I want to know," Hoover asked, "is why No. 1 lifeboat did not take off more passengers. What I am concerned about is if you made any attempt to take off any passengers?"

"We didn't see any."

"And not seeing any passengers, you didn't make any attempt to find passengers?"

"I don't know about that—I was ordered to take off the boat."

Crew Inexperienced.

Like Abott, the first assistant engineer, Bujia, testified he was awakened by the fire and was not summoned when it was discovered. Unlike Abott, he went down to the engine room.

Fire and smoke were so intense, he said, the crew had to leave soon after the general alarm was sounded for passengers.

An oiler who testified subsequently, Antonio Georgeo, said when he was awakened by the din, the smoke already was pouring so densely from the direction of the engine room below that he was unable to make it down.

Bujia said when he came from the engine room, he jumped into a lifeboat. He said there were 20 or 21 people in it, but as far as he knew only one passenger.

"I'd like to know," Hoover asked in a sharp, stern voice, "why more passengers weren't taken off?"

"We saw no passengers on the deck."

He also said the crew in the boat did not seem to know much about handling the oars.

Heard No Alarm.

Georgeo said there were no passengers in the boat he was in.

Like Phelps—the first of surviving passengers called by the inquiry and who also was subpoened to tell his story to the grand jury—Georgeo said he heard no fire alarm but was awakened by din and the excitement on the decks occasioned by the fire.

Phelps said the noise and celebrating of the last night out kept him and his wife from sleeping and his wife called out to him:

"Gov, there is a fire because there is some smoke pouring in."

The scion of the prominent Goveurneur Morris family said he looked out and could see the glow of flames over the water.

They hurried on deck. Then, Phelps said, he heard a woman in the milling crowd ask:

"When are they going to lower the boats?"

Already the fire had routed out the passengers.

A deck officer, Phelps said, answered the woman:

Decide to Swim.

When the flames made the deck unbearable, Phelps and his wife and son decided to swim for it.

"Was there an alarm up to this time?" Hoover asked.

"At no time was there an alarm," he replied.

"Was any effort made to supply you with life preservers?"

"There was no one to make an effort."

Phelps thought it was "idiotic" for the deck officer to say the boats could not be lowered until orders came from the bridge, "with the terrific crackling of the flames."

The attorneys for the Ward Line also accompanied Acting Capt. Warms and other officers to the grand jury investigation, but were denied entrance to the jury room.

Among those who went into the room were Warms, the first officer; Clarence Hackney and the second officer, Ivan Freeman.

With publication of the statement of Kempf, the city fireman who told of fire raging in the ship long before the SOS was sent out, U. S. Attorney Conboy at once sent a subpena for the veteran fire fighter.

Rogers, the chief radio operator, kept silent during the day, but said he would tell his story before the grand jury. He has been thoroughly questioned by Conboy.

After receiving the report that a wireless station on the Jersey shore messaged the Morro Castle, inquiring if there was fire aboard, before even the "stand by" call was sent, Conboy closeted himself with Rogers, who was a patient in the Marine Hospital on Staten Island, and then toured the wireless stations on the Jersey shore.

He would make no comment, however, on his discoveries, if any.

The section of the criminal code, under which the grand jury investigation is progressing, reads:

"Every captain, engineer, pilot or other persons employed on any steamboat or vessel by whose misconduct, negligence or inattention to duties on such vessel the life of any person is destroyed * * * shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than 10 years."

Down on the Jersey shore, the fire still raging in the hulk of the liner was a menace to life. Firemen feared the spread of the blaze to the deeper sections of the hold might explode gases undoubtedly collected there.

Capt. William Hall, in charge of the salvage of the ship as a representative of the Ward Line, informed the city officials of Asbury Park the hulk was a source of possible danger.

Over the ship constantly was the shroud of thick smoke.

Firemen, for a time, abandoned their efforts to quench the inferno deep in the hold with the danger of explosion.

Mary Pickford was reported to be in Chicago and expected to return here this week. Fairbanks said he had nothing to say about his private affairs.

Frat Treasurer Denies Embezzlement Charge

Kansas City, Sept. 11 (AP).—C. S. DeRoin, member of a Kansas City brokerage firm who disappeared August 15 after an alleged $32,000 shortage was found in his accounts as National treasurer of the Delta Chi fraternity, was returned from New York today to face embezzlement charges.

He pleaded not guilty and his trial was set for October 2. He went to jail in default of $15,000 bond.

Pennsylvania Strike Clashes Injure Twenty

Crowd Storms Lancaster Silk Mills; Seven Pickets Arrested.

Philadelphia, Sept. 11 (AP). Twenty persons were injured and much property damaged in three Pennsylvania communities today in connection with the textile strike. Attacks were made on factories, homes and automobiles. Seven pickets were arrested.

Most of the injured were silk workers at Lancaster, where a crowd stormed the Stelhi mill, one of the largest in the country. Stones and clubs were hurled at the glass front of the plant, two blocks long. State and city police were summoned and arrested six members of a picket "flying squadron."

The mill continued operation, but officials declined to say how many workers remained on duty. The plant normally employs 1,200.

Fourteen men arrested several weeks ago in textile strike disturbances at Columbia and Marietta went on trial at Lancaster. All are charged with inciting to riot. Ten deputy sheriffs were injured in the disturbance that caused these arrests.

Hazleton, planning a one-day demonstration tomorrow in which even the city's two daily newspapers will not be issued, reported disorders. Several persons were slightly injured at Bridgeport, near Philadelphia, where employes of the James Lees & Sons Co. attempted to report for work. The plant had been idle for several days.

At Bridgeport five employes in an automobile were nearly mobbed by pickets and hundreds of strike sympathizers. The windows of the car were smashed. One picket was arrested after eight State policemen arrived and ended the skirmish.

Hazleton, a focal point for unionists intent upon making the textile strike 100 per cent effective, reported the smashing of windows with stones and throwing of oil into the rooms of workers' homes against which picketing has started.

Pickets said that at five homes placards were tacked on doors giving the families last warnings that the members of the household must stay away from work.

'Hell Salesman' Nips Conscience To Peddle Arms

A munition salesman's opinion of his trade as "one hell of a business" was placed yesterday before the Senate Munitions Committee, the Associated Press reported.

Frank Sheridan Jonas, agent for Federal Laboratories and Remington Arms, wrote to Owen Shannon, of the Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, in 1933:

"The Paraguay and Bolivia fracas appears to be coming to a termination, so business from that end is probably finished. We certainly are in one hell of a business, where a fellow has to wish for trouble so as to make a living, the only consolation being, however, that if we don't get the business some one else will. It would be a terrible state of affairs if my conscience started to bother me now."

Bank Failures Set Low Mark

$4,500,000,000 Increase in Deposits, Crowley Tells President.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The Summer White House today made public a letter from Leo Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, informing the President that "at no time in the history of the country has the number of bank failures been so small as during the past year."

The occasion was the first anniversary of the corporation, which now insures 50,000,000 accounts up to a maximum of $5,000. The insurance plan fully protects 97 out of every 100 depositors, Mr. Crowley declared, adding that bank deposits have increased $4,500,000,000 during the year.

"Recognizing the need for adequate bank capital," his letter said, "the corporation has urged many banks to secure capital funds from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. At present insured banks have actually received more than $864,000,000 of capital funds from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

"At no time in the history of the country has the number of bank failures been so small as during the past year. Only five small insured banks have failed. The corporation made funds available to pay the depositors of these banks within t. days after the appointment of th receiver. This has reduced the distress caused by these bank failures to a negligible amount, thus accomplishing another major objective of the insurance plan."

Loans on Corn Put Up by RFC

(Associated Press.)

The Reconstruction Corporation yesterday announced a commitment of $100,000,000 to the Commodity Credit Corporation for loans of 55 cents a bushel on ear corn stored and sealed on farms.

The commitment was announced by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the corporation. He said the loans would be made on "ear corn stored and sealed on the farm pursuant to State law in the States of Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Ohio, and South Dakota."

"Loans will be made," he announced, "upon corn of any crop year, which when shelled would grade number 4 or better. Producers whose present Government loans are outstanding may obtain loans upon the corn collateral by repaying their present loans and negotiating the new loans."

Area in Jersey Is Warned Ship Might Explode

Resort Area Is Cleared, but Fear Later Subsides.

Asbury Park, N. J., Sept. 11 (AP). Shrouded in smoke, the flame-wracked Morro Castle took on a still more sinister aspect in the eyes of watchers today when authorities expressed fears it might explode.

The fire that already has resulted in a heavy loss of life among passengers and crew still raged in the craft—deserted by all who could escape—and there were apprehensions for a while that it would reach gaseous fumes or ammonia and fuel tanks.

The beach and boardwalk were cleared of curiosity seekers and shopkeepers for a distance of a quarter of a mile when Capt. William A. Hall, representing the Ward Line, told Acting Fire Chief William S. Taggart that the smoking hulk was a source of possible danger.

Several hours afterward, however, fears of an explosion subsided and the police lines along the Boardwalk were relaxed.

Two Boys Swim to Ship.

Just before the explosion scare, city firemen were preparing to take additional hose lines across to the ship on a breeches buoy. Two lines previously taken aboard were gradually flooding the ship and the firemen desired extra lines to enable them to reach the ship's strongbox, containing the passengers' valuables, up forward.

Efforts also were being made to cross the hot steel decks separating the firemen from the quarters of Capt. Robert R. Willmott, who had died of acute indigestion and heart disease seven hours before his ship was swept by fire Saturday morning.

Two youths swam out to the ship under cover of darkness early today and set up a wave of excitement ashore when watchers discerned their phantom-like forms moving about on the wreck.

Released by Magistrate.

A Coast Guard sentry posted on the Convention Hall Pier rang the emergency telephone which firemen had set up between the ship and shore.

"A voice from the ship said 'Hello!'" he recounted.

The sentry called out to the man at the other end of the wire to "stand in the spotlight, or I'll shoot."

The youths, ordered to swim ashore, were placed under military arrest and arraigned before Magistrate William Andrews, who released them after they promised not to "do it again." They said they had boarded the ship in quest of mementoes by climbing up a hawser dangling from the stern.

In addition to the gas menace, it was estimated the ship had about 300 of her original load of 1,000 tons of fuel oil still lying in her tanks.

Utilities Facing License by U. S.

Trade Board Is Expected to Urge Government Control.

(Associated Press.)

A suggestion that Congress give serious consideration to either the Federal licensing or incorporation of public utility holding companies probably will be submitted to the next session by the Federal Trade Commission.

Such a suggestion was reported reliably yesterday as likely to find a place in a report being prepared by the commission as a result of its seven-year utility investigation.

The recommendation may go so far as to indorse definitely such licensing or incorporation. Almost certainly it will discuss the theory with favor as a means of bringing holding companies, held by some commission experts to have avoided both State and Federal rule, under Government control.

The commission has not yet made up its report. Thus, while it can not be stated with certainity what will be recommended, it was said authoritatively that this plan, in all likelihood, will be projected.

Another probability is that the commission will recommend that either itself or some other governmental body be given specific authority to investigate any utility company whenever it believes such investigation to be in the public interest.

reducing to writing the points that were covered.

To Continue Vacation.

Then he climbed into his Army amphibian plane, accompanied by his secretary, Miss Frances Robinson, and took off for Washington. From there the general planned to return to his cottage at Bethany Beach, Del., to continue his vacation and to study plans for legislation on the NRA at the next session of Congress.

Reorganization of the vital recovery administration will not come at once, Mr. Roosevelt already has said, but rather will be effected gradually between now and the time Congress convenes. During that interval, a survey of results will be made to determine what policies should be continued.

This is essential in view of the fact that the recovery act will expire next June 16. Not only Gen. Johnson but others, including Mr. Richberg, are taking part in the examination. Out of further conferences with the President will come final decision of many questions, among them the fixing of prices and monopolistic practices.

Discusses Politics.

Meanwhile, the President today considered a score of other problems, among them politics, which he discussed with Postmaster General James A. Farley and Gov. Joseph B. Ely, Democratic Governor of Massachusetts. With Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the U. S. Steel Corporation, they were guests at a luncheon made much more "happy," according to Gov. Ely, by the Maine election returns.

Mr. Farley, as chairman of the Democratic National committee, wired his congratulations to Gov. Louis J. Brann, who was victorious in his campaign for reelection. In a long conference with the President he also discussed patronage affairs and reported that sentiment appeared "favorable" to the New Deal as he had gleaned it on two tours of the West.

Although the summer White House had insisted that politics would play no part in the visit of Gov. Ely, the latter conceded as he left Hyde Park that the subject had been touched, "but only casually." The conference, which concerned relief affairs in Massachusetts, had been arranged by Ambassador Norman H. Davis, a mutual friend.

Ely Favors Cole.

The Governor, who opposed the Roosevelt nomintaion for the Presidency two years ago, is interested in the candidacy of Gen. Charles Cole, retired, who is pitted against former Mayor James M. Curley, of Boston, in next Thursday's primary for Governor. Gen. Cole's chances were described by Gov. Ely as "splendid."

Other callers today were Nathan Straus, Jr., NRA administrator for New York City; Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins College, Florida; William N. Niles, chairman of the Taconic State Park Commission, and J. C. Penney, the chain-store magnate. Mr. Taylor, head of the United States Steel Corporation, has become a frequent White House visitor, reporting on general business conditions.

New Consumer Drive Is Opened by NRA

NRA began a new drive for consumer support yesterday.

Headquarters began Nation-wide distribution of a new consumers' badge of NRA support, seeking through a reinvigoration of the Blue Eagle's appeal to give "inspiration to the business firms and individuals who are not only living up to their NRA codes but making active display of their faith in the President's recovery program."

The new consumer poster has a blue background with a Blue Eagle in a white circle. This legend is printed below:

"In the National effort to bring security to all, I will encourage and patronize those business establishments in which the Blue Eagle of NRA codes is displayed."

The face of this small 4-inch poster is gummed for pasting in windows. All code authorities and local NRA committees are being urged to foster its distribution. The sudden publicity drive was considered evidence of Gen. Johnson's desire to quicken the Blue Eagle's ebbing pulse simultaneously with NRA's internal revolution.

Wrapped in the NRA reorganization question are problems of personalities. A number of important officials are anxious to return to private life. Leon Henderson, head of the important research and planning division, has had his resignation on Johnson's desk for weeks, holding the view that new faces may be desired to accompany the new set-up.

Michigan Vote Centers Upon Local Issues

Gov. Comstock Leading in His Fight for Renomination.

Detroit, Sept. 11 (AP).—Forty-five precincts out of 3,447 in today's Michigan Democratic primary gave for United States Senator: Frank A. Picard, 937; Alva M. Cummins, 421; Ray D. Schneider, 277; Claude S. Carney, 261.

Sixty precincts in the Republican gubernatorial primary gave: Frank D. Fitzgerald, 5,778; Alex J. Groesbeck, 1,492; Orla A. Bailey, 276; John W. Smith, 162.

Fifty-seven precincts in the Democratic gubernatorial primary gave: Gov. William A. Comstock, 1,351; Arthur J. Lacy, 655; John K. Stack, Jr., 308.

A voting interest contrasting sharply with the dullness of the campaign marked today's primary in Michigan to nominate candidates for Governor, Senator, Lieutenant Governor and members of Congress. Despite inclement weather early in the day, a volume of voting "about average" for a primary was reported from many of the populous sections, and election officials in various sections estimated the total vote will run close to 700,000. In the primary two years ago 1,047,117 votes were cast.

The issues in the campaign preceding today's voting were largely local, with interest centered mainly in the effort of Gov. William A. Comstock, Democratic incumbent, to win renomintaion and of Frank D. Fitzgerald, Republican secretary of state, to defeat Alex J. Groesbeck, former Governor, and John W. Smith, former Mayor of Detroit, for the Republican nomination. Comstock was opposed by Arthur J. Lacy, Detroit attorney, whose claim that he entered the race "to save Michigan for the National Administration," was sharply challenged by the Governor.

Vandenberg Unopposed.

United States Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg was unopposed for renomination, but four Democrats battled it out for the right to oppose him in the November election. They were Frank A. Picard, of Saginaw, chairman of the State liquor control commission; Alva M. Cummins, Lansing lawyer; Claude S. Carney, Democratic veteran, of Kalamazoo, and Ray D. Schneider, of Detroit.

A few hours before the voting booths closed in Detroit, election officials said that 53 per cent of the ballots taken out at the polling places were Republican, indicating, they said, that the pleas of candidates for a showing of party strength had been heeded.

All of Michigan's incumbent Representatives were among the 142 candidates seeking nominations in the 17 Congressional districts. Those unopposed were John C. Lehr, Democrat, in the Second District; Michael J. Hart, Democrat, Eighth District; Prentiss M. Brown, Democrat, Eleventh; Roy O. Woodruff, Republican, Tenth, and W. Frank James, Republican, Twelfth.

Pointe aux Barques in Michigan's thumb district completed its voting early and reported on the Republican gubernatorial nomination: Fitzgerald, 7; Groesbeck, 3; Smith, 1. For the Democratic nomination: Comstock, 5; Lacy, 2.

For the senatorial nomination, Picard received 3 votes and Schneider 2. None were cast for Carney or Cummins.

Texas Democrats Hail President as G. O. P. Flays Him

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 11 (AP).—Denunciation of President Roosevelt as well as ringing support of his Administration and policies, emanated from Texas political pow-wows today as Republicans and Democrats assembled in party conventions.

Mere mention of the President elicited roars of approval at the Democratic convention at Galveston and a chorus of boos rolled through the auditorium when a speaker referred to former President Hoover.

"We've a madman in the White House, surrounded by Socialists," C. K. McDowell, Del Rio, temporary chairman and keynoter of the G. O. P. convention, declared at a party caucus at Houston, "and it's only a matter of time until we'll lose our names and be given numbers, as they have in Russia."

Morris Sheppard and Tom Connally, senior and junior Senators, respectively, from Texas, led the Democrats in their praise of the Nation's Chief Executive.

There was harmony, from top to bottom, as the Democrats went ahead with their organization plans. Formal selection of Garner as Democratic National committeeman from Texas to succeed James E. Ferguson, for 20 years a power in political circles in the State, was a foregone conclusion.

Both parties had before them the necessity of formally approving nominees for State and National offices who will meet in the general election in November.

Vote Recount Is Seen in Maine

The lone crumb of comfort for Republicans was former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster's defeat of Representative John G. Utterback (D.) in the Third Congressional District. Brewster, who lost out to Utterback two years ago by 327 votes in an election he later contested, distanced his rival by more than 2,000.

The electorate completed its precedent-shattering day by emphatically repealing the State's 50-year-old constitutional prohibition amendment. Returns from one-half the State gave repeal a margin of more than 3 to 2, with untabulated returns from urban centers indicating that the ratio would reach 2 to 1 in the final figures.

First Arizona Returns Give Stanford Lead

Moeur Is Close Second in Democratic Race for Governor.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 11 (AP).—Gov. B. B. Moeur was hard pressed by R. C Stanford, former superior court judge, in early returns from today's Democratic primary. In eight precincts of the State's 433, Stanford was ahead, after having once relinquished the lead. The vote was Stanford, 1,196; Moeur, 99; former Gov. George W. P. Hunt, 914; James Minotto, 137.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 11 (AP).—Arizona's electorate, under smiling skies, appeared to be recording a heavy primary vote today in selecting Democratic candidates for United States Senator, Congressman at large, Governor and all State and county offices.

Republicans had no contests, and the few aspirants on that ballot were expected to withdraw later in favor of the convention method of filling the ticket.

Issues stressed were economy in government, lower taxes and "Government for the common people."

Seeking renomination, Henry F. Ashurst, United States Senator since Arizona entered the Union in 1912, stood on his record in Washington, both before and since the New Deal.

"Hungry Man" Emphasized.

His opponent stressed the "hungry man" and "common people" issues. The other contenders are Sidney P. Osborn, collector of internal revenue for Arizona; Renz L. Jennings, Maricopa County attorney; William Coxon, former secretary of the Arizona Corporation Commission and previously a candidate for the House of Representatives, and Charles H. Rutherford, Phoenix attorney.

Representative Isabella Greenway, selected in a special election last year to succeed Lewis W. Douglas, then resigning to accept the directorship of the Federal budget, seeks a full term in her own right, opposed only by Frank H. Hilgeman, Salt River Valley farm leader, whose campaign has been predicated on the "common people" motif also.

Four in Governor Race.

Governmental economy and taxation have entered strongly into the contest for the Democratic nomination for Governor. It was a four-way struggle, with former Gov. George W. P. Hunt, who seven times has sat in the chief executive's chair, in the arena once more against Dr. B. B. Moeur, Tempe physician who defeated him in the primary of 1932. James Minotto, State senator, and R. C. Stanford, former superior court judge, complete the quartet seeking the nomination.

Gov. Moeur has defended the tax innovations of his administration—privilege sales tax, income and luxury taxes—and has stressed claims of governmental economy during his two years of stewardship. Hunt has appealed to the miners and the "old guard" who made him Arizona's almost perennial Governor, and has reiterated his long-time stand in favor of a 10-cent tariff or embargo on foreign copper, to bring about "the pay roll, and not the dole."

Japanese Studying New Trade Reprisals

Tokyo, Sept. 11 (AP).—Means of effecting commercial reprisals against Italy, Germany and Portugal were being studied by Japan today.

Koki Hirota, foreign minister, instructed his subordinates to determine how, under Japan's new trade protection law, steps may be taken to meet European restrictions against Japanese goods.

Georgia Closes Primary Fight

Gov. Talmadge Is Assailed as Opposing New Deal Policies.

Atlanta, Sept. 11 (AP).—A bitter political campaign, in which charges of disloyalty to the New Deal were answered with just as vehement protestations of support of President Roosevelt, closed in Georgia tonight with interest centered in the fight between Gov. Eugene Talmadge and Judge Claude Pittman.

Ten Representatives in Congress, four of them unopposed, also were to be nominated in the Democratic primary tomorrow, which means election in Georgia. In addition, numerous Statehouse offices, 205 members in the lower House of the General Assembly and 51 State Senators were to be chosen.

Pittman has stumped the State accusing Talmadge of fighting the President at every turn, especially charging opposition to the farm program of the Administration. He also has claimed that in only one other State have relief funds been divorced from State administration and hurled charges of a "pardon racket."

Talmadge campaigned on his record, claiming the new highway board, placed in power after he ousted the old board at the point of National Guard bayonets, has effected economies of $2,000,000.

Ed A. Gilliam, Atlanta attorney and third candidate in the race, has attacked the Governor somewhat, but campaigned chiefly for repeal of the State's bone-dry prohibition laws.

Adams Chosen In Senate Race

Delaware Democrats in Convention Laud New Deal Aid.

Dover, Del., Sept. 11 (AP).—Delaware Democrats ended their warmest State convention battle in recent years tonight with nomination of Wilbur L. Adams, of Wilmington, Representative in Congress, for the United States Senate.

Adams polled 139 of the 210 convention votes, 34 more than required for nomination, after former Federal Judge Hugh H. Morris, of Wilmington, flatly refused to run.

Morris was the popular choice for the Senatorship, and after a keynote speech praising President Roosevelt was conceded the nomination if he wanted it. Adams offered to step aside for him.

The former jurist declared he could not accept the nomination because of the large corporations he represented as legal counsel.

Blease Is Defeated In South Carolina

Four years ago he lost his Senate seat to James F. Byrnes, after serving one term. In 1932, he ran against Senator E. D. Smith for the latter's place, but was defeated. He had been defeated for the Senate in 1914, and for Governor a number of times before and after his two first terms running from 1911 to 1915.

Johnston won on his second appearance as a candidate for State office. Four years ago he was runner-up to his fellow townsman, Gov. Ibra C. Blackwood. The race was close and some of Johnston partisans declared he then was rightfuly victor.

In that campaign, he emphasized his opposition to the pending $65,000,000 State highway bond issue, which as a member of the House of Representatives from Spartanburg County he had vigorously fought.

The last campaign found Johnston still turning his heavy artillery upon the highway department. He charged that its functions could be performed at a great saving to the State and with no loss in efficiency.

Sullivan Faces Bridges in N. H. Governor Race

Both Win Nominations, According to Early Primary Returns.

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 11 (AP). Early returns from the New Hampshire State-wide primaries tonight indicated that H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of Concord, and John L. Sullivan (Democrat), Manchester lawyer, would be opponents in the gubernatorial fight in the November elections.

Bridges, State public service commissioner, had a lead of more than 2 to 1 over Mayor Charles E. Carroll, five times chief executive of Laconia, for the gubernatorial nomination with returns from 104 out of 294 towns and city wards already calculated.

Sullivan, a World War veteran, was leading his two Democratic opponents—George H. Duncan, of Jaffery, and Eaton B. Sargent, of Nashua—bya good margin.

The returns were mostly from small towns and a few city wards, but heavy returns from larger centers were expected to swell the totals of the leaders.

In the Republican fight for nomination to the United States House of Representatives from the First District, Arthur B. Jenks, of Manchester, had a comfortable lead over George J. Haselton, Manchester attorney, with Oscar F. Moreau, former police commissioner of Manchester, trailing.

In the Second Congressional District United States Representative Charles W. Tobey, of Temple, seemed certain of Republican renomination, having a wide lead over his opponent, Edward D. Toland, Concord school teacher.

On the Democratic side in this fight Harry B. Metcalf, Newport newspaper publisher, was leading Joseph A. Coutremarsh, Lebanon merchant, by 2 to 1.

Long Candidates Conceded Victory

cast for members of the National House of Representatives, judges and a public service commissioner.

Quiet was expected outside of New Orleans, but warfare was anticipated in the city, where Senator Long had mobilized virtually the entire Louisiana National Guard and Mayor Walmsley had countered by swelling his police force to 1,500 by swearing in 500 extra men.

This show of arms brought them to a truce with an agreement to permit an impartial arbitration committee to conduct the election with a flying squadron of 300 men standing ready to rush to the polls to quell any disorder. But the day passed with some 4,000 armed men sitting idly by.

Bitter Fight.

In the city Long threw the entire weight of his machine behind his candidates, Representatives Paul Maloney and J. O. Fernandez, for Congress; Archibald Higgins for State Supreme Court and James O'Conner, former Congressman, for public service commissioner.

Arrayed against these were Walmsley's candidates, Herve Rachivitch and Gus Blancand for Congress, Judge Walter Gleason for supreme court and Francis Williams for public service commissioner.

Although neither of them were candidates themselves, Long and Walmsley leaped into the ring behind their tickets and fought a battle seldom equalled for bitterness and drastic measures. In this election each has sought to destroy the other politically, Long charging Walmsley has accepted graft from vice and gambling and Walmsley countering with charges of dictatorial madness on the part of Long and general rascality on the part of the Long machine.

'Boss' Pendergast Lines Up Forces To Battle G. O. P.

Jefferson City, Mo., Sept. 11 (AP).—T. J. Pendergast, Kansas City, in his new role as undisputed "boss" of Missouri's Democracy, completely dominated his party caucus here today while a stone's throw away the Republicans gave a sample of the broadside they will fire at "New Deal" policies in the November election.

James P. Aylward, from Pendergast's Kansas City stronghold, was named State Democratic chairman without a murmur of opposition. United States Senator Bennett Champ Clark, who challenged Pendergast's power in August and suffered a crushing defeat, delivered a "harmony address."

Clark, whose choice as party nominee for the other Senate seat, was defeated by Harry S. Truman, Pendergast man, said, "I pledge you that I will work as hard for Judge Truman's election as I did for my own."

At the Republican caucus, United States Senator Roscoe C. Patterson, whom Democrats entertain high hopes of unseating, charged President Roosevelt's Administration is "a Communistic scheme strewn with broken promises."

Missouri's 13 congressional seats, all now held by Democrats, also will be at stake in November.

Voters Are Hypnotized by Large Expenditures, Leaders Declare.

By Raymond Clapper.

Republican leaders abandoned any attempt to claim a victory out of the Maine election and pointed to the result, which they frankly described as a disappointment, as a warning to the country that the danger of socialism confronts it.

They charged bluntly that voters had been influenced by large Federal expenditures and that the outcome showed that the people do not fully realize what the New Deal really mans. They said that the result demonstrated the need for making a real fight to expose fallacies in the New Deal and pledged themselves to redouble their efforts to defeat it.

Democratic spokesmen, construing the result as an endorsement of the recovery program, said that with such a victory in rock-ribbed Maine, it was evident how the remainder of the country feels.

The increased Democratic vote came in face of a barrage by Nationally-known Republican speakers who warned the voters of Maine that the New Deal was carrying them toward socialism. It came also a short time after Upton Sinclair, former socialist, won the Democratic nomination for Governor in California by an unexpectedly large majority.

If these two developments mean that popular sentiment is shifting leftward, as many Republicans think, there is no admitted disposition among the minority party leadership here to give ground or bend before the wind. On the contrary the tenor of their comment on the Maine vote was that it made it necessary to fight through on the belief that the New Deal measures would be repudiated once the public was fully informe' as to their implications.

Hale Has Narrow Escape.

Washington was most surprised perhaps by the hai -breadth escape of Senator Frederick Hale, whose majority of 82,000 in 1928 was cut to 1,200 on Monday. F. Harold Dubord, the comparatively unknown Democratic opponent of this scion of Maine's famous Republican family, refused to concede the election and a contest is likely. This was an out-and-out fight over the New Deal.

The sharp gain in the majority by which Gov. Brann was reelected was hailed by the Democrats as an indication of the increased strength of the Administration. His scalp had been sought by Republican stump speakers as a rebuke to the New Deal. This Democrat, who squeezed through in 1932 by 2,300, now rolls up a majority of 33,000, the first Democratic Governor to be reelected in Maine since the Civil War.

Republicans picked up one House seat and lost one—that of the veteran anti-New Deal fighting Republican, Representative Carroll Beedy.

All this has happened in one of the six States which resisted the Roosevelt landslide in 1932 and stuck by Herbert Hoover, to whom it gave a majority of 62,000.

Spur to Republicans.

Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National committee, said:

"The vote in Maine shows the necessity of an intensification of Republican efforts. We intend to work all the harder. We are going ahead.

"It is evident that the people have not yet understood what it all means. Somebody, some time, will have to pay the bill and the people of this country soon will have to realize this.

"We intend to redouble our efforts all along the line."

Senator Hastings, Delaware, cochairman of Republican Senatorial-Congressional Committee, said:

"I was in Maine and I saw what the Republicans were up against, and while I had hoped for better results, I think, taking everything into consideration, the Republicans of Maine are to be congratulated.

"Gov. Brann, during the campaign, boasted that he had gotten from the Federal Treasury the huge sum of 108,000,000 for the State of Maine. He insisted that the voters of Maine should show their appreciation by voting the Democratic ticket. I did not believe the voters of the Pine Tree State could be influenced with money, directly or indirectly, but a majority evidently felt the Governor had made a bargain for them and they must carry it out.

Calls Future Uncertain.

"The New Deal policies are thus being forced upon a distressed people. The future is so uncertain that people apparently have a feeling that they better get what they can now. There seems to be but little concern for the future. Unless the American people can be made to see the dangers that confront them, socialism, with all of its fallacies, is upon us; the Federal Constitution and American principles will soon be a thing of the past and we shall lose in a few short years our great heritage as well as all we have gained in 150 years."

Representative Chester C. Bolton, cochairman of the senatorial-congressional committee, as reported by the Associated Press from Chicago, called the Democratic victories in Maine a "real warning to the people of this country."

"Unless the people realize that the billions of dollars distributed supposedly for relief apparently can be used to influence votes, the country is headed for disaster," Representative Bolton said.

"The results of the Maine election are disappointing, especially the defeat of Congressman Carroll L. Beedy, which I consider a National calamity, but we do not propose to let this interfere with our activities.

"The issue is put up squarely as to whether we continue as a democracy or are to become a socialistic Nation."

Farley Cites Figures.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said:

"What happened in Maine, and the interpretation thereof, may I think be best interpreted not by us but by the Republicans. I noted in yesterday's New York Herald-Tribune, pre-eminently the journalistic spokesman for the G. O. P., this declaration: that Maine 'is prepared to elect a Governor, a United States Senator and three Representatives after a campaign in which the New Deal was the dominant issue.' The same forecast stated that 'Brann's re-election would be construed as approval of the New Deal.' The last figures I have seen showed Brann's re-election as Governor of Maine by 33,000. When he ran last time the Democratic Governor's plurality was only 2,358. Brann's vote yesterday was 164,000 with some territory yet to hear from.

"As to Congressman Moran, he was attacked by the Republicans almost entirely because of his record in supporting President Roosevelt's policy, and Main expressed her opinion on this subject by re-electing him by a fine majority. In the First District which has always been Republican, Mr. Beedy, the G. O. P. nominee for Congress, exceeded all the others in his assault on the New Deal which Democratic Candidate Hamlin vigorously espoused, and even there the anti-New Dealer went down to defeat.

"As to the Senatorship, it will be recalled that Mr. Hale was elected for the third time to the U. S. Senate in 1928, on which occasion his majority was over 82,000. The last figures I have seen of yesterday's election show Hale and Dubord, his Democratic competitor, running neck and neck, with fewer than 1,000 votes between them. And the situation is not dissimilar in the Third Congressional District, where Utterback, the Democrat, and Brewster, the Republican, are close together so far as the count has proceeded.

Washington Post Quoted.

"Now we may naturally expect that our Republican friends will take the occasion to tell you that the old saw "As Maine goes so goes the Nation" is anything but a reliable barometer. In that connection let me quote another Republican newspaper, The Washington Post—which, incidentally, anticipated a Republican victory—which had this to say editorially just before the election: 'While the old adage may not always be truthful, as a political seismograph, the voting in Maine is worth most of the analysis which it received.' In another portion of this same editorial, it stated that from the Maine returns 'one may perhaps be able to forecast the National trend fairly accurately.'

"Two years ago 128,000 Democrats in Maine voted for the New Deal as represented by Franklin D. Roosevelt. Compare that figure with the vote of Gov. Brann and I think we have a fair presentation of the regard in which the State holds the President's recovery program. We lost the State in 1932, we won it in 1934 by a majority that indicates a turnover of about 70,000 votes. If the Roosevelt policies have met with such approval in rockribbed Republican Maine, it needs no lightning calculator to figure how the rest of the country feels about it."

unusual and intricate second-choice system used in Maryland when more than two candidates seek the same nomination for a State-wide office.

In three of the State's six Congressional districts there are sharp fights among the Democratic incumbents and others aspiring to hold their seats. Representative Vincent L. Palmisano, of the Third District, may be defeated by John M. Pohlhaus, while Representatives William P. Cole and Ambrose J. Kennedy, in the Second and Fourth Districts, respectively, have been hard pressed by opponents.

In addition to the State-wide and Congressional contests, approximately 1,500 Democratic and Republican candidates will face the voters tomorrow in contests for judgeships, local offices and membership on party committees. In Baltimore alone there are about 500 candidates seeking office for some kind. None could recall when so many candidates had been in the field.

This plethora of candidates throughout the State is expected to bring out the voters. Thus the balloting may be heavier than is usual in a State-wide primary fight which has been colorless and without spirit. Only the Republican fight over the party's gubernatorial nomination has caused a ripple throughout the State.

The Roosevelt "New Deal" is not an issue in tomorrow's election. Although a conservative Democrat, Gov. Ritchie, in the few speeches he has made since the campaign started, has praised the President's efforts to cope with the economic depression and has declared it was unthinkable to go back to the "old deal."

Dr. Charles H. Conley, Frederick physician, who is opposing Gov. Ritchie for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, has not referred to the Federal Administration in his speeches, contenting himself with attacks on Gov. Ritchie's 15-year-old administration and on the "Ritchie machine."

Conley Given Four Counties.

Except in a few counties where there are anti-Ritchie factions, Dr. Conley has been handicapped by the lack of organizations to carry on his fight. Although he may poll a substantial vote, it is generally held he will not carry more than four counties. Gov. Ritchie expected to carry easily each of the six legislative districts in Baltimore.

The Conley strength is chiefly in his home county of Frederick and on the lower Eastern Shore, where Gov. Ritchie always has been unpopular. The hostility in the latter section is somewhat more intense this year, due to resentment against Mr. Ritchie's efforts to punish lynchers at Princess Anne, in Somerset County.

This is only the second time that Gov. Ritchie has been forced to face a primary fight for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He was challenged in 1926 by William Milnes Maloy, but defeated him by a popular vote of 106,854 to 25,277. Mr. Maloy, now challenging Mr. Radcliffe's right to the Democratic Senatorial nomination, did not receive a single vote in the nominating convention that year.

Maloy Eleventh Hour Entry.

"Pat" Maloy, as he is known throughout Maryland, entered the Senatorial race at the eleventh hour at a time when there was some important dissatisfaction among Baltimore Democrats over Mr. Radcliffe's candidacy. This dissatisfaction has since largely disappeared. Mr. Radcliffe, sponsored by Senator Millard E. Tydings, first declared his candidacy for the gubernatorial nomniation, but after a few weeks shifted to the Senatorial race.

Athough there is no sign of enthusiasm among Democrats over Mr. Radcliffe—his name has seldom been mentioned in the campaign—he is expected to win easily. It is possible he will receive a majority in every voting unit, thus giving him all the votes in the State convention.

The Republican nomination for Governor appears to lie between Harry W. Nice, Baltimore lawyer, who was defeated for Governor by Mr. Ritchie in 1919 by 167 votes, and Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, who was Governor of the State from 1912 to 1916. Known as the Republicans' "miracle man," Senator Goldsborough has never been defeated in 40 years of running for office.

H. Webster Smith, former chairman of the Baltimore Public Improvement Commission, is the third Republican candidate for Governor. Even with the intricate second choice system, which may cause a freakish result, Mr. Smith is not regarded as in the running.

Edge Is Given Nice.

On the basis of organization support, Mr. Nice is given an edge on the nomination. There are two unknown quantities, however, in this fight. The first is the amount of money each of the candidates will use and how effectively it is used. Mr. Smith is a wealthy man and Senator Goldsborough is reputed to have a heavy campaign chest supplied by his close friend, Jacob France, Baltimore lawyer, and a group of Baltimore bankers. It is reported that Mr. Nice, whose cardinal issue has been maladministration of banks, has had a difficult time getting funds.

Mr. Smith is a novice in politics and he is not aligned with many experienced politicians. Senator Goldsborough, on the other hand, is a veteran political strategist and knows his way around in the Maryland Republican party better than any other man.

The second unknown quantity is to extent to which the dry, church-going rural Republicans, who regard Senator Goldsborough as an idol, will spontaneously appear at the polls tomorrow. In many counties where Mr. Nice has the support of the party organization, Senator Goldsborough's personal following may give the county to him, if they vote. Senator Goldsborough has little strength in Baltimore, and to win must have county votes.

Over and above these two factors is the intricate second-choice system that will be followed. In Maryland nominations for Governor and Senator are made by convention vote, the popular vote being used only to bind convention delegates from each county and legislative district. It requires 75 votes in the convention to be nominated.

France and Smith Aligned.

The Republican Senatorial fight is between Dr. Joseph I. France, who was one of the first members of the Senate to espouse the cause of Soviet Russian recognition and in 1932 was thrown out of the Republican National convention when he attempted to put Calvin Coolidge's name in nomination; John Philip Hill, former wet leader in the House and C. Wilbur Miller, formerly president of the Davison Chemical Co.

Dr. France is aligned with Mr. Smith, and Mr. Miller with Mr. Nice. Mr. Hill is running as a lone wolf, although he has indorsed Senator Goldsborough's candidacy. The latter has said nothing about the Hill candidacy. The second-choice system makes this contest anyone's race, although many think Dr. France will be the victor. The Senatorial fight was completely overshadowed by the gubernatorial campaign.

Voting Is Heavy In Washington State's Election

Contest Over Democratic Senatorial Nomination Centers Interest

Seattle, Sept. 11 (AP).—A sensational campaign battle between Lewis Schwellenback, Seattle attorney, and John C. Stevenson, King (Seattle) County commissioner, for the Democratic senatorial nomination and less strenuous contests involving a host of other aspirants for office brought out a heavy vote in the Washington primary today.

The New Deal, the claims of various Democrats to friendship with Senator Homer T. Bone, foe of the "power trust," and the appearance of a variety of politico-social movements were factors in the primary balloting.

Election officials said the call for Democratic ballots was "rather heavy."

About 618,000 voters were registered and the polls were open for 12 hours, ending at 8 p. m. (Pacific standard time).

Records Assailed.

Schwellenbach and Stevenson, contesting for the Senate seat from which Senator C. C. Dill, Democrat, is retiring, assailed each other's political record and each claimed to be supporter of Senator Bone, who is not up for election this year.

Schwellenbach also claimed the support of a club called the "Commonwealth Builders," which has for its slogan, "End poverty in Washington." The club boasts of a membership of several thousand and its principles are similar to the "end poverty" platform of Upton Sinclair.

Other Democratic senatorial candidates were Superior Judge Charles Leavy, of Spokane, indorsed by Dill; Harry Deegan, Shelton dentist and stock breeder; James W. Williams, Spokane real estate man, and John C. Peterson, Seattle sign painter.

Republican candidates for senator attacked the New Deal with varying intensity. They are Ralph A. Horr, Seattle, former representative; Reno Odlin, Olympia banker; D. V. Morthland, of Yakima; Frank Goodwin, Seattle business executive, who contended "there are too many lawyers in Congress now," and Frank Jeffrey, Seattle attorney.

Six Seek Renomination.

The States six representatives in Congress, all Democrats, sought renomination. The veteran Sam B. Hill, of Waterville, had no Democratic opposition in the Fifth District, but the other five had to fight hard, particularly Representatives Mon C. Wallgreen, of Everett; Wesley Lloyd, of Tacoma, and Martin F. Smith, of Hoquiam. The others are Knute Hill, of Prosser, and Marian A. Zioncheck, of Seattle.

The new order of Cincinnatus, a movement of young men to "purify" politics, held several nominating conventions, with the Kings County meeting slating William J. Wilkins and Cecil R. Fuller, both of Seattle, as candidates for State Senator and Representative from the First District, respectively.

The Antisaloon League of Washington entered politics again to the extent of questioning candidates for the State Legislature with the idea of preparing for amendments to the Steele State liquor law, and other groups with fingers in the election were the Technocratic Clubs, Christion Socialists and Commonwealth Builders.

Woman Rival Trails Colorado Governor

Denver, Colo., Sept. 11 (AP).—Gov. Edwin C. Johnson led Miss Josephine Roche by nine votes an hour after the polls had closed tonight.

Forty-seven precincts of 1,549 in the State gave Johnson 2,368 votes for the Democratic nomination for Governor and Miss Roche 2,359.

It's true, there are little things about the Commodore that maybe men don't notice—but women always do—the clever position of a bed light—the full length mirrors—the studied placing of the dresser mirror—the abundance of big, fluffy towels—the deft maid service—the shining cleanliness of everything—and the smiling greetings of the staff.

Air Mail Firm Takes Contract To High Court

Challenges Cancellation of During Investigation by Senate.

(United Press.)

Cancellation of air mail contracts by Transcontinental and Western by Postmaster General James A. Farley during the Senate investigation last February was challenged before the Supreme Court yesterday Air, Inc., one of the principal companies to suffer from the order.

No court action can be had on the case until the court begins its term October 1. The court, soon after that date, will announce whether it will review the case.

The Transcontinental suit was instituted soon after the contracts were canceled. It was heard in the New York City Federal courts and dismissed. The Second Circuit Court of Appeals later upheld the dismissal, but on different grounds.

Other Actions Started.

Other actions have since been started in other courts challenging Farley's authority to cancel the contracts and the court's decision in the Transcontinental case may have a bearing on them.

The company's brief says that the contract under which it operated its transcontinental service was entered three years after the famous "spoils conference," at which air mail operators allegedly divided up the territory which they would serve. The canceled contract was in the form of a route certificate issued in 1933 and replacing a contract originally made in October, 1930.

The value of $5,000,000 was placed on the company's investment at the time of the cancellation, together with a "good will" and "going" value of additional but unestimated millions. The company claimed also to have contracted for $3,000,000 of additional equipment.

"Issues of transcendent importance emerge from this controversy," the company's brief said.

Wants Limits Set.

"As the functions of government multiply and its relations with citizens grow increasingly intimate, this court is imperatively called upon to mark out the limits of official authority and curb its abuse. The Postoffice, though a tradtionally Government service, is now only typical of a host of public enterprises with which the citizen senses daily impact.

"He has a right to know where he stands in his dealings with that Government—whether he is helpless as solemn agreements are brushed aside by an impatient official, or whether a court of equity will stay the spoliative hand.

"Unless this is rendered intelligible, prudent men will shrink from dealing with their Government to the impairment and undermining of the public service."

Child Dead, Two Winning Battle Against Poison

Lawrenceburg, Tenn., Sept. 11 (AP). Their bodies turned yellow by a powerful poison that already has cost the life of one of their playmates, two children in the Lawrenceburg Sanitarium today appeared to be fighting a winning battle against death.

They are Hubert Dyer, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dyer, and Margaret Gowen, 10, daughter of Mrs. Rufus Gowen. The Gowen's 8-year-old son, Eric, died Friday night of the effect of eating a poison insecticide powder spread on pieces of apple.

The latest of a series of blood transfusions administered Hubert shortly before noon today appeared, doctors said, to enable Hubert to struggle back from the brink of death. The girl's condition also was announced as "improved."

Pershing to Mark 74th Anniversary

To Spend Tomorrow Amid World War Scenes.

(Associated Press.)

Gen. John J. Pershing, most striking of modern American military figures, will mark his seventy-fourth birthday anniversary tomorrow amid scenes reminiscent of the fanfare and sadness of the World War.

The man who was "General of the Armies of the United States" is now in Paris, carrying on his duties as chairman of the American Battle Monuments Commission.

No public celebrations of his birthday are held and, aside from a quiet dinner with friends in his favorite Paris cafe, the general observes the occasion without other ceremony.

He expects to return to Washington for a short time in late October, and may then go to Arizona, where he passed his first years as a young lieutenant of Cavalry, to spend the winter.

Sligo Park Hills Group To Name Committees

Defense Motion Is Denied in Alleged Attempt to Intimidate Juror.

Richmond, Sept. 11 (AP).—Hustings Judge John L. Ingram today refused a motion to open an investigation of threats a juror in the murder trial of Robert Mais said he received.

The motion was entered by M. Haley Shelton, associated in the defense of Mais. He asked that the court make a formal investigation of the story told by W. H. Kelly, jr., juror, who said a man "with some sort of a black hood over his head" handed and then took from him a note which threatened the Kelly family with "destruction" if Mais was sent to the chair.

Kelly, admittedly, was the lone juror who held out for a less severe punishment after the jury had united in affirming Mais' guilt of the murder of E. M. Huband in a holdup here last April. After a four-hour deadlock, Kelly agreed to the death verdict.

Supporting his motion, Haley offered an affidavit from Kelly in which the juror set forth the details of the threat he says he received. The attorney asked the court to determine whether Kelly's emotional condition was such that he could reach an impartial verdict.

Commonwealth's Attorney T. Gray Haddon, who prosecuted the case, argued against the motion, saying that the effect of the threat, if any, would have been prejudicial to the State, not to Mais.

6 Colored Men, Woman Beaten

Race Organizer Assailed After 4 Are Fined.

Steele, Mo., Sept. 11 (AP).—Seven St. Louis colored persons, one a woman, were beaten here today by a mob following the conviction of four of the number for "unlawfully organizing the colored race."

Four of the victims, Robert Thomas, Sam Sawyer, Dave Johnson and Ella Brown, alleged organizers for the "Africo-Pacific Movement of the East," each were fined $1,000 and sentenced to a year in jail by Justice of the Peace Max Kelley.

Immediately following the conviction the white audience in the courtroom rushed the defendants and their attorney and his two companions. Officers were thrust aside and fists and blackjacks were used on the prisoners. The crowd dispersed quickly and no arrests were made.

Search for Labatt Kidnapers Pressed

Toronto, Sept. 11 (AP).—Canadian and United States authorities this evening were hard on the trail of two men suspected of participation in the kidnaping last month of John S. Labatt, wealthy London (Ontario) brewer.

The men named as suspects in the case are Albert Pegran, identified by Detroit authorities as a former bootlegger and rum runner, and David Meisner, a Canadian said to be known to authorities on both sides of the border.

Nice and Goldsborough Broadcast Appeals to Maryland's Voters

Investigation Of State's Bank Laws Is Asked

Nice Pledges Safeguards for Depositors if Elected Governor.

By A. M. Wright.

Baltimore, Sept. 11.—Two of the three candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor of Maryland addressed the voters of the State by radio tonight, on the eve of the primary election tomorrow. The speakers were Harry W. Nice and Phillips Lee Goldsborough.

Mr. Nice, who spoke first, stressed the need of an investigation of the Maryland banking laws, and promised that if he is elected he will see to it that statutes for the protection of depositors are enacted.

"I feel there should be a vigorous investigation of the banking situation in Maryland," he said. "We must fix the responsibility for the recent losses to the Maryland depositors, and we must see to it that the laws of the State will prevent a situation from ever arising again that will take from the old people in the evening of life, or from any depositors, the money that they had entrusted to the banks in our State."

He pointed out that Gov. Ritchie, in his radio speech last night, failed to refer to the banking situation in Maryland, and he expressed surprise that the State's chief executive had not at least touched on the situation of the last two or three years.

Tax Cut Is Promised.

Mr. Nice pointed out that he has no connection with any bank in Maryland except as "a victimized depositor."

At the beginning of his speech, he promised to support any candidate whom Republicans nominate for Governor, but he added that he is certain of being the next Governor of Maryland.

"We wage war not against the Democrats," he said, "but against the Democratic machine."

He touched briefly upon tax rates, and promised to cut it to the lowest point possible. He promised to buy Maryland coal for consumption in Maryland institutions, and promised to "spend Maryland money among the taxpayers of Maryland."

Discussing the automobile license costs he declared that at the time the Annapolis bridge was built, a promise was made by the Ritchie administration to reduce the cost of tags to the autoists. This was never done and the motorist now continues to pay almost half the cost of the State administration, he declared. He promised to reduce the auto tax to as close to $2 a year as possible.

Backs Old Age Pension.

He promised also to reduce the cost of administering the motor vehicle bureau.

He said his platform includes report for old age pensions, pensions for widows and orphans, and fair treatment for veterans, school teachers, firemen, policemen and other civil employes. He said he favored restoration of local self-government to the counties in Maryland, and supported the right of women to hold public office.

He gave a brief autobiography, saying he was born in Washington, has lived in Maryland most of his life, and that his father was a preacher, who had been assigned for many years in Worcester County, Md. His wife, he said, was from Virginia, but her family had been settled in Somerset County, Md., for many years.

Goldsborough Cites Record.

Senator Goldsborough, in his speech a half-hour later, predicted the renomination of Gov. Ritchie by the Democrats. The Senator cited his own record as Governor of Maryland from 1912 to 1916 and read laudatory editorials published by Baltimore newspapers when he retired from office.

He pointed out that the State roads commission was operated during his administration without the scandals that occurred during the Ritchie regime and declared the State as a whole had been administered by him at approximately one-third of the cost of today.

500 More Pupils For Montgomery

School Plan to Use All Available Space.

With a prospective increase of 500 in the school enrollment, Montgomery County officials yesterday were making plans to utilize all available space in the schoolhouses when school opens today. It is expected that the enrollment will exceed 12,000. The average increase is about 200 or 300 a year.

The students will not be forced to resort to staggered hours, according to Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of county schools. Auditoriums and other special classrooms will be utilized for regular classes.

The two suburban high schools, Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Takoma-Silver Spring, are expected to be hardest hit by overcrowding, but this condition will be alleviated when the new Eastern Suburban High at Silver Spring and the Western Suburban High at Bethesda are completed.

Woodside Play Cast To Be Chosen Tonight

Members of the cast of the three-act play, "Green Stockings," to be presented by the Woodside (Md.) Dramatic Club, will be chosen tonight by Maxine Mitchell, new director of the club.

The play, a comedy by A. E. W. Mason, will be presented by the local players October 17 and 18. Mrs. Walter Crossan is president of the club.

Four Candidates for Governor

Better Lights To Be Sought By Clarendon

County Board Will Be Urged to Improve on Wilson Boulevard.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

With the opening of Arlington Hall, junior college for girls, on September 20, Miss Carrie Sutherlin, president, announces there will be three new members on the faculty.

E. B. Wilcox, of Falls Church, a graduate of Harvard, will inaugurate a new course in Bible study. Lyle Webster, of Washington, a graduate of North Dakota and Columbia Universities, will give the journalism course, and Elizabeth Cook, of Fall River, Mass., a graduate of Wheaton and Radcliffe Colleges, will replace Elizabeth Harris on the English instruction staff.

Miss Sutherlin says Arlington Hall will have a considerably larger enrollment due to the number of girls living in Arlington County who will enter as day students.

Need of more adequate street lights in Arlington County, especially along Wilson boulevard through the business section, will be the principal topic of discussion at the meeting of the Clarendon Business Men's Association to be held tomorrow night in the Clever Building at Clarendon.

President George M. Yeatman stated that the association for the past two months has been making a study of the lighting situation with special reference to Clarendon. A special committee will appear before the county board Friday and request lighting through the business section of Clarendon be improved.

Attention is called to motorists traveling along the Wilson boulevard in direction of Rosslyn that care must be exercised in complying with traffic laws by stopping at the intersection of the Military road. A recent traffic check made by the county to determine the most suitable traffic light to install at that point reveals that a majority of cars failed to recognize the stop sign.

County Manager Roy S. Braden states that the county board Friday will consider the installation of a traffic light.

Plans for the year's activities will be discussed at a special meeting of the executive committee of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Robert E. Lee School at a meeting to be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. in the school auditorium.

The Arlington Kiwanis Club will hold its weekly luncheon meeting today at 12:30 p. m. at Windsor Tavern, on Glebe road.

Plans are being completed for a reception to the teachers of the James Monroe School at Aurora Heights to follow the first meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association to be held next Monday in the school auditorium. The business meeting will be held at 8 p. m.

Richmond Park Group Plans Meeting Tonight

The Richmond Park Citizens Association will hold its first fall meeting at 8 p. m. today in Curtis Hall, 3510 Quebec street northwest.

A Georgia chain gang fugitive was sentenced to serve two years in jail when arraigned before Police Court Judge Gus A. Schuldt on robbery charges yesterday.

Registrations By Democrats Up in Suburbs

Preprimary Figures in Montgomery 25 to 1 Against G. O. P.

Democrats rolled up a huge majority in the preprimary registration for new voters in Montgomery County, Md., yesterday. The Democrats gained at least a majority of the new registration in each of the 32 precincts in the county. In several precincts the majority ran as high as 25 to 1, and in one Silver Spring precinct the Democrats registered 54 against a lone Republican.

In the eastern suburban section of the county the registration of new voters resulted in 1,157 Democrats and 101 Republicans being placed on the books, a majority for the area of 11 to 1.

The closest precinct in the county was the Darnestown district in the upper county where the Democrats registered 58 against 33 Republicans.

Democratic leaders in Takoma Park were elated over the showing of their party in that Republican stronghold. The total registration for the town was 233 Democrats and 40 Republicans.

The total new registration for the entire county amounted to 3,045, of which 2,630 were Democrats and 368 Republicans. New registrants declining to state a party affiliation totaled 47.

The heavy Democratic gain coming on the eve of the State primary election which will be held today greatly encouraged Democratic organization leaders in the county who are predicting an overwhelming victory for Gov. Ritchie in the voting.

Prince Georges Registrations Add Hundreds

Leaders of Both Parties Expect Heavy Vote in Primary Today.

Hundreds of Prince Georges County residents made last-minute registrations yesterday in preparation for the Maryland primaries today.

Both Republican and Democratic leaders forecast one of the heaviest votes to be recorded at a State primary. Most county officers, it has been conceded, will be hotly contested.

Friction concerning election officials broke out in Mount Rainier when local officials questioned the legality of John Deuver, town councilman, serving as clerk of elections.

Byrd Dolby, corporation counsel for Mount Rainier, pointed out that the State constitution forbids an office holder to act as an election official. There is a possibility that certain votes might be thrown out if the point is not straightened out before the polls open today, he said.

Lead for Bowie Disputed.

Dr. Thomas E. Latimer, chairman of the Republican State central committee, however, declared he did not think the fact that Mr. Deuver was a councilman would have any effect.

Late yesterday certain Democratic leaders who have been campaigning for reelection of State's Attorney Alan Bowie declared they were positive Mr. Bowie had a lead on his opponent, Robert W. McCullough, in the metropolitan area.

However, supporters of Mr. McCullough said a last-minute checkup of the lower county, reputedly the Bowie stronghold, showed it leaning strongly for McCullough.

They included in this territory the little village of Brandywine, home of the present State's attorney. They also named the Aquasco and Nottingham districts, and virtually the entire southern portion of the county.

Political developments yesterday also included the admission by certain of the Democrats that they were apparently "at sea" for the loss of a leader to take the place of J. Enos Ray, chairman of the State central committee, who died Monday.

Among those who have been named as a probable successor are Hampton Magruder, of Upper Marlboro; State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Upper Marlboro, and T. Howard Duckett, of Hyattsville.

Senator Sasscer is running for reelection but is unopposed in the primaries. His elevation as county leader would probably mean his election as president of the Senate if he is returned to the Maryland Legislature, it is believed.

For county commissioner there will be James B. Berry, Joseph H. Blanford, Perry Boswell, Vinton Duvall Cockey, Harry W. McNamee and George Clagett Sellner. Five will be selected.

For judge of the orphans' court there will be John H. Beall, Benson P. McDaniel, Philip G. Miller and Millard Thorne. Three will be selected.

The Republican Ticket.

The Republican ticket will carry, for sheriff, J. Bernard Beall and Joseph V. Wyvill, jr. For county commissioners, Robert A. Bennett, John M. Bowie, William A. Duvall, Elroy A. Gasch, J. Bryant Morrison, Herbert E. Rawlings.

In the Republican race for State's attorney, George T. D. Burroughs, one of the youngest members of the county bar, will oppose J. Frank Parran, United States Commissioner and former State's attorney.

For the Republican State central committee are Milton A. Botts, George N. Bowen, A. E. Burgess, Charles A. Greenleaf, William J. Griffith, Ernest E. Henson, J. Oliver Hill, Dr. Thomas E. Latimer, John M. Littlepage, Harry E. Nicholson, Howard Proctor, W. Eugene Pyles, Mathias A. Simmons, and Frank Small, jr. Seven will be selected.

For delegates to the State convention: James E. Brooks, James P. Curley, Walter R. Davis, Francis Fletcher, John E. Harrison, Harold W. Orcutt, Robert H. Palmer, J. Wilson Ryon, Martha May Severe, and Howard W. Spicknall. Seven will be selected.

Spicer Favors County Unions For Home Rule

Mergers Would Prevent State Encroachment on Local Government.

In a Nation-wide radio talk here last night, Dr. George W. Spicer, professor of political science at the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, and chairman of the Virginia commission on county government, urged a New Deal in county home rule as a means of preserving local democratic government from further inroads of State control.

Speaking on a program of addresses on "The New Deal and Local Government" sponsored by the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education in cooperation with the American Political Science Association, Dr. Spicer declared that "county government in the United States is now at the crossroads. There is in many quarters an unmistakable trend toward State centralization," he said.

"This trend will continue unless the county is made more efficient. The people of the counties have reached the point where they must choose the way of further and complete State centralization and the way of efficient and responsible home rule."

Pointing out the increasing concern manifested in county government thoughout the country, Dr. Spicer said "the past two years have witnessed the greatest progress ever made in any equivalent period in our history. In a number of States important surveys of county government have been made; in a smaller number progressive county government legislation has been enacted, and in two, Virginia and California, actual local reorganizations have taken place."

Describing methods by which State Legislatures may provide counties with the means of revising traditional forms of government, Dr. Spicer asserted that the best examples of home rule to be found in the United States are the county executive or county manager plans now in operation in Arlington, Albemarle and Henrico Counties in Virginia, and in San Mateo and Sacramento Counties in California.

Dr. Spicer declared that the past failure of county government was not to be considered the failure of home rule, but rather the failure of a system of government devoid of an intelligent and practical application of the home rule principle.

"The county affords the only practical school of citizenship for the mass of our rural citizens, and it can not be destroyed without affecting the quality of our citizenship and ultimately the quality of State government itself. It is believed that the acceptance of State centralization goes a long way toward the rejection of democracy.

"It appears plain, however, that local self-government in the traditional sense can not be preserved. Many counties must be merged, with a view to securing a county of sufficient area, population and taxable wealth to support adequately the service demanded by modern community life."

Heavy Voting Predicted for Anne Arundel

Electorate Aroused by Hot Contests in Both Major Parties.

(Post Staff Writer).

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 11.—Political leaders today were putting the finishing touches to the primary election campaign in Anne Arundel County, including the registration of new voters. With the electorate being aroused to a high pitch by contests in both major parties, a record vote is expected to be polled tomorrow.

Fights for local nominations in both parties overshadow the State-wide contests. Greater interest centers in the outcome of the Democratic vote, because of the larger number of contests. Unlike former campaigns, it is not a question of one faction arrayed against another, but a combination of other angles, so that the county is living up to its age-old reputation of being one of the greatest hotbeds of politics in the State.

Leaders of the regular Democratic organization forces, dominated by former Sheriff Frank S. Revell, now Federal immigration commissioner, are claiming success for their entire ticket. The so-called "Progressive" faction that waged many unsuccessful battles appears to have passed out of existence, but stout opposition cropped up from a combination of these forces and other dissatisfied organization men.

New League Makes Entry.

Moreover, the electorate has been aroused to a marked extent by a campaign waged by a nonpartisan organization known as the Better Government League, the primary motive of which is curtailment of governmental expenses. Some of the candidates of the "Antis" are men who were elected to office in recent years with organization support. The league has indorsed a few of the candidates and went a step further by selecting a group of ten others whose names will appear on the ballots in the general election in November, through petition.

One unusual feature of the primaries is that none of the six Democratic county commissioners is a candidate to succeed himself, although one, Lewis F. Kelly, Fourth District, is seeking the nomination for register of wills. This is ascribed to the cloud that shadowed the group nearly a year ago when they were indicted by the grand jury on charges of misfeasance. They were subsequently acquitted, however.

Probably the hottest Democratic fight will center around the nomination for sheriff, for which there are four candidates. The organization forces have thrown their full strength back of Steven J. Everd, Fifth District, close friend of Frank Revell. Everd is a police magistrate at Green Haven. Against him are such men as Michael F. Carter, Second District, elected to the office 8 years ago on an organization ticket; George E. Frank, of Annapolis, and George T. Murray, Fourth District. All have been waging energetic personal contact campaigns.

Equally as much interest will be attracted by the State Senatorship contest between the incumbent, Ridgely P. Melvin, Annapolis lawyer, but resident of the Second District, and William F. Stromeyer, of Annapolis, making his first bid in the political arena. Many of the electorate appear to be rallying to the Stromeyer cause. Opponents of the Senator claim his stand on the liquor question, that is, opposing open saloons for Annapolis, and legislation exempting the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Electric Railroad from taxation, will cost him many votes. Eight years ago Melvin waged an unsuccessful independent primary fight against the organization, only to fall in with that group, and four years later was swept into office with its support.

Former Senator George T. Cromwell, Fifth District, who defeated Melvin in the election referred to, is the organization candidate for clerk of the circuit court, a post generally conceded to carry party leadership. His opponent is James A. Walton, of Annapolis, until recently president of the Annapolis Banking & Trust Co., a former president of the county commissioners, and originally an organization follower. Cromwell is regarded as Revell's chief lieutenant. He is now holding the office of register of wills.

For county treasurer, C. Albert Hodges, Annapolis, veteran in the office, again has organization backing. He is opposed by John H. Hopkins 3d, First District.

The outcome of the fight for the associate judgeship nomination in the Fifth Circuit also will be awaited with interest. Judge Nicholas H. Green, of Annapolis, appointed by Gov. Richite less than two years ago, is seeking the full term of 15 years, with organization support. His opponent is Eugene P. Childs, Second District, whose candidacy is said to have appealed to a large element. Reports of cutting Green were current today.

Close Contest Expected.

Probably one of the closest contests will be waged for register of wills, for which W. Meade Holladay, Annapolis, former president of the State Capital Bank, and former member of the Legislature, is the candidate of the "antis" against Lewis Kelly, incumbent county commissioner.

Aside from these major county-wide battles, warm contests will be waged for three of the seven county commissionership nominations, the district voting by units. These fights are confined to Annapolis, which comprises the Sixth District, and the Second and Third Districts.

For the House of Delegates in the State Assembly, there is only one independent candidate, Irving F. Turner. Six are to be nominated and the organization slate is Philip Miller, incumbent; R. Chester Cromwell, Wilbur R. Dulin, William H. Labrot, George E. Mason and Albert W. Woodfield.

There is no Democratic contest for State's attorney or judges of the orphans' court.

As to the State-wide candidates, the county seems easily safe for Gov. Ritchie and his associates.

The Republicans have only one strictly local contest, aside from central committee membership. That is a four-way fight for sheriff.

Enemy Troops Storm Bolivian Chaco Bulwark

Report Capture of Two Principal Defenses of Fort Ballivian.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 11 (AP).—Paraguay tonight was reported hammering hard at the sturdy defenses of Fort Ballivian, Bolivia's main bulwark of her claims in the Chaco Boreal.

Paying little heed to Bolivian claims, greeted with exuberant manifestations in La Paz, that the enemy had been routed in the Carandayty sector, the Asuncion war ministry announced the capture of two of Ballivian's principal defenses as the major drive at that stronghold opened.

The Paraguayan communique asserted Bolivians suffered heavily in the action, and said many Bolivian prisoners were taken. At the "Quijarro No. 2" post of the Bahia Negra sector, Asuncion declared, Bilivians were forced backward, losing munitions and important water tanks.

Fort Ballivian, on the Pilcomayo River, has been the scene of five major Paraguayan offensives since January, which were climaxed in the fruitless drive of May, June and July, in which the Paraguayans suffered heavy casualties.

Observers here pointed out that the Asuncion communique failed to give the number of the defense lines remaining between the advancing Paraguayans and the fort. These are known to be numerous and elaborately prepared.

The impression grew in neutral circles, therefore, that the fighting about Ballivian, as well as the conflict in the Carandayty sector, was approaching a deadlock.

Valley Project Head Is Named

Evacuation of Families From Shenandoah Park to Be Rushed.

(Associated Press.)

Appointment of Frank Hanrahan, former city manager of Portsmouth, Va., as manager of the subsistence homestead project to care for 340 families now in the Shenandoah National Park was announced yesterday at a conference of Federal and Virginia officials.

Mr. Hanrahan will have complete supervision of the projects which are to be carried out by the Federal Subsistence Homestead Corporation with the cooperation of Federal and State relief administrations.

Officials of the subsistence division said the conference was for the purpose of speeding up the evacuation of the families from the park and their rehabilitation in nearby foothills.

They said that options had been obtained on two sites proposed for the homestead unit and that others were under consideration. As soon as the land is acquired, they said, the project will go forward rapidly. Rough drafts of the homes and outbuildings to be erected already are in hand and actual construction of the modest, but substantial rural residences can be completed within a short time after they are started.

Two hundred of the families are to be provided for with a $310,000 fund earmarked by the homestead division and the remaining 140 families with $150,000 allotted by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration to the Virginia relief administration. The officials of the Government and State agreed on a program of cooperation for carrying out the work.

No indication was given after the conference as to when the project actually would get under way, officials explaining that the time required for acquiring the land was indefinite. They said that after the land is decided upon title to it must be examined and approved by the Justice Department before work could begin.

Prices Slashed In Milk War

Charlottesville Producers Are Selling Product at 10 Cents a Quart.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—The milk war in Charlottesville continues. In response to a request from the board of directors of the Albemarle Dairymen's Association, the Monticello Dairy, which supplies milk to half of the residents of the city, has ordered a reduction of 3 cents in the price of pasteurized milk, effective at once.

Under the new schedule, the prices are: Retail—quarts, 10 cents; pints, 5 cents. Wholesale—Quarts, 8 cents; pints, 4 cents. Raw milk will wholesale at 7 cents.

George T. Carr, president of the Albemarle Dairymen's Association, denies that his organization, together with the Monticello Dairy, is trying to force the small producer out of business. "We have 24 members in our organization," he says, "and 13 outside, including the members of the Independent Association. Our association in numbers represent 65 per cent of the producers and sell only 50 per cent of the milk.

"The truth is that the present demoralized condition of the Charlottesville market has been due to the fight between these outsiders all trying to get a market for all the milk they are producing. This has happened in other markets and has now happened here.

"We know that we can not afford to sell milk at the reduced price and we know that our competitors can not afford it."

Kirkwood Otey and Old Dominion Chapters, U. D. C., and Children of the Confederacy entertained with a brilliant reception this evening. Music was furnished by the Twenty-sixth Coast Artillery Band.

Corn and Hog Raisers to Get $28,000 Grant

Montgomery Farmers Will Be Paid This Week for Acreage Cut.

Allotment checks of $28,000 representing first payment on contracts made by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration with farmers of Montgomery County, Md., will be delivered tomorrow and Friday by officials of the County Corn Hog Production Control Association.

County Agent O. W. Anderson, secretary of the association, said that the checks received as payment for reduction in corn acreage and in number of hogs raised signify completion of one-half of the corn contracts and two-fifths of the hog contracts for 1934. Mr. Anderson and Ulysses Griffith, association treasurer, have been delegated to distribute the checks from the county agent's office at Rockville.

Measurement with a steel tape of the total corn acreage cultivated under contract, as well as of the acres contracted for by the Federal Government is being carried on by the associated officials. Nine farm supervisors will conduct the measurement work in regions set by the association. They are: Robert Green, Clarksburg; Ulysses Griffith, Laytonsville-Gaithersburg; George Romsberg, Poolesville; James Broome, Darnestown; Montgomery Barnsley, Olney; W. W. Hodges, Barnesville; Herbert E. Barnes, Damascus; Rockville-Potomac-Bethesda and Colesville-Wheaton supervisors remain to be named.

The extent of wheat acreage reduction which the AAA will require this fall is 10 per cent as compared with last fall's 15 per cent reduction.

Library Plans Are Submitted For Frederick

Frederick, Md., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Trustees of the C. Burr Artz Library Fund, Jacob Rohrback, Samuel G. Duvall and August T. Brust, gave an accounting of the fund and presented drawings for a library building at a public meeting last night.

Following a general discussion it was decided that a committee of two, Mayor Lloyd C. Culler and City Attorney Edward J. Smith, would meet with the trustees and consider a site and other matters relative to establishing a library and report at another public meeting.

The trustees reported that much of the estate from which the library is to materialize is in the shape of "frozen" assets at this time. No income is being derived from more than $100,000 of the estimated $148,183 value of the estate. Much of the estate is in mortgages and real estate in Chicago, the amount of mortgages being $95,055 and real estate appraised at $16,375. About $36,000 is in the United States Treasury and Federal Land Bank bonds and on deposit in local banks.

Costs Estimated.

It was estimated that remodeling the Trail homestead on East Church street, one of the properties considered available and well located for the library, would cost $10,000. To place the old academy building at the corner of Council and Record streets in condition for the library would cost about $17,000. A new building on the academy site would cost approximately $47,800. Drawings of a proposed new building were exhibited.

Dr. Joseph H. Apple, president emeritus of Hood College, and president of the Maryland Public Library Advisory Commission, suggested that Frederick City might contribute toward the support of a free library.

Miss Adelene J. Pratt, State director of library extension, said that Federal funds might be available this fall for library purposes and that a new building might be erected at a minimum cost. She proposed an increase from 2 to 7 cents in the tax rate, to be considered in regard to aiding the library from public funds. Mr. Rohrback said a special act of the General Assembly would be necessary before either the city or county could levy a tax on property for the use of the library.

Other Speakers.

The Rev. Dr. Henri L. G. Kieffer, pastor of the Reformed Church, suggested that pending the construction of a new building the Frederick County Free Library, housed in the old Academy Building, be aided by any income received from the Artz estate. Others who spoke were Mayor Culler, City Attorney Smith, Mrs. Richard S. J. Dutrow, Dr. William Crawford Johnson and Parsons Newman.

Mr. Rohrback stated that funds to the amount of $40,081 from the estate of the late Mrs. Margaret E. S. Hood are available for the proposed Artz Library. Mr. Rohrback and A. Kemp Keefer are trustees of the Hood estate.

It was stated that the price of Winchester Hall, formerly the Frederick Female Seminary building, proposed as a site for the new library, was prohibitive. The academy site would be presented as a gift from the board of directors with the exception of a small mortgage debt of about $400. The original cost of the Trail homestead, one of the largest private residences in the city, was placed at $18,000.

New Playground Nears Completion

North Cumberland Park Has Wading Pool.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—The new North Cumberland playground and park, at the end of Holland street, is the first of a series of model recreation centers planned for the city. While still under construction, as many as 300 children have visited it at one time.

Work was started last year under Mayor George Henderson's administration, with the construction of a wading pool for small children. The Allegany County commissioners granted permission to the city to build the pool on county ground. This spring, during the administration of Mayor George W. Legge, the county commissioners granted the city the use of about ten acres adjoining the wading pool for a playground and park.

An association of residents was formed to take care of the development of this project. It is under the supervision of the Cumberland Civic Club, with Mrs. William W. Brown, chairman of the playgrounds committee, in charge. This year, $500 was spent for equipment, and $8,000 was obtained from the FERA through H. Stanley Torbet, county FERA engineer, to be used for labor to clear and grade the land. At present 14 men are employed on this project daily and will continue until the present schedule of the FERA closes.

Sermon at Jail Pastor's Penalty In Drinking Case

Bristol, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—The Rev. George W. White, colored Methodist minister, draws a fine line between intoxication, which he denounces as "disgraceful," and drinking for "stimulation" purposes alone.

Arraigned in local police court yesterday on a charge of drunkenness, the minister made an impassioned plea for dismissal.

The justice interrupted him in the middle of his discourse to inquire if he would be willing to forego his "stimulants" for a period of one year, should the case be dismissed.

"Couldn't you make that six months, judge?" the minister countered after due deliberation.

The case ultimately was dismissed, after another burst of oratory, when the minister agreed to the justice's original proposal and on condition that he deliver a 30-minute sermon to the inmates of the city jail. He proceeded directly to the jail from the courtroom.

Maine's Election.

The Republicans received a drubbing in Maine.

The reelection of Gov. Brann was distinctly a victory for the New Deal, as well as for the Governor himself, and the narrow victory of Senator Hale in the once rock-ribbed Republican State was hardly less a triumph for the Democrats. The Republicans kept a Senator, but they have small reason for celebration in this instance.

The fact is, the Republican party needs a program and a leader. Until it acquires both, the flocks of orators sent abroad by the National Committee will be quite useless.

The Takoma Park Case.

By a purely legalistic decision Justice F. Dickinson Letts has temporarily restrained the referendum that was to be held today to decide the wet and dry issue in Takoma Park. It is his contention that under the District liquor law, the Commissioners alone have the power to declare any area dry. Consequently, the issue in question can not be decided by the vote of the people of any region, despite the fact that the referendum was supposed merely to indicate the sentiment of the section.

"It is elementary," says Judge Letts, "that such duties are only to be performed by the proper exercise of their judgment. Such discretion is vested solely in them, and it can not be delegated, it can not be surrendered. They have duties to be performed. To adopt other views is tantamount to a surrender of their duty and a delegation of their power to someone else."

The referendum might never have been considered as affecting the "proper exercise of judgment" had not Commissioner Allen announced that he would abide by its results. Having done so, according to the court, he has surrendered his discretion and delegated it to others, these others being the people of Takoma Park. Since the referendum was intended merely to indicate the trend of public opinion in Takoma this outcome is most unfortunate.

The temporary injunction, however, does not mean that Takoma Park need remain "wet" if the Commissioners, acting entirely "on their own initiative after making due inquiries which are to be purely advisory," reach the conclusion that it is against the public interest to issue liquor licenses in Takoma Park. But again, as Judge Letts points out, the petitioners for the injunction had a right to seek it in defense of their own rights, and their rights must be considered in any decision on the matter under dispute.

The matter is still before the court and its final disposition can not be predicted. If a permanent injunction is granted, however, the Commissioners will have to adopt other means of determining what course will best serve the public interest in Takoma Park.

Federal Retirement.

Orderly retirement of Federal employes as they become superannuated is one of those subjects about which there is much discussion and little action. The assertion by E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, that Congress is more than $2,000,000,000 in arrears in its payments to the Federal Employes' Retirement Fund is only one more indication of neglect in this quarter.

As Lewis H. Fisher, who is in charge of the fund, points out, there is no reason to assume that Government workers will lose money they have invested in the retirement fund. In case of an unusual demand upon the fund, Congress would have to make a deficiency appropriation. On the other hand, it is obvious that full payment of retirement annuities should not be based on such a contingency. Federal employes have a right to expect Congress to make an annual appropriation that will keep the fund on a sound insurance basis.

For the moment, however, it appears that other aspects of the retirement problem are more important than wiping out the deficit. One reason for the heavy drain is the compulsory retirement provisions of the present law. Many employes who have attained the so-called retirement age have been forced out of the service for the sake of economy, even though new political appointees were being added to the pay roll at a rapid rate. Under the law all employes in the same classification are supposed to become incapacitated at the same age. Consequently some who are no longer efficient are retained, and others who are at their prime are forced out.

A more flexible retirement system would reduce the drain upon the retirement fund and improve the general efficiency of the service without imposing the inequities of the present system upon individual employes. The Civil Service Commission has repeatedly advised such changes in the law, but Congress has failed to act. It seems to be largely a matter of negligence. Certainly the thousands of employes who spend their lives in the service of the Government deserve better treatment than this.

More Important Than Blame.

It is still too early to pass judgment on the disaster which overtook the Morro Castle. The whole story has not yet been told, although several startling bits of evidence have been read into the record. Not the least amazing is the declaration by the acting captain and his first officer that they are convinced the fire was of incendiary origin. They base their deduction on the fact that there was an explosion in the locker where, it appears, the fire started. Coupled with this are the somewhat hysterical dispatches from Havana and the Canal Zone strongly intimating the existence of an international "arson ring."

It is so easy to cry "Red! Red!" where there is no Red that these charges merit close attention. They seem to be based on the following claims: There has been considerable trouble in Havana among the dockworkers. On a previous trip a slight fire, which seems to have been started deliberately, was discovered on the Morro Castle. Fires on other ships have come to light in the excitement of the Morro Castle disaster. The chief of Havana's harbor police says that the terrible catastrophe off New Jersey coast "could not possibly have been accidental" and suggests strongly that it was "the work of Communists." The officers of the Grace liner Santa Rita blame "an international organization."

But so far there is no proof to sustain these accusations. Nor is there any justification for a belief that terroristic activities are widespread on the high seas. Unless further evidence is forthcoming, these sensational charges will not aid the investigators, whose purpose is not only to find the cause and place the blame, but also, as Inspector General Dickinson Hoover has correctly said, to learn lessons that will prevent other disasters of this nature. It would be especially unfortunate if such charges should divert attention from the technical aspects of the burning of the liner, which include the important question of what is the proper architecture for modern ships.

The code of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service may have to be strengthened regarding superstructure. That is where the fire did the most damage on the Morro Castle. Along with the absolute necessity of finding cause, placing blame and clearing up the intimations of an "arson plot," this part of the inquiry should be pressed with vigor. Radicals, if guilty, may be found and punished; officers, if at fault, can be made to answer for their negligence. But neither will be a guarantee against future tragedy. This can be done chiefly by applying the lessons learned from the Morro Castle, which ultimately may be of more importance than the fact that the human element failed in a moment of crisis.

"Things Not Seen."

"From the time humanity began to think, it has occupied itself with the problem of its origin and its future, which is the problem of life. The inability of science to solve it is absolute. This would be truly frightening were it not for faith."

The scene of that declaration, made on Monday last, was no church; it was the Venitian hall where, with its eight Nobel prize winners and its delegations of scientists from over all the world, the International Congress of Electro-Radio-Biology sits in session. The speaker was a priest solely of practical and theoretical science: Guglielmo Marconi, the inventor who first applied Hertzian waves to telegraphy and established the wireless marvel upon a commercial basis.

Only the great scientist is a humble scientist; few save the geniuses confess the limitations of their media. Jesting Pilate asked what truth was and "waited not for an answer." But the man of highest talent who tries to master matter admits that no man can ever completely master it, that its ultimate mysteries must forever remain ultimately mysterious. What causes death, science has learned; it may yet learn what causes life—but what life and death really are it can never discover. Although knowledge may be potentially infinite, the realms which the mind of man has not explored are certainly infinite infinity;

"Still leagues beyond those leagues there is more sea."

"This would be truly frightening were it not for faith," said Marconi. "I desire the faith of a simple Breton peasant," said Pasteur—and he acquired it. To the keenest human minds seeking the unknown, skepticism is seldom more than a pausing-place.

Sir George Henschel.

The death of Sir George Henschel, at the age of 84, recalls an interesting period in the history of culture in America. A well-trained musician, noted throughout Europe as a singer, he was brought to this country more than 50 years ago by Walter Damrosch, a fellow native of Breslau. Not by chance did he visit Boston, then (if ever) the Athens of America. He had letters to Longfellow from Lord Houghton, to Charles Perkins from Browning. In that rarified atmosphere the distinguished visitor was well received. Naturally, the eminent and imposing Maj. Henry Lee Higginson was his host.

Maj. Higginson was arduously seeking better music for Boston. To George Henschel he gave the work of organizing an orchestra that was to be the best in this country. It was hard work. The musicians available were not first rate. There was no discipline. The critics, third-rate men themselves, were not sympathetic. But out of three years of grinding work, George Henschel built up the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It was, incidentally, his first work as a conductor.

Since Henschel there have been Karl Muck and Serge Koussevitsky, among other lesser men, to carry on the great tradition of the prophet who brought Brahms' music to America amid the jeers and catcalls of the socially elite. The orchestra was the first American organization to be welcomed to Europe. It grew to be one of the world's really fine symphony orchestras, as it indisputably is today. And one of the reasons for this is that George Henschel left it a tradition which, under whatever leader it might be carrying on, it has never forgotten.

Sir George was not a "great" musician. His own music, even "Stabat Mater," does not rank at the top. His voice was not that of a Scotti or a Caruso. But the Boston Symphony Orchestra is a great monument to his ability. Through it he showed the way to real achievement in music in this country more than half a century ago.

"White Gold."

In times of depression every country is inclined to search for new industries to provide an outlet for the energy of its idle people. Brazil thinks it has found such an industry in the production of cotton, or "white gold" as it is called in Sao Paulo. A few years ago this Brazilian state was overwhelmed by surplus coffee. In an effort to prevent a collapse in coffee prices thousands of tons were burned. As the smoke from these curious fires curled skyward, the people resolved to develop a new crop, and began planting "white gold."

Now a campaign is gaining momentum throughout the temperate sections of Brazil. Coffee growers are urged, where practicable, to turn to cotton. Newspapers point out that the time to secure a hold in the world cotton market is especially propitious because this crop has been curtailed by legislation in the United States. Compared with our own crop, Brazil's cotton output is still small, but it is expected to double this year.

Reports from several other countries indicate that they, too, are trying to take advantage of the short American cotton crop. Larger crops in India and China, and possibly Egypt, are forecast by the New York Cotton Exchange Service. Before the depression foreign countries were producing an average of about 10,332,000 bales. Last season they harvested 12,646,000 bales and this year it is estimated that commercial production will reach a new high peak at 13,225,000 bales. Conversely, the cotton output of this country has fallen from a predepression average of 15,172,000 bales to 13,715,000 bales under the AAA's plow-under policy last year and to an estimated total of 9,142,000 bales under the terms of the Bankhead Act.

World cotton production this year is expected to be somewhat lower than usual because of the restrictions in effect here, but it is apparent that foreign growers are moving rapidly to step into the world market wherever American producers withdraw. The AAA has concentrated on the worthy objective of raising agricultural prices by removing surpluses. But with other countries steadily expanding their crops, there is grave danger that American cotton—about half of which is normally exported—may be gradually displaced in the world market by foreign growths. Indeed, one leading economist has already expressed fear that American cotton is losing ground in the international market so fast that "the debate in agricultural circles as to whether Southern farmers can or should continue growing cotton for export on a world price basis will soon be largely academic."

Farmers would be naive indeed if they should ignore this international readjustment, while appraising the benefits of crop curtailment by legislative fiat.

"Who Steals My Purse,"

Every month, representatives of six National organizations "preview" the latest movies manufactured at Hollywood and announce their resultant opinions in a pamphlet entitled "Selected Motion Pictures." They recommend films which meet their approval in several classes, such as suitable for "children" (up to 14 years), "adolescents" (14-18), "young people" (18-25) and "family," which means "suitable for children accompanied by adults." These judges represent D. A. R., the General Federation of Women's Clubs and similar associations. Their work is admirable. But once in a while it is just a trifle incomplete.

Their September list furnishes a little example in point. They commend "Treasure Island" as "from the Robert Louis Stevenson classic; outstanding direction, a perfect cast, unexcelled artistry . . . stimulating, rollicking . . . family." They have praise for "The Cat's Paw" and do not omit to mention that it is "from the story by Clarence Buddington Kelland . . . (family)." They even know who wrote "The Fountain . . . (Adults)." After that, however, they remark:

"The Moonstone . . . Improbable mystery story dealing with the theft of a valuable moonstone. Family." And let poor Wilkie Collins pass into anonymity!

One must wait for the answer to this question. But it is probable that he will consider a certain knowledge of literature not amiss in any sort of literary or semi-literary censorship or quasi-censorship.

Mile Posts

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

OVER A FRONT, extending in a general way from Paris to Verdun, the German right wing was forced to fall back before the allied offensive. The Germans retreated about 46 miles in four days. Their retreat toward the Aisne and Oise was orderly and the troops were cleverly maneuvered to prevent portions of the German army from being cut off from the main body and being surrounded by the allied forces.

FRANCE ORDERED the commandeering of every automobile in private hands for the purpose of transporting troops and munitions to the front.

IT WAS ANNOUNCED that Russian troops succeeded in separating the left wing of the Austrian army from the main army in Russian Poland. Tomaszow was taken by the Russians in Russian Poland. German troops were repulsed by the Russians.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some one sent me a copy of your splendid editorial and account of our White Top Folk Festival from the issue of August 19.

Please accept my deep appreciation for your interest and the editorial and write-up. I wish you might have been present. We are most anxious to make this festival and the folk work connected with it of real benefit to American creative art.

Fire at Sea.

A year after the Titanic disaster Sir Westcott Abel, then chief engineer surveyor of Lloyd's Register, published a study of "Sea Casualties and Loss of Life," which covered vessels registered in the United Kingdom and engaged in foreign trade. Shipowners learned that from 1890 to 1913 vessels ran a greater danger from fire than from any other cause. With storms naval architects were coping more and more effectively, but the disasters occasioned by fire had increased by 150 per cent. That the picture has not changed since the publication of Abel's work is shown by a table for the year 1932 which was compiled by the French Bureau Veritas and which shows that out of 329 casualties no fewer than 266 were traceable to fires that broke out in cargoes, fuel tanks or bunkers, electrical apparatus and propelling machinery.

The regulations adopted by the Second International Convention on the Safety of Life at Sea in 1929 were drawn up with a full recognition of the risks that modern ships run. The increased hazards introduced by the use of oil have been met. There are automatic fire alarms in the cabins of most modern passenger ships. Nearly all vessels of 2,000 tons or over are provided with the Rich system, which indicates by the actual appearance of smoke on the bridge exactly in what inaccessible spaces of the hold fire has broken out. Moreover flames can be smothered in cargo spaces by steam under control from the bridge. It must be admitted, however, that insurance underwriters are not wholly pleased with the donkey boiler on which many cargo-carrying Diesel motorships depend. The British Board of Trade insists on carbon dioxide gas and permits the use of steam only in the holds of steam-driven freighters. Luckily, the United Steamboat Inspection service rules are stringent enough to meet all reasonable demands for safety—luckily, because the United States Senate has not yet chosen to ratify the provisions for passenger vessels adopted at the last International Convention on the Safety of Life at Sea.

It is for experts to decide how the horrors of fire at sea can be averted. Since the burning of the Atlantique and the Georges Philippar, discussion has been rife in societies of naval architects. Protests are even heard against the lavish use of ornamental woodwork and against inflammable hangings. Mr. George G. Sharp, an authority on naval architecture, questions whether modern luxury, apart from its danger, serves its purpose—whether the relaxation that we associate with a sea voyage has any relation whatever to Louis XIV furniture. These matters may become the subject of inquiry at another international convention. In the meantime it is probable that the United States Steamboat Inspection Service will stiffen its rules so far as the superstructure is concerned. It is regarded by naval architects as the weakest spot of the American passenger ship.

More Wanderbirds.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The September 7 issue of The Washington Post, carrying the headline "Wanderbirds Plan Trip Up Chesapeake & Ohio Canal," and the column by Robert Shosteck, were responsible for one of the most enjoyable Sundays I have spent this summer. It was my first trip with this group, although my 70-year-old father has been enjoying these hikes all summer.

Speaking, therefore, on behalf of my two daughters, aged 11 and 13, and myself, I am writing this in the hope that it will lend support to your plan to continue running these articles, which not alone are providing healthful enjoyment for from 50 to 100 Washingtonians each Sunday, but have a decided educational value in giving an opportunity to know Washington and its beauty spots. A. B. DICKINSON.
Washington, Sept. 10.

For Fires at Sea.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the following suggestions appear to have value please pass them on.

Could not all ships be equipped with fire masks? Such masks should enable a fire victim to get through a pretty stiff blaze, with a wet blanket, without injury to the eyes or exhaustion from suffocation.

Could not ships be equipped with light bamboo rafts? These would take little space. If there were not sufficient lifeboats, or if lifeboats collapsed, such rafts dropped in the sea might be reached by sea victims who could rest upon them.

Could not specified members of each crew be made responsible for passengers in specified cabins? This seems to be one way to eliminate some of the trouble similar to that in the late Morro Castle disaster. MARY ANNE WALFORD.
Washington, Sept. 9.

Spoils System Vs. Civil Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The address of Senator Schall over WABC on August 23 was correctly named the "Double Deal." However, the Senator failed to mention one of the many ill-smelling phases of the "double deal," slightly different from all others in the aspect of origin and responsibility, which in the case at hand places the responsibility directly upon the desk of the President.

The President has openly expressed his approval of the classified competitive civil service and all it stood for. In January last, the President expressed his wish to extend this status to even the officers of first-class postmastership.

If we go back to March, 1933, we find the Congress giving the President authority to consolidate, reorganize or eliminate the various Government services. This was a step, so the public generally believed, to effect economy, create greater efficiency, and eliminate dual or overlapping duties.

The Executive order of June 10, 1933, transferred to the Postoffice Department from the Treasury the custodial services and personnel. These employes were in a classified or classified competitive status. The terms of the Executive order directed that all personnel effected by the transfer would be considered in a "temporary" status, or as later events will indicate, they were ripped out of their classified competitive status for a period sufficiently long enough to permit political or religious discrimination by certain elective and appointive officers. In simple terms, any and all victims of discrimination were politely denied the right of appeal and hearing which exists under civil service rules and regulations.

In my own case, I was removed from the position of assistant custodian at the Scranton, Pa., Federal Building with 15 minutes notice during this so-called temporary period. Upon filing my appeal and protest with the commission, they notified me that they were without jurisdiction due to the fact that the President had taken away my rights of protection during the period specified. My appeal contained abundant and substantive proof that my removal was desired by the local Congressman for the purpose of placing one of his party workers in the position.

I served in the United States Navy for 18 continuous years. I left the service in 1931, and was a candidate in the open competitive civil service examination for the position mentioned above. I was graded No. 1, and in August, 1931, appointed to the position without political or any other kind of influence. For the next two and a half years I served in the position under a postmaster who not once had occasion to criticize my ability, efficiency or conduct of office. In fact, all reports of engineers and inspectors bore commendatory statements of the condition of the building and the organization of personnel under my supervision.

A local newspaper carried a story on January 4, 1934, to the effect that I was to be succeeded by one W. W. May, a political worker of the Democratic party and a personal friend of the local Congressman and the next postmaster-to-be. I was still in the position at this time.

The new Democratic postmaster, a mere rubber stamp for the local Congressman, did, after only two weeks in office, recommend my dismissal in spite of the fact that Postoffice Inspector Gallagher had expressed himself against it, and also that the postmaster had made a public statement that he was too new in office to pass upon my ability or conduct of office. The postmaster wanted the local public to believe that he had nothing to do with my removal, when at the same time he had made specific recommendations forthwith.

What a clear example of the duplicity and double deal of the New Dealers, with the President himself taking an active hand in one of the many shuffles! Is it or is it not hypocrisy for the President to express his belief in the wisdom and greater efficiency of a classified competitive service and still rip out thousands of such employes from such a status?

Repeated appeals and protests to the President, the commission, Postmaster General and his Fourth Assistant have met the same fate. The President's secretary—"Forwarded to the Postmaster General." The commission—"Out of jurisdiction by reason of the Executive order." The Postmaster General—no reply. The Fourth Assistant—"In view of the postmaster's recommendation, your removal was for the best interests of the service." The service he apparently means is the local political patronage service. Needless for me to write that the W. W. May referred to was appointed to the position shortly after my dismissal, without examination and despite the fact that the Philadelphia office of the commission had ruled him not to be qualified.

The President, in his before vacation speech, said that we should consider this "God's country." In one of his latest speeches, he mentioned something about putting the "Golden Rule" in practice.

Need any more be said?

Pollen Patients.

Postoffice, Wednesday.

HOW many there are in the District we don't know, nor do the doctors. The returns will keep on coming in until the first frost. But there are even more than usual this year, and the usual is plenty. Are you among them?

Headache? Sneezing? Yes—probably, then you're one of the 90 per cent.

You can be, it seems, without realizing it:

One of the ten million of Americans who are suffering, in greater or less degree, from hay fever.

Not that Washington is a city more afflicted than many others by the annual scourge—although some Washington physicians are running out of the current remedies. There is a special hay fever clinic at the New York Post-Graduate School and Hospital, for instance, and Dr. C. J. Dillon, its head, admits that this season's hay fever crop in Manhattan is a bumper. Nevertheless—as you perhaps saw by that ragweed story and its accompanying picture of Miss Margaret Giannini in Monday's Post—Washington is doing its share of early-autumn sneezing.

One of the scholarly gentlemen who helps us to occupy our humble workroom began his private share a few minutes ago, and that is what caused this Column. At 10 a. m. he was to all appearances a healthy man. At 10:15 he was on the rocks. By half-past 10, he was breaking up fast.

The office-boy sniffled.

"You've got it, too," said the scholarly gentleman—only he really said "goh id doo."

The office boy politely intimated that he had merely sniffed in sympathy.

"Nowh you didn't," the scholarly gentleman insisted. "You hab id. You're just one ob those fools who hab id so like that they don't knowh they hab id, that's all."

He turned to us. He said, between sneezes—but we translate what he said:

"Mrs. Simeon Ford, widow of the humorist, is an expert on hay fever, and she asserts that there are 10,000,000 cases per annum in this country. Of course, lots of them are so light that the patients merely think they've a slight cold. As for the rest of us, the real specimens—well, there wouldn't be any mistaking my disease, would there be?

"There's hardly any malady that doctors have tried harder to find a cure for, and hardly any they've been so unsuccessful with. Every month there's somebody thinks he's discovered a remedy, and the next month it's proved good for only one kind of the hundred and fifty-seven varieties—or bad for all. The learned things that were written about it in last September's medical journals are all out of date this September, and this September's will look like crinoline in the September of 1935."

We remarked that expert Dr. August Thomen had said the disease ran from about mid-August until mid-October.

Said our friend: "I can tell you anything about it that any doctor can tell you—for certain. I ought to be able to, because I talk every year about it to the six best specialists in Washington—and all they know is that it begins when the pollen begins to fly around and ends when the frost stops the pollen from—well from occurring."

"Ragweed pollen?" we inquired.

"Ragweed's the worst," our friend admitted, "because it affects the most people. And one fairly normal ragweed plant can let loose 4,000,000 grains of pollen per year.

"Just what is ragweed?"

"Lucky man! Ragweed's ambrosia—but I'll bet it's not the ambrosia that the Greek gods ate. It's 'bitter-weed' and 'horse-cane'; ambrosia trifida—that rough, hairy-stemmed, greenish flowered weed that likes vacant lots and grows to any height from a yard to seventeen feet, and anywhere, too, from Quebec to Florida and from the Atlantic Coast to western Utah.

"But ragweed pollen," our friend continued, "isn't the only pollen that causes hay fever. Different types of people are affected by different kinds of pollen."

We said, yes, we'd heard that golden-rod——

"Oh," said the patient, "that's one of the theories that's been discarded. But there are about a thousand hay fever pollens left on the active list: timothy, rye, alfalfa. Some people are affected by dog-hair, or dog-scent. I know a woman who got rid of her hay fever when she got rid of her pigeons. Other people contract the disease from the dandruff of horses."

We thought that not many did, nowadays. But we didn't mention it, because probably those who have suffered from horse-dandruff now suffer just as much from gasoline-sediment.

So we murmured something about innoculations. "Don't they," we inquired, "find out what kind of pollen is a particular patient's poison and then innoculate him with that, on the old vaccination principle?"

"Yes," our friend grudgingly granted. "But what are you going to do about a case like my brother's? He's susceptible to seventeen different sorts of pollen. Innoculate him seventeen times? Might as well give him small-pox and be done with it."

"Only as long as there's a sea breeze."

"Can't you get high enough in the mountains to rise above it?"

"You can, if you don't have to stay in the valley to work."

"Then what do you do?"

Our friend sneezed. "I just stay an'—and stan'—stand it. Bud I know I'm a dam' nud'ense."

And he sent the office-boy out for another dozen handkerchiefs.

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

Russia!

MOSCOW.—The point is invariably made in discussions of Russia that the high officials themselves live in simplicity, that there is no ostentation. The idea is that they are struggling along with the workers for the Utopia which they promise to bring about.

BARGERON

There is no ostentatious display here. The question arises, however, as to just what is simplicity of living. There is not the slightest doubt that the high government and party officials have everything they want or everything either you or I might want. They do not have vast estates, nor do they live in grandeur. They do, however, all have country places according to their tastes and their quarters in the city show not the slightest want.

* * * *

I recall very well that upon the occasion of the visit to our country of M. Litvinoff, the foreign minister, it was reported in the papers that he lived over a garage. This was highly misleading and I am inclined to believe the gentlemen who sponsored the story intended it to be.

He does live over a garage, but that does not mean in this country what it would mean in the States. The garage is quite an ample one and his quarters over it were those of a well-to-do Russian who got liquidated, as they call it, in the revolution. I can't imagine what he would do with any more room, and certainly his quarters are as well furnished as he could wish them to be. Let's see, then, what there is in the way of life's luxuries. He certainly has the fat of the land in the way of food. He has plenty of servants to attend to his wants. He has a Lincoln automobile at his disposal, or any number of Lincoln automobiles.

He has a country place, or dacha, as it is called. I do not know that he has a yacht, but undoubtedly should M. Litvinoff desire to go riding on a yacht at any time, on a yacht he certainly would go. I would say that our capitalistic Secretary of State Hull lives quite as simply as he. My recollection is that Mr. Hull lives at a hotel.

* * * *

Now when M. Litvinoff desires to entertain the members of the Diplomatic Corps, or anyone else for that matter, there is a quite pretentious and luxuriously appointed building for him to entertain in. At the dinners here rounds and rounds of champagne are served along with the choicest of liquers and food. These dinners, in fact, are easily the equal of any of our Diplomatic dinners in Washington.

The head of it all, M. Stalin, and about 10, maybe more, of the higher officials, live within the Kremlin walls. I do not know of a correspondent, unless it be Mr. Walter Duranty, and I forgot to ask him, who has ever seen these quarters. In fact, some of the correspondents told me they had never been able to get within the walls, that their repeated requests had always been put off on one excuse or another.

* * * *

On the other hand, the tourists are permitted to go in once a week with the Intourist guides. I availed myself of this opportunity. We saw several old churches and tombs of czars, but my repeated requests that the quarters of M. Stalin be at least pointed out to me, met with the response:

"It is quite unnecessary."

I have a serious doubt that the young lady knew herself.

Recital of this experience to the foreign correspondents met with the warning, even though none of them had seen the quarters:

"Well, don't go wrong. All of these fellows live very simply."

I am moved to wonder just what simplicity is.

It is not the simplicity of these people we see and meet. Strangely enough, too, as these same correspondents tell of the simplicity, they tell of some particular high official who has this or that star of the ballet. Under the czars it was the grand duke and the little dukes who sat in the royal box and had this or that star summoned to him. Now it is the high officials of the Communist government.

There is this about the incumbent officials, though. They haven't gone in for rare jewels or highly prized paintings. It may be that their taste doesn't run that way. If it did there is nothing in the world to keep them from having them. The museums abound with them. There are more than the country has the slightest idea what to do with.

'The Coming American Boom'

British Author Gives His Opinions on How Revivals in Trade Are Started.

By Maj. Lawrence L. B. Angas

This is the sixth installment of the book by Maj. L. L. B. Angas, British economist, which recently caused a flurry in American financial circles. Although some of the economics expounded will not stand an acid test, The Post is nevertheless publishing the book because it does contain interesting material.

Installment VI.

Admittedly, since March, 1934, there has been some reaction from the highest points touched, and some now believe that the NRA policy has failed; they whisper that it has now exhausted every possible ruse, and that now a new relapse must begin, especially as numerous strikes are occurring (a) on the part of workers who want higher wages and a larger share in prosperity, and (b) in the hope of getting industrial trade unions established so as to secure a stronger bargaining power for labor in the forthcoming era of reflation.

These factors need not, however, cause great alarm. Most of the strikes which have occurred, or been threatened, are in industries where profits have already revived, and the workers, not unnaturally, are in search of higher wages. Whereas the attempt to secure pan-industrial trade union recognition, although new to America, is merely a development which occurred in England 80 years ago. The disturbances caused by all strikes are regrettable, but collective bargaining may economically further the Administration's plans by keeping consumer purchasing power rising somewhat parallel with prices and production.

As regards the talk of another new slump now following the recent minor revival, this, I think can be regarded as merely the talk of uninstructed economic opinion.

Describes Progress.

The truth is that in every trade cycle economic progress takes place not in one steady line, but by leaps, reactions, stagnation and new leaps. Sharp upswings are followed by temporary falls; then after a period of quiescence the upswing is renewed. The United States at the moment appears to me to be nearing the end of a period of reaction, and after a short dormant period a new upswing should commence.

It is true that in actual practice the recent period of industrial reaction and hesitation has been longer than normal, but then the previous advance in the middle of 1933 was also considerably more rapid than normal. It was, moreover, only to be expected that the rapid upswing, coupled with the jolts caused by new legislation, should have caused considerable price dislocation and industrial disharmony, and led to some friction with labor.

The monetary driving forces behind the forward movement, however, are as strong as ever, although to explain the driving forces at work some reference must be made to pure monetary theory. The reader, I hope, will forgive me for this, but money and its flow are really the root of the problem.

As explained heretofore, although nonmonetary factors may touch off a slump, depressions in the end always tend to assume an almost purely monetary form. Nonmonetary remedies such as tariffs, rationalisation, &c., may do much to bring the country from depression to prosperity; nevertheless in past trade cycles slumps have, as it happens, always been cured by the gradual growth of a condition of "redundancy of money;" that is to say, by a growing unnecessary "surplus of money" in the passbooks of the public and in the reserves of the banks.

Artificial Action.

In most past trade cycles this redundancy has been brought about "naturally" by declining prices and trade, i. e., by trade and prices diminishing even faster than bank credit currency is contracted (owing to people hoarding more money through nervousness, and using more of it as a "store of value"). A similar redundancy can, however, be "artificially" created by deliberate inflation of bank notes or deposits.

This "artificial" creation is really the crux of the argument of this book since upon it depends the vital question whether any government, and Roosevelt in particular, can in fact cure depression by conscious and deliberate enlargement of the supply of money. The general theory of the matter is as follows:

If the amount of money in a country, which is all owned by somebody, keeps stable, while trade and prices fall to say half their former scale, people, on an average, will—other things equal—be hoarding half the total money in existence. The hoarded half will be redundant from the point of view of "real business" as distinct from "store of value" requirements. The result is that, if the redundant part were once more spent with its normal velocity, owing, say, to people no longer expecting prices to go on falling, increased buying would take place from the shops, general trade would improve, inventories would decline, and prices would then tend to rise. Latent redundancy of money, in fact, by lending to an increased velocity, would also increase the velocity of goods, and this, by lowering stocks, would tend to raise prices.

Effect of Higher Deposits.

Conversely—and we are still considering the question of redundancy—if the bank balances of everybody in a country were suddenly doubled, a similar redundancy of money would occur. The owners of the extra money would naturally desire to put it to some profitable use. They would thus tend to buy either income-giving securities, or alternately, to buy commodities which would give them some physical satisfaction. This, again, would mean increased buying from the shops, a fall in inventories, a rise in prices, replacement orders to producers, and an improvement in trade.

It is true that for a period people may go on hoarding either new or old money which itself is redundant, either through nervousness or in the hope or fear of further falls in prices, but eventually there comes a point when the condition of redundancy becomes so great that it induces owner by owner to spend his surplus, so as to get some benefit from it instead of leaving it idle, and this sets in motion a trade revival.

All trade slumps require redundancy of money for their cure. In the normal trade cycle it matures automatically and "naturally" through trade and prices falling with a cumulative momentum even faster than the quantity of bank credit is called in and deflated. Redundancy can, however, be created "artificially" by inflation by the Government or by the central bank.

I admit that in all cases where redundancy exists it usually takes some piece of good political or economic news to touch off trade revival, but it is, in the main, the previous maturity of the condition of redundancy which makes the good news effective. The return of confidence is, of course, a vital factor, but confidence itself at the bottom of a depression is itself recreated by the maturity of monetary redundancy, for the simple reason that the fact that there is "more money about" makes people feel richer because they have more money to spend, and the eventual spending of the redundant balances resulting from this feeling tends to touch off better trade, and to improve confidence. If by increasing the total money, i. e., the average man's bank balance by 10 per cent does not have this effect, doubling or increasing it one hundredfold will. Usually, however, even a small increase like 15 per cent will begin to prove effective, especially if further increases are anticipated.

Tomorrow—How Government by devaluing gold increased potential cash reserves by over $3,000,000,000, and by borrowing from banks widened basis of credit.

Fuel Firms Seeking To Buy City's Coke

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Sale of the city's coke supply, obtained at the municipally operated gas works, to private fuel companies instead of directly to the consumers was proposed to the city council last night by the C. H. Montgomery and R. G. Payne fuel companies.

Under the proposed plan, the city-owned coke, now retailed at a lower price than the coke sold by the private companies, would be bought by the companies and resold at a higher price. The city thus would be saved the expense of hauling and delivering the product, the companies pointed out.

The proposal was referred to the light committee, composed of B. T. Pitts, George W. Heflin and W. S. Chesley.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Glances Backward.

STILL catching up on the back pile of books, I've a great array to call to your notice this morning. You and those lynx-eyed people, the publishers, must understand that I'd like to say considerably more about each volume — but already there are books on the shelf for weeks ahead, and I'd better clear the decks. One or two of those below I'll save to dilate upon later.

THEO. HALL

* * * *

"End of the Chapter," a trilogy of novels by John Galsworthy (Scribner, $3). Here, in one handsome, 897-page volume, are the three novels about that exciting woman, "Dinny" Cherrell—"Maid in Waiting," "Flowering Wilderness" and "One More River." Galsworthy himself, with premonition, chose the book's title. This last trilogy (you might call it the "Cherrell Saga") belongs on your shelf along with "The Forsyte Saga" and "A Modern Comedy," as farewell to John Galsworthy — writer, gentleman and judge of good manners.

* * * *

"All's Fair: the Story of the British Secret Service Behind the German Lines," by Capt. Henry Landau (Putnam, $3). A book which makes other spy stories look like cheap fiction, written by the actual war-time chief in the field of the British agents in German-occupied territory. We'll have more of this later.

* * * *

"Woman of This Earth," a poem by Frances Frost (Houghton Mifflin, $2). Six sides of a woman's life, in connected lyrics, from this exceptionally fine and beautiful work. It bears the mark of true poetry, in that it treats banalities with distinction. Here's one brief sample:

Rock and loam endure; we only press
Our flesh against the earth, know love, and die,
And all the blood's immortal sweet distress

* * * *

"General Buntop's Miracle and Other Stories," by Martin Armstrong (Harcourt Brace, $2). Mr. Armstrong's annual volume of collected tales, presenting a variety of moods and done in the British tradition of mild but good craftsmanship. Thoroughly enjoyable by everyone who thinks we've had enough of the Faulknеresque.

* * * *

"Maiden Voyage," a novel by Kathleen Norris (Doubleday Doran, $2). The lovely young San Francisco society reporter falls in love with the husband of her best friend. Mrs. Norris' 49 earlier books have taught her how to please almost every reader.

* * * *

"The Laughing Journey," a novel by Thomas Lennon (John Day, $2). A corking first novel by a romantic Irishman, full of laughter, sentiment and good brogue. People will be saying: "Who was that man, Donn Byrne?"

* * * *

"Government Rules Industry," by Michael F. Gallagher (Oxford University Press, $2). A brief study for laymen, by a prominent lawyer, of the legality of NRA. Able and impartial, it realizes well the conflict between traditional individual rights and the rights of collective society.

* * * *

"Wild Strawberries," a comedy by Angela Thirkell (Smith & Haas, $2). A deliciously funny family—especially to Anglophiles—described by the granddaughter of Burne Jones, daughter of Prof. J. W. Mackail, sister of Denis Mackail, and cousin of both Rudyard Kipling and Stanley Baldwin. We mustn't hold all that against Mrs. Thirkell.

* * * *

"Pedigree of Honey," a romance by Barbara Webb (Doubleday Doran, $2). Young love down Warrenton way, between a country girl and an F. F. V. young man. Sweet, but readable.

* * * *

"The Best British Short Stories: 1934," edited by Edward J. O'Brien (Houghton Mifflin, $2.50). Twenty-four British, Irish, and colonial stories, still 30 years behind the best American but excellent for a quiet evening. Included are such names as Henry Handel Richardson, H. E. Bates and L. A. G. Strong.

"The Strange Boarders of Palace Crescent," a mystery by E. Phillips Oppenheim (Little Brown, $2), Peculiar goings-on in a very odd London boarding house, pretty appalling to the nice young man until he gets to the heart of it all. Told in the best Oppenheim manner.

* * * *

"Glory Jam," a comedy by Caroline Seaford (Minton Balch, $2). Lively characters and nimble writing will keep you grinning over this tale of English village life. A newcomer on this side of the water, Miss Seaford bears watching.

This is the book, by the way, over which Minton Balch are holding a little prize contest. For the best letter (not over 250 words) by a woman, explaining what is right or wrong with Myrtle's method of getting her man, there's a reward of $50. For the ten next best letters, a book from the publisher's fall list is offered. The letters must reach 2 West Forty-fifth street, New York, by December 1.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

The Beautiful Blue Danube.

The dancing masters inform us that the waltz will dominate the ballroom this coming autumn and winter; hence one naturally thinks of the greatest waltz ever written—"The Beautiful Blue Danube." This is a work of genius. No severe symphony orchestra program is too good for it, and it is a welcome feature of any rustic dance at harvest home.

The best description ever written of this wonderful music is by the late Arnold Bennett. He was tremendously fond of dancing; and in the following description he put his own emotional response to this ravishing wal His novel "Leonora," published in 1903, never attracted much attention; yet it ought to live by this one description of the dance. In reading it we must remember that Leonora herself is 40 years old . . .

There stole out, troubling the expectant air, softly, alluringly, invocatively, the first warning notes of that unique classic of the ballroom, that extraordinary composition which more than any other work of art unites all Western nations in a common delight, which is adored equally by profound musicians, and by the lightest coquettes, and which, unscathed and splendid, still miraculously survives the deadly ordeal of eternal perfunctory reiterance; the masterpiece of Johann Strauss.

"Why," Leonora exclaimed, her excitement straining impatiently in the leash, "The Blue Danube!" He laughed, quietly gay.

While the chords, with tantalizing pauses and deliberation, approached the magic moment of the waltz itself, she was conscious that his hold of her became firmer and more assertive, and she surrendered to an overmastering influence as one surrenders to chloroform, desperately but luxuriously.

And when at the invitation of the melody the whole company in the center of the floor broke into movement, and the spell was resumed, she lost all remembrance of that which had passed, and all apprehension of that which was to come. She lived, passionately and yet languorously, in the vivid present. Her eyes were level with his shoulder, and they looked with an entranced gaze along his arm, seeing automatically the faces, the lights, and the colors which swam in a rapid confused procession across their field of vision. She did not reason nor recognize. These fleeting images, appearing and disappearing on the horizon of Arthur's elbow, produced no effect on her. She had no thoughts. Her entire being was absorbed in a transport of obedience to the beat of the music, and to Arthur's directing pressures. She was happy, but her bliss had in it that element of stinging pain, of intolerable anticipation, which is seldom absent from a felicity too intense. "Surely I shall sink down and die!" said her heart, seeming to faint at the joyous crises of the music, which rose and fell in tides of varying rapture.

Spotsylvania Poor In Care of FERA

Spotsylvania Court House, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—All pauper cases heretofore handled by the Spotsylvania County Board of Supervisors will be administered by the county FERA unit, it was voted yesterday at the supervisors' meeting.

An appropriation of $250 per month was voted to assist the FERA in conducting the county pauper cases. The new arrangement will go into effect October 1 and will continue until December 31. If satisfactory, it will be extended through 1935. FERA work is under the direction of Miss Susan Dickinson.

The board voted $100 and a monthly stipend of $10 for tuberculosis relief in the county. The antituberculosis activity will be conducted by the FERA. The board's action followed a health report which showed an increase of 40 tuberculosis cases in the county from March 1 to June 30.

Child, 4, Hit by Car, Near Death in D. C.

Four-year-old Adell McComas, of Seat Pleasant, Md., was reported near death in Sibley Hospital last night from injuries received earlier in the day when she was struck by an automobile near her home.

Physicians said the youngster suffered a fractured skull and injuries to her back, legs and arms. Lawrence H. Freedman, 27, of the 3700 block of Ninth street northwest, driver of the car, said the child ran into the street and he was unable to avoid striking her. He was not held.

The National Gallery

RICHMOND BOWLING KEECH, member, Public Utilities Commission. An aggressive live wire whose public record has been refreshingly free from partisan connivance, he gave sestful account of himself as people's counsel of the commission. Responsible for uniform rates and zoning system of hack companies, he urged exclusion of interstate buses from congested streets. A native of the District, he comes of a Democratic line from Southern Maryland. Educated at Georgetown and local high schools, where he played football, baseball and basket ball. Youngish, energetic, he takes to horse when duties permit. Saw war service as chief petty officer with naval transports and is present vice president of the District Bar Association.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

No Farmer Willingly Plows Up Part of His Crop

By Robert Quillen.

Ants seem to have intelligence. Whether they are guided by conscious thought or blind instinct, they have an organized society similar to man's.

They make war; they take prisoners and work them under guard; they use tools; they use other insects as cows and drive them out to pasture. And if they climb a post in their line of march instead of taking the easier way around it, there are other creatures who stubbornly pursue a difficult and dangerous course in defiance of common sense and yet boast of their reason.

If ants have intelligence and are capable of emotion, it is easy to imagine one of them surrendering to black despair when some mischance deprives it of a tiny grain of matter invisible to human eyes.

Does it seem absurd that the loss of such a property should be tragic?

Consider, then, the affairs of man in their relation to the universe.

To the Creator of the universe, directing the course of countless stars on their endless travels through space, and viewing the whole of His creation as one vast unit functioning in flawless precision, the earth must seem as relatively unimportant as a grain of dust in a whirlwind.

Yet on this grain of dust, itself scarcely visible in the crowded heavens, a tiny creature "owns" an infinitesimal rectangle of surface called a lot and weeps in dread of losing it.

And in the extremity of its despair, the creature prays to the Creator for some miracle to prevent the tragedy that threatens it.

Does that also seem absurd? Does it seem out of proportion?

Then there is another way to consider it.

There are scientists—unselfish men with honest minds, searching for truth—who raise insects and cross-breed them and endeavor by patient experimentation to develop new types.

To such a scientist the insects are of great importance and a hurt to one of them is tragic to him. It disrupts his plans and keeps him longer from his goal.

It isn't strange that God notes the fall of a sparrow. The humblest plant is dear to the one who plans the garden.

Style Crown Won By Mabel Grasty

Dress Contest Is Held at Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Miss Mabel Grasty, 4-H Club member from Greenwood, wearing a checked gingham street dress, led a group of 28 contestants in contest among Albemarle's 4-H girls for the county style crown, at a revue held here. She will represent Albemarle in the district contest to be held in Charlottesville Thursday.

Running a close second to the winner was Miss Glennis Huckstep, of the Free Union Club.

In a contest for girls under 14, Lorena Hall, of the Gentry Club, took first, and Eva Quick, of Batesville, and Pearl Worley, of Earlysville, tied for second. Miss Worley wore a dress and hat made from flour sack cloth.

Miss Belle Burke, of Alexandria, district home demonstration agent, was judge of the contest. Prizes for the winners consisted of a gold medal for Miss Grasty and a certificate for Miss Huckstep. Miss Hall will receive a dress for winning in the junior class.

Death Rate Low In Charlottesville

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Statistical reports of infant mortality received from the American Child Health Association by the local chamber of commerce show that the Charlottesville rate is the second lowest in the State of Virginia, the lowest being Lynchburg.

The report also shows that the death rate for all ages during 1933 is also the second lowest in the State, being only slightly above Roanoke's rate.

The Child Health Association report covers all of the States of the Union and includes ten cities in Virginia.

Judge Denies Motion To Give Mais Retrial

Richmond, Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Efforts of defense counsel to obtain a new trial for Robert Mais, Philadelphia gangster under sentence of death for the robbery and murder of a Federal Reserve truck driver, here last March, were blocked today, when Judge John L. Ingram, in Hustings Court, denied a motion asking the court to make a formal investigation of alleged threats against a member of the jury that convicted Mais.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

By H. I. Phillips.

The End of the Morro Castle.

The ways of the sea are queer, sir,
And weird are the tricks she'll play;
The things that'll sometimes happen
Are stranger than man can say;
The case of the Morro Castle
Will long among sea tales stand—
When Death waved aside the skipper
And silently took command.

II.

Aye, accidents oft will happen,
And no one knows when or where,
But something besides mere chance, sir,
That night brought disaster there,
And somehow I'm not forgettin'
In thinkin' of that last ride
How Death came aboard at dinner
With brazen, defiant stride.

III.

There may have been nuthin' in it,
And I ain't the man to tell;
But I can't dismiss the "visit"
Before she became a Hell;
The skipper was gay and laughing,
And home was around the bend—
When there mid the clinking glasses
A voice whispered, "It's the end!"

IV.

His face showed a ghastly paller,
His smile swept the ship no more—
He seemed face to face with something
He'd not seen so close before;
I knew as I saw him slumping
He'd finished his last sea trip
And thought it the strangest moment

V.

The lights seemed to dim a little,
The laughter and music ceased
As passengers, stunned and saddened,
Got up from the last night's feast;
They tried to dismiss it quickly,
But spirits were far from light
And somehow I kept repeating,
"There's Death at the wheel tonight."

VI.

No need of my going over
The tragedy dark and grim;
It all seems a frightful nightmare
That can not too soon grow dim;
A roaring of flame and ocean . . .
And screamings that overwhelm . . .
And there through the crimson flashes—
The Visitor at the Helm!

VII.

I've read of a thousand wrecks, sir,
And terrible nights at sea;
They're all in the day's work, mister,
But somehow it seems to me
The end of the Morro Castle
Was weirder than facts denote,
And some evil spell was on her
That last night of hers afloat.

I Made Up My Mind To Get Thin . . and Did!

It was so simple! I ate what I liked, took no strenuous exercises, did not weaken my body with drastic purgatives—yet day by day I felt myself getting lighter, the fat seemed to slip away. Now I have a lovely, graceful figure—and I never felt better in my life!

That, in brief, is what thousands of women who have reduced the Marmola way might well tell you. Four times a day they take a little tablet containing in exactly the right quantity a world-famous corrective for abnormal obesity. —A corrective prescribed by physicians everywhere and acknowledged to be the most effective known.

New Vacation Available Here At Night Clubs

By Kay Ware.

And now comes the season when people all start coming back from vacations
And friends meet on the street, or on a bus, or at a drug-store counter and say, "Hi! How's tricks?" or, "Nice summer?" and similiar salutations;
Then begin the admirations
Of sun-burn, snapshots, summer romantic crushes, knick-knacks picked up
From gift shoppes, or hotel counters, or Pullman trains, and they all are practically useless or somewhat nicked up;
But, all in all, everybody is looking like a rose
And completely recovered from the heat waves that brought the comatose
Sensation in the summer months. So, while they are filled with pep and elation
They want to get out and go places where they can sink deep into contemplation
Of how sweet life is anyway—in spite of the fact that they have to get back to work, and say good bye to this year's vacation.

Home-Town Vacation.

Why not take your vacation in small doses here in Washington? The people who run the entertainment places are standing on their toes trying to make everything delightful. And if you don't believe that, try and see.

If you've been roughing it all summer, and want a taste of a little high-class living, hop over to the Shoreham Terrace and enjoy sophisticated night life. New port in the international cruise: "Night in Hollywood." La Fayette and La Verne offer the "Dance of the Painted Doll." Remember the tune? La Fayette has been doing some very smooth gigoloing to the tune of the song about the answer to the wallflower's prayer.

These two are movie people. Another star of the cinema is Roy Bradley, who doubled for George Raft in the dancing scenes of "Bolero." He and his dancing mate, Arline Abner, put on a Raftero dance, staged especially by the actor, as well as a fox trit and waltz.

Oyez! Let it be known that the Great Maurice will be there to electrify, amaze and make your eyes pop with his magical efforts. He is a dream interpreter, so, if you have one that troubles you, here's your chance for good advice.

A Place to Yell.

To get back to your vacation; suppose you've been spending time with the stiff-backed auntie who invited you up to enjoy a nice refined rest. Need to cut loose and yell? Then yell at the "Drunkard" who is still reeling at the Willard. You can hiss and boo, weep into your beer at the tender moments of the melodrama, then afterward enjoy a good dance or two in the Tavern Club.

Gay place of the Gay Nineties, that's the Willard's Tavern Club.

If gayety was the keynote of your vacation, and the noise of drums is still in your ears, go to the Mayflower Lounge for quiet luxury. It's nice and big up there, after the crowded conditions of night-clubs; the waiters are silent and attentive, the cocktails smooth and excellent.

Another place for peace—Heigh-Ho Tap Room. It's homelike, the paneled walls are restful, you can sit and sip for hours if you like. While on the subject of lounges, the Hamilton's Pink Elephant is another nice place. Yes, it's pink. They give you little cards, making you a member of the Pink Elephant Club or something. Hospitable gesture.

At Club Michel.

The Reyes have it. At least they have something that keeps them booked in Washington for an almost indefinite time. This week they are at Club Michel, and the management is puffing out its chest with justifiable pride.

For Cuba's rhumba, or other South American specialties, you can't do better than Club Michel. The Reyes are almost a by-word for good entertainment.

First shot out of the cannon—La Paree is staging a big opening on the 21st of the month. Emory Daugherty and his orchestra will be back from a summer tour. Billy Rogers will present a 15-star revue called appropriately "Sweethearts on Parade." Two singers, Ray Beck and Marie Fowler, will assist the orchestra. Miss Fowler has been heard with Our Own Godfrey on the air.

This is going to be an eventful day, and La Paree is trying in every way to make it as joyful as possible.

Don'ts on Dining.

Never try to cut into an oven-browned potato. It'll evade you over the table cloth.

Never order a dry Martini after 10 o'clock at night. Your date will patiently tell you it's an appetizer.

Always eat the legs on a soft-shelled crab. If you don't the waiter will look insulted.

If a lady, limit yourself to two or three potato chips with the long drink. Mustn't be a pig. If a man, don't eat any—such fare is too bird-like for you.

If it isn't chicken, and you think it might be duck, don't say "What delicious rabbit!" It might be squirrel.

That red-headed Washingtonian, Susan Hall, who is as full of personality as her feet are of action, is dancing this week at Maryland Club Gardens. You saw her, perhaps, in the Washington Revue, at a local theater. With her, Walter Doe, the youngster with the smile, dances.

Powhatan Roof remains open in spite of threatening autumn. Evenings are still warm, and roofs still appropriate.

Take Pete Macias, a handful of good tunes, a dash of smooth drinks, smart clothes, fine food, good service, mix well together, pour into a spare evening, and let simmer until your heart is joyful.

For Lively Entertainment.

A spot that is jammed, lively, gay and noise-provoking is the Cotton Club. If you like your dance music as fast as possible at the beginning of the evening, increasing in tempo as time goes on, you won't be disappointed here. You can howl and shout and nobody minds.

Tap dancers with intricate steps, a singer of blues and not-so-blues, and a chorus of dancers plus other varied entertainment guarantee that something is going on all the time.

Show people drop around to Macina's for a late snack. Hurried business men call up in advance, and when they arrive their favorite luncheon dish is hot and waiting for them. Travelers who yearn for the cooking of old Italy go to Macina's. Mr. Macina does everything and anything to make his guests comfortable. Item: Moore and Revel, from the Earle, were up there to dinner the other night.

Another after-the-show retreat—the Gingham Club. Dancing and a snack before hitting the hay. Waitresses in short gingham dresses frilled with organdy. Paper festoons in carnival spirit.

It's getting cool enough for horse back riding. Potomac Park and Rock Creek are ideal places for the sport. You can sing "We want Canter" (begging your pardon) under the overhanging trees, and gallop along the level stretches with the wind in your hair.

Opening Next Saturday.

Don't forget Brooke Johns fancy hangout in Olney is opening next Saturday. Better make a date for that night, there will be things going on that one shouldn't miss.

They have indoor flower beds, they say, the lighting fixtures are double yokes once used for oxen. Harness hangs along the walls, doors are copies of stable doors. Horseshoe designs are in the floor, and the whole place is as sporting as possible.

Another vacationist, Al Norton, of the Lotus Restaurant, is back from Virginia Beach, looking a few shades deeper in complexion and several degrees livelier in action. He will bring a smile to the melancholy or a giggle from the pepless.

Floor show includes dance team, Renne and Raymond, who whirl and waltz; Muriel Parker, with a lyric soprano voice, and Audrey Arden, who is limber and graceful, dances all over the Lotus mammoth floor.

Jimmy Lake has opened a new dance, dine, see-a-show and have-a-good-time place. There is discussion as to whether it is called Black and Gold Restaurant, or simply Jimmy Lake's Place. A floor show that is almost overwhelming in size inaugurates the opening. There's a radio pianist, some dance teams, a barytone and a group called the "Five Jerks." Judge for yourself what they may be.

"Main feature," in Jimmy's own words, is no cover, minimum or admission charges at any time.

Field Day Postponed.

Postponement of the annual field day of the Montgomery County Firemen's Association scheduled for September 15 to September 22 is announced by J. Fred Imirie, president. The change is to avoid interference with the convention of the Fire Chief's Association in Hagerstown and the dedication of the Jesup Blair Park September 15.

All Those in Favor Say—

Reyes! Still dancing in Washington, and this week at Club Michel they offer the latest thing in rhumbas.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, jr.

A GOOD brown job has been done by press agents who wanted the public and newspapers to know that Lucrezia Bori, the "Met" opera's delightful soprano, will sing tonight over C. B. S. networks to demonstrate the boasts of a new radio set.

They went to the trouble of hooking a good high-toned crowd of "society" leaders, music critics, diplomats, dowagers and shoe salesmen to appear at one of New York's swagger hotels while Mme. Bori first sings directly to the gathering and then into the new receiver and hence to C. B. S. networks.

You'll hear Mme. Bori's voice as it is picked up by the receiver and relayed into microphones. The effect is intended to be indistinguishable from her actual singing into a microphone.

Makers of the set claim that at last radio has been "lifted to an unprecedented point of accuracy, efficiency and functional enjoyment." It is also claimed that this set will reproduce faithfully the true quality and loveliness of the harp, the viola as distinguished from the violin and the tambourine and triangle, not heard at all in most radios.

The performance will take place during Boake Carter's spot at 6:45 p. m. on WJSV locally. We can't help from shedding a tear when Lucrezia Bori, one of the most charming little singers in opera, is made the accomplice of a press agent stunt. And thanks for the 40 handouts, boys, and you, Dorle Jarmel.

* * * *

CONTRIBUTING a few songs in her own hearty manner, Kate Smith introduces her "Matinee Hour" today on C. B. S. networks at 2 p. m. Tomorrow she also starts a half-hour evening show at 7 p. m. with such numbers as "Swanee River" and "With My Eyes Wide Open, I'm Dreaming."

Cliff Edwards and Parker Fennelly, Jack Miller's orchestra, a male trio and personalities from the sports and film worlds will support our blithe comedienne. The evening spot will be more completely Kate . . . the afternoon hour will allow the hefty lassie free play in the variety show manner.

EUGENE LUTHER VIDAL, the Department of Commerce's number one aviation enthusiast, is one of the most likable and at the same time most paradoxical persons we've ever been privileged to meet. There's a perfunctory listing on WRC's program sheet that says he'll speak tonight at 10:30 . . . but such a swell pilot and booster for aviation as he deserves a better introduction to listeners. So here goes:

"Gene," as he is generally known to anyone caught pacing the corridors of the Air Commerce Bureau, will stop at any time of the day or night to talk aviation with anyone who has been bitten with the virus of propellers, wing flaps or artificial horizons. Entering his office you never expect to find him in, but if he is, "Gene" will pause quietly, calmly with a genial twinkle in his cool eye while you speak your piece.

Dearest to his heart is his young son and almost as dear is development of a flivver plane available to anyone who itches for the control stick. Traveling, he carries a tooth brush, an extra shirt wrapped up in a bundle and that same old hat that adds to the suavity and lithe, catlike walk that's been with him since his West Point football days.

In the forefront of every new aviation development, he, like his brother enthusiast, Col. Lindbergh, never seems to be hogging cameras or front pages. His unique accomplishment is to be everywhere and yet keep himself so modestly concealed that it taxes the Commerce boys sorely to keep track of him.

He has set the pace that's kept his department humming since he's been in office, and tonight he'll reveal modestly and calmly as usual the major developments in aviation during the past year. But underneath there'll be smoldering energy and zest for getting things done comparable to the more publicized actions of the President.

AND don't miss Beniamino Gigli (pronounced Gee-li), that celebrated Don Juan of opera tenors, who sings today from Venice during a presentation of Verdi's "Requiem" under the baton of Tullio Serafin, of the "Met" opera. They're on at 3:30 p. m. from WMAL locally.

"Benny" has the voice that touches off a whole balcony of applause from the spaghetti eaters in the top gallery. His managers never could keep him from spaghetti—so his romantic inclinations are hampered somewhat by a shapely frame.

Kate Smith (ringmaster of her "Matinee Hour")—"I think an effort should be made to recall to popularity some of the grand songs of the past . . . I'll do what I can."

Roxy (inventor of "Ear Pictures")—"Native talent, when it remains natural, is the most valuable asset any radio aspirant can offer."

Anne Elstner (actress, "45 Minutes in Hollywood")—"Fifty years in the theater couldn't give a performer the same thrill that comes after even one year in radio."

Edwin B. Dooley (former Dartmouth quarter back and grid broadcaster)—"Pittsburgh, Princeton and Columbia should be the foremost aggregations in the East."

Courtenay Savage (C. B. S. drama chief)—"Our pick-up of street sounds in London will really be the start of a new world-wide stage-setting technique for radio."

Jeanie Lang (Buddy Rogers' stooge)—"I promise there won't be any more squeaks out of me—only a giggle now and then."

Suit Attacking Hawaii's Sugar Quota Quashed

Neither Island Nor U. S. Agents On Hand; Date Mix-up Claimed.

For "want of prosecution" the suit brought in the District Supreme Court by the Hawaiian Sugar Planters Association to restrain Secretary of Agriculture Wallace from enforcing the provisions of the Jones-Costigan act as they relate to the island's productive capacity, was dismissed yesterday by Justice Jennings Bailey.

The court calendar showed that the case was set for yesterday morning and when it was called, with neither the complainants nor agents of the Government on hand, Justice Bailey ordered the suit dropped.

The producers asked for an order restraining Secretary Wallace from limiting their production on the ground that his regulations were unconstitutional and discriminatory. They asked that the court compel Wallace to give the islands the same consideration given the heavy sugar-producing States in the United States.

They contended they were an integral part of the Union and as such were entitled to the same treatment accorded the States of Louisiana and Florida.

Royal D. Meade, acting for the association, announced Monday that officers of the group would arrive in this country September 19 so they could be in attendance at a hearing on the application which, he said, was scheduled for October 2. There was evidently a slip-up, however, because no one appeared in court yesterday to ask for a continuance of the order requiring Mr. Wallace to show cause why he should not be enjoined from temporarily halting his efforts to enforce the curtailment of Hawaiian sugar.

Judge Marion DeVries, local representative of the association, said last night there "must have been a mistake made." He said a stipulation had been filed with Justice F. D. Letts postponing the date of the hearing to October 2. He said he would seek to have Justice Bailey set aside his order of dismissal today.

Appeal Made On Assessment

Van Ness Street Case Is Carried to Supreme Court.

The Van Ness street widening case—on which a decision adverse to the District would upset its entire condemnation plan—went to the United States Supreme Court yesterday.

The action is being taken by a group of property owners in the vicinity of Van Ness street and Wisconsin avenue who are protesting against assessments for benefits. They include William J. Nealey, J. H. Hedges and 25 others.

The property owners, represented by Attorneys Paul Lesh and Dion S. Birney, are contending that the fact they were given no opportunity to appear in the matter of assessments against them was depriving them of the Constitutional rights.

The District Court of Appeals has previously held that they were without authority to maintain their suit against the District Commissioners unless the condemnation proceedings operated to their prejudice or fraud was practiced in the awards.

The Court of Appeals also declared that the Commissioners assumed almost half of the damage and costs for the District and relieved the complainants to the extent of an additional assessment of benefits.

Sharp Decrease In Rum Imports

August Set Low Record Since Repeal.

The flow of distilled liquor into this country from abroad slowed to little more than a trickle in August, setting a new low record for such imports since repeal, the Associated Press reported.

The Customs Bureau yesterday set the total of distilled liquor imports at 301,806 proof gallons, a decline of 11 per cent under the preceding month.

Although less liquor came in, more passed into trade channels than in the previous month. In all, 381,373 gallons of imported liquor were released for consumption. Still in customs bonded warehouses are 4,445,081 gallons.

Imports of both still and sparkling wines also set a new low record for repeal. Duties collected on liquors and wines in August totaled $2,097,412.

$3,000,000 Loan For Lehigh Valley

Third Allotment Granted Railroad by PWA.

Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes yesterday announced an allotment of $3,000,000 for a loan to the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co.

The money will be used by the company to build 1,900 freight cars in its shops at Sayre, Pa., where the company's shopmen will receive more than 4,000,000 man-hours of employment, and to purchase three diesel-electric switching engines.

This is the third loan to the Lehigh Valley. The first, of $2,000,000, was made last winter to give employment to the company's shopmen at Sayre and Packerton, Pa., on the job of repairing and rebuilding 2,000 freight cars. The second, of $600,000, was to enable the company to purchase five new locomotives, which are being manufactured by the Baldwin Locomotive Co. in Philadelphia.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

A. F. G. E. Convention, New York, Sept. 11.—Speaking for the President, before the American Federation of Government Employes' representatives, Mrs. Roosevelt pointed to the day soon when the Federal workers will be the pattern for all employers and employes throughout the country.

Mrs. Roosevelt's speech was the highlight of the second day's session of the A. F. G. E. convention, which is scheduled to close Wednesday night.

Demise of the National Federation of Federal Employes within three years was implied in a speech of Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, who predicted that all Government employes would be under one banner, that of the American Federation of Government Employes. It is recalled that the N. F. F. E., the largest and oldest Government employe organization, withdrew from the A. F. of L. three years ago. The A. F. G. E. was formed by the former N. F. F. E. members who desired to remain affiliated with the A. F. of L. The 16-year-old N. F. F. E. has more than 500 local unions throughout the country and has reported increased membership in the past year.

Membership Tripled.

The A. F. G. E. has more than tripled its membership in the past year; established a weekly house organ and many other labor features.

Mr. Woll pledged the A. F. G. E. delegates the renewed support of the A. F. of L. in every demand for improvement of the status of the Government employe, stressing the 5-day, 30-hour week as most vital. The entire prestige, power and influence of the A. F. of L. also was pledged again toward achievement of full restoration of pay and leave and all other A. F. G. E. demands.

The picketing fight which has been boiling in discussions off the convention floor is expected to burst on the floor Wednesday. E. Claude Babcock, A. F. G. E. president, made a plea at the opening session to place an official ban on picketing or other physical demonstration protests.

While the recent picketing of the Commerce Building that followed the dismissal of John L. Donovan, president of NRA Lodge, has not been mentioned openly, that incident is recognized as the raison d'etra of Mr. Babcock's move.

McLane Leads Proponents.

Proponents of picketing, who term it the one powerful force left to Government employes to effect favorable legislation, are led by Clarke J. McLane, Library of Congress; Mr. Donovan and Henry Rhine, TVA. Mr. Donovan, while not a delegate, is taking an active part in the convention.

Reports are widely prevalent among the delegates that the charter of NRA Lodge will be revoked. Mr. Donovan, president of NRA Lodge, No. 91, was reinstated after being dismissed by Gen. Johnson on charges of inefficiency and absence from duty. He was publicly exonerated by the Labor Review Board. He and his colleagues are regarded by many of the AFGE delegates as being "leftists," "radicals" and "Communists."

Mrs. Jessie Eliot Perez, Commerce; LaRue E. Tanner, president of Internal Revenue Lodge (second largest AFGE unit), and George J. Simmons, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, will lead the majority of delegates standing unequivocally against any physical demonstrations against the Government.

The social features of the convention, under direction of the New York lodges, reached a climax Tuesday night with a gala banquet, entertainment and ball at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Members of the Washington delegation will entrain for home at 6:40 p. m. Wednesday, arriving on the Western States Limited of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at 11:25 p. m.

Thank you first for the flowers and then I think that what I have really come here to do today is to say just a word of greeting not only for myself but from my husband to you. I am very much interested in Government employes. You have a great responsibility. You are also in many cases in a position to make the Government an efficient and a moving machine. You can do it purely as a routine thing or take a great interest in what is happening in the Government and make it a real life piece of work.

I think that because of the fact that you have these responsibilities with the Government, the Government also has great responsibilities toward you, and I do believe that sometimes government does forget quite what its responsibilities are. But I hope very much that we are going to move forward in this country to a realization that the Government employes are really the pattern for all employers and employes throughout the country and that it may be in our ability to talk to each other and tell each other what our mutual interests are and what we would like to do.

Wants Clear Understanding.

I hope that we may be able to work out a very clear understanding. I think very often that it has been the case in the Government that the space between the Government as an employer as represented by the head officials and the employes themselves has been very great because they go on and on and on and very often they hardly know the people who may be formulating policies on which they work and you may be carrying out ideas in which the employes may not even be conversant with. I think that that is a very great mistake and I personally would like to see a very much closer tie between the Government officials and those who represent the Government as an employer and the actual employes who carry on the work from year to year. When we get that we are going to be able to do a great many things which have not so far been possible.

I am a great believer, as you know, in people knowing each other and people talking to each other about their difficulties, their problems and their aspiration, and I hope we will be able sometime to get that over all the Government and see how efficient we can make the Government as an employer and as a group of employes because, as you know, it is often said that people who work for the Government get in grooves and don't give the maximum that is in them to the Government. I think that comes from the fact that they don't have the opportunity to know what is happening in the minds of the people for whom they work.

"Best in World."

Therefore, I would like you to start out on a real campaign on getting together as a whole and see if altogether we can not make the Government machinery of employer and employes the very best in the world. If you do we will have a very happy family. I hope that all of you see your work as a growing interest as the years go on, for nothing is worth doing which doesn't continue to give you interest and stimulation. I don't think that there is any work that can be done for money alone which is worth that, unless with it goes real interest in what we are accomplishing and real joy in what we are doing.

Thank you, and I am glad to have been with you.

Convention Postettes.

Honoring the memory of John J. Manning, head of the union label department, American Federation of Labor, who died early in the summer, a resolution of tribute was adopted by the AFGE delegates. The resolution was sponsored by George Warren, president of Interior Lodge, No. 35, who recited a laudatory poem at the conclusion.

One of the busiest delegates is Dewey E. Dent, of Lodge No. 127, Fort Worth, Tex. Mr. Dent also represents the Wichita Falls and Dallas lodges. He will pilot six resolutions through the convention.

A veteran delegate who knows how to get action on her resolutions is the calm and alert Miss Helen C. McCarty, of Navy Department Lodge No. 1. Miss McCarty has attended all three AFGE conventions and was thrice a delegate from the District Department, American Legion, to National conventions. In addition to Miss McCarty, the Navy unit is exceptionally fortunate in its delegates, having Michael D. Schaefer, president of the AFGE District Department, in New York.

Midsummer atmosphere prevails in the convention hall—sultry weather—perspiring men shedding their coats—women wearily draping their furs over round-backed chairs, only to have them slide off and the procedure repeated ad infinitum—smoke-filled rooms—droning undertones of conversation, rising to spirited arguments here and there—rap, rap, rap of President Babcock's toy gavel—"the convention will be in order"—resolutions, credentials, resolutions, Washington problems, resolutions, National problems, resolutions, field activities, salaries, leave—enthusiasm, hopefulness, fraternal spirit.

Colored employes are being ably represented by George H. Rycraw, of Interdepartmental Lodge, No. 20, who is accompanied by Mrs. Rycraw.

The largest delegation is from Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 47, consisting of LaRue E. Tanner, president; Ira Y. Bain, Miss Inez Justus, Mrs. Maude Anderson, Miss Marguerite Hughey and Raymond A. Babb.

Individually, it is also the most active delegation. Mr. Tanner, who is being boomed to succeed Michael D. Schaefer, Navy, as president of the District Department, is at the helm o' piloting through several resolutions. Mr. Bain is somewhat in the role of good-will ambassador, as is Mr. Babb. Miss Justus and Mrs. Anderson are keenly interested in that part of the convention business affecting the status of the women employes. Miss Hughey is acting secretary of the delegation and liaison officer. This vivacious young woman from Arizona is a thorough organizer and is proving to be one of the most popular attendants at the convention.

Dr. Emma H. Eichelberger, only delegate from District Building Lodge, No. 87, is sponsoring legislation to help the Government per diem employes. Dr. Eichelberger was confined to her room the first evening of the session by a sprained ankle. However, this energetic woman was back in the midst of the convention business Tuesday and was one of the delegates who escorted Mrs. Roosevelt to the speaker's platform.

A six-hour day, five-day week for all Government employes will be requested in a bill to be introduced in the House in January by Representative Martin J. Kennedy, Democrat, Eighteenth New York District. The measure also will apply to all persons employed on projects financed by the Government.

Among other bills Mr. Kennedy plans to introduce are Government guarantee of savings bank deposits, Federal supervision of interstate bus lines and employment of American citizens on American ships.

Germany Pares Imports, Acting To Save Credit

Schacht Is Made Economic Dictator in Drastic Program.

Berlin, Sept. 11 (AP).—Into the hands of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Reich economics minister, Nazi Germany today plumped complete control of all imports.

A financial and economics dictator whose powers already were virtually without modern parallel, the tall, angular president of the Reichsbank will supervise closely all phases, no matter how minor, of the nation's foreign trade in his effort to bring the fatherland safely through the rigors of the approaching winter.

The "new Schacht plan," announced today by Dr. Fritz Sarnow in Schacht's behalf, seeks to save the government's depleted currency reserve through restricting imports.

The existing control departments will be increased to 25 and the ministries of economics and agriculture will supervise the departments for distribution of foreign currency permits.

Germans who previously could buy 50 marks ($20) worth of foreign goods without permits henceforth may purchase no more than 10 marks ($4).

The new control departments will carry into active practice the aims enunciated by Dr. Schacht soon after he was elevated to the economics ministry, replacing Kurt Schmidt.

Because Germany's imports from such countries as the United States, the Netherlands, Japan, Great Britain and Denmark exceed exports, Dr. Schacht will seek to readjust Germany's trade balances with those nations. He will strive either to promote purchases from Germany, or, failing that, limit imports into Germany.

U. S. Credit Expansion Program Is Discussed

Examiners of 90 per cent of the Nation's banks yesterday discussed plans for aiding the Administration's credit expansion program by the separation of sound loans of relatively long duration from those whose eventual repayment is considered doubtful, the Associated Press reported.

As a result of the two-day meeting, it was indicated that methods of examination by various Government agencies would be coordinated. The idea would be to relieve banks of cause for hesitation in making loans for fear that their value might be judged by different standards.

Takoma Park's Liquor Ballot Is Halted by Justice Letts

restraining order, called off the proposed vote.

Surprised by the issuance of the order, District officials postponed decision on their future course until this morning. Then E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, and E. Vernon West, principal assistant corporation counsel, are to gather with the Commissioners to discuss the situation.

"We have three courses of action open to us," Mr. Prettyman said.

"First, we can abandon the whole proposal for the balloting. If that course is followed the Commissioners and the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board will decide each application for a license in the section on its individual merits, following the same course they have pursued in dealing with other applications.

Could Make Appeal.

"Second, we can appeal from the order. This appeal would be taken to the Court of Appeals.

"Third, we can seek to push through to a final decision on the temporary restraining order issued by Justice Letts.

"What course will be followed I do not know. A decision probably will be made at a meeting of the Commissioners Wednesday morning."

Asked whether he was surprised by the issuance of the order, Mr. Prettyman said:

"Was I surprised? I certainly believed we were right under the law before the plan was launched. The court took the same view of the law I did. The court took a different view of the facts, however."

George E. Sullivan, attorney for the Takoma Park drys, disagreed with the reasoning of Justice Letts.

"Not only is Justice Letts' criticism of Commissioner Allen without the slightest warrant or justification, in my judgment, but his conclusion to restrain altogether the holding of this referendum on account of the views expressed by one of three Commissioners is wholly without support in any authority with which I am familiar," Mr. Sullivan said.

His statement follows:

"Justice Letts' decision recognizes the authority of the District Commissioners to inquire (through a referendum) as to the wishes of the residents of Takoma, D. C., with respect to licensing of liquor stores in that area. Yet he undertakes to restrain altogether the conduct of the pending inquiry or referendum because he is of the opinion, from a published statement by one of the District Commissioners, that that particular Commissioner will give undue weight to the result of the referendum, namely, by being guided wholly by it instead of taking it into consideration as one of the elements in determining the public interest.

"It should be obvious to everyone that Commissioner Allen had thoroughly considered all other elements entering into the public interests concerned and had satisfied himself that they would be best subserved by keeping the Takoma, D. C. area dry, provided the residents there wished it to be so kept. In other words, Commissioner Allen held the same opinion with regard to the public interests involved in keeping this particular area dry that Congress itself held when exempting it in the Jones-Works act of 1913, but Commissioner Allen wanted to be sure as to the Takoma, D. C. sentiment behind its enforcement before finally deciding the matter.

"Not only is Justice Letts' criticism of Commissioner Allen without the slightest warrant of justification, in my judgment, but his conclusion to restrain altogether the holding of this referendum on account of the views expressed by one of three Commissioners is wholly without support in any authority with which I am familiar. Under the authorities, the District Commissioners could disregard Justice Letts' order as being wholly beyond the court's jurisdiction and an interference with political and legislative matters, but the practical and more satisfactory method of dealing with Justice Letts' order will be by the prosecution of an appeal to the Court of Appeals, which should, and doubtless will, receive the very early consideration of that tribunal."

Abyssinia Held Endangered in Italian Move

Educational Adviser Sees African Nation Pawn in European Diplomacy.

The educational adviser to the government of Abyssinia and tutor to Crown Prince Asfa Wassan, Dr. F. Ernest Work, history professor at Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio, is now gathering material in the Congressional Library for a book to be entitled "Abyssina as a Pawn in European Diplomacy."

As an authority on the affairs of this last bit of independent territory on the continent of Africa, Dr. Work is concerned with the reported concentration of Italian forces on the borders of Eritrea and Italian Somaliland, two of Mussolini's protectorates.

Aside from the sentimental concern at the threatened disappearance of the only independent kingdom in Africa, Dr. Work foresees a diplomatic impasse springing from the provisions of a treaty signed in 1906 by Great Britain, France and Italy which "guaranteed" the independence of Abyssinia to the extent of binding the signatory nations not to attack without the knowledge and consent of the others.

Italy's offensive gestures may provoke action from the Paris or London foreign offices, Dr. Work said yesterday, that may reveal Il Duce's actions in his East African protectorates as simply a pawn-move to force an exchange of privileges in the European arena.

"For instance," said Dr. Work, "Italy may desist when the French foreign office demands an explanation, but on the understanding that its subsequent advances in Austria will not be questioned by France."

Dr. Work, who was graduated by the Universiay of Michigan in 1908, has just returned from two years in the palace of Haile Selassi I in Addis Ababa as tutor to the royal princes and as organizer of the empire's public school system.

Route 40 Fund Move Forecast

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 11 (Spl.). William T. Byron, a member of the State roads commission, told the board of directors of the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce he believed the State Planning Commission would recommend to the next General Assembly appropriation of sufficient money to begin a program of modernization of the main highway arteries of the State and that one of these would be Route 40 between Hagerstown and Baltimore.

The chamber, which is urging the rebuilding of Route 40, also known as the National highway, had invited Mr. Byron to discuss the subject.

The chamber directors were told that Maryland's main highways have suffered because of the program of building of lateral or "feeder" highways and now that this program was nearing completion, the modernization of main highways would be started.

Mr. Byron urged that the chamber combine with chambers of commerce and other civic bodies in towns along the proposed new Route 40, in urging legislators to provide an appropriation to start this work.

He said the proposed new National highway would probably be 30 feet wide, with additional 10 foot concrete shoulders on each side, with a right of way between 75 and 100 feet.

Rain Washes Body of Boy From Sewer

Indianapolis Lad Had Been Gagged and Shot Twice.

Indianapolis, Sept. 11 (AP).—Bearing bruises plainly indicating that he had been the victim of a slayer, the body of 13-year-old Donald Edward Dillon was washed today from a South Side sewer by the waters of a heavy rainstorm.

The lad had been shot twice in the head. A handkerchief was crammed in his mouth. His left hand was scorched as if he had been tortured with a hot wire or thin poker and there were marks on other parts of his body.

Three workmen, repairing a bridge over a stream into which the sewer empties, took refuge beneath the structure when the storm broke. The storm waters pouring from the sewer washed the boy's body past them and they recovered it from the stream.

Donald had been missing since Sunday night from his home near the bridge. His mother, Mrs. Dimmie Dillon, had asked police yesterday to aid in a search for him. Taken to the creek bank she identified her son.

Mrs. Dillon had reported yesterday to police that her son disappeared Sunday night after playing in the yard with her two other sons, Leroy, 12, and Harold, 7, and her daughter, Hazel, 15.

She said she had made no report Sunday night because she believed her son, in a fit of boyish wanderlust, might have gone to the home of his grandmother in another part of the city.

Dear Mr. Hyman:

You no doubt will be interested in learning the results of the presentation of the "Home of Three Centuries" which the Washington Post sponsored at Albemarle Street and Linnean Avenue.

An accurate check of the persons who went through the house during the four weeks ending August 31st shows the astounding number of 4,017. Perhaps this might not seem successful to you, but when you take into consideration that the home was exhibited during the month of August when the vast number of persons who under ordinary circumstances would be interested are either on their vacations or taking the week-end trip which is so popular with Washingtonians. Another element which worked against us was the fact that on the first Sunday it rained all afternoon, on the second Sunday it rained in the morning and on the third Sunday it rained all day.

Under the circumstances as outlined above we are immeasurably pleased with the results which your publication obtained for us.

Thanking you for the splendid cooperation rendered us by you and others associated with your paper, we are,

Very truly yours,

Sacred Heart Shrine Scene Of Wedding

Miss Mary Dorsch Bride of Mr. Tattersall in Church Rite.

Couple Leave to Embark From New York on Wedding Cruise.

The wedding of Miss Mary Catherine Dorsch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Michael Dorsch, to Mr. Eric William Tattersall, son of Maj. and Mrs. Henry Charles Tattersall, took place yesterday morning at 11 o'clock in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart.

The church was decorated with pink and white gladioli and ferns. Garlands of the gladioli roped off the aisles. On the altar were seven-branched candelabra holding tall ivory tapers. The Rev. Father Charles McGonagle, O. P., of the Dominican Order, performed the ceremony.

Mr. Dorsch gave his daughter in marriage. She was wearing her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin, which had a vestee and high boned neck of old point Viennese lace. The sleeves were of alternating bands of satin and Viennese lace. Rosettes of the satin held the softly draped folds of the skirt, which terminated in a circular train. Her veil of tulle was held in place by a coronet of the lace and she carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Sister Maid of Honor.

Miss Regina Dorsch attended her sister as maid of honor. She had a becoming gown of aquamarine satin made on long lines with a ruffled train of aquamarine tulle. With this she wore a large picture hat of golden brown satin and carried an armful of Talisman roses and bronze dahlias.

The bridesmaids were Miss Anne Beach, Miss Eleanor Akers, Miss Mary Jane O'Donnell and Mrs. Edwin Josef Madill.

They wore satin gowns made on the same lines as Miss Dorsch's gown, shading from pale peach to deep orange. They also had hats of golden brown satin and carried armfuls of Talisman roses and dahlias.

Attended by Brother.

Mr. Harold Mills Tattersall served as best man for his brother and the ushers were Dr. Leo Donovan, cousin of the bride; Mr. Thomas J. Fitzgerald, jr., Mr. John Thomas Morgan and Mr. Edwin Josef Madill.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The young couple were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Dorsch, who wore a handsome gown of emerald green velvet trimmed with chinchilla fur, a large hat of gray velvet and a corsage of orchids; and Mrs. Tattersall, mother of the bridegroom, who wore a gown of royal blue velvet with a matching hat and shoulder cluster of gardenias.

Girdles Help Stout Women Become Slim

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WOMEN with good appetites and extra poundage are hard put when the reducing question arises. Their sylph-like friends look at them disapprovingly when they yield to dessert temptations, and their families nag them eternally about the calories. Some of them strike out with firm determination to exercise morning and night. When this routine proves too trying they turn to walking, and from walking to dieting, and from dieting to despair.

There are others whose health won't allow strenuous exercises, and still others whose health won't allow dieting.

In a sad chorus both groups bewail the difficulty of reducing and cry out for some easy method.

In answer comes this cheerful news from a local store: The manager of the corset section announces some new girdles which not only keep the form in perfect shape but take off extra weight at the same time.

Benefit in Two Weeks.

"This may sound too good to be true," said the manager as she held up one of these marvels for inspection, "but dozens of my customers have told me they were all they're cracked up to be!"

Certainly these customers would have no ulterior motive in boosting such merchandise. One of them said she had worn hers only two weeks before she noticed quite a difference for the slimmer in her figure.

As long as stout people have to wear girdles anyway, they might as well wear a kind that reduces them.

Besides, these girdles cost only one dollar!

Pomade for Wilted Lips.

Wind-worn lips are all that lips shouldn't be. Even the finest lipstick cakes on them. The skin peels and, all in all, they offer an unattractive sight.

A beautician who never fails to meet one's needs as the seasons bring them on offers a splendid pomade stick that may be applied under the lipstick to give the lips that smooth, satiny finish that lovely lips should have. The pomade comes in attractive metal cases that keep it fresh the winter through.

Premium With Perfume.

The purchaser of two grams of any imported perfume at a local shop will be presented with a lovely cut glass bottle topped with an atomizer. Ordinarily these sell for 50 cents each.

Magnolias for Winter Vases.

After fall housecleaning is ended a woman begins to look around for attractive ways to decorate her home for the long winter months close at hand.

If she stops at the artificial flower counter of a downtown store she will see some beautiful large sprays of magnolia, looking for the world as though they had just been torn from the tree. These are the very thing for a large mantel vase or hall jardiniere.

A Russian princess who once took it upon herself to brighten up a dark and dreary room of her palace wrote that she found white flowers were by far the most effective means. These magnolias are not only white, but they're lovely and graceful too.

English Hair Brushes on Sale.

English hair brushes are commonly regarded as the zenith of hair brush perfection. Ordinarily, however, their steep prices play into comparatively few hands.

Right now those who have wanted an English hair brush but felt they couldn't afford one should see those specially priced in the toilet goods department of an F street store. They have a fine quality of bristle, but these have more, smooth, sturdy satinwood backs. They are only $2.50 for the time being. Other brushes in a variety of styles and sizes are $1.45.

Gold on China Is Smart.

Styles seldom restrict themselves to one field. No sooner had the news come from Paris and Hollywood that dresses would be vivid affairs with more than a little metal trim, and makeup would be incomplete without gold and silver-flecked eyeshadow, than displays of gold coated china began to brighten up the store counters. One F street store has a case given over to the lovely Pickard china painted over with 22 carat gold. Pieces of this packed in rich-looking velvet-lined boxes will make an interesting and welcome gift.

Opener Also Closes Jars.

A two-way jar opener has two excellent usages. It's fine for those who want to avoid the struggle it usually takes to open a jar of jelly, preserves or pickles and equally handy for those who want to put the top back so that the jar will remain air proof.

Nothing could be simpler to use. A strange flat contraption fits over the jar. If the handle is turned one way, the top comes off. If it's turned the other way it is put on tightly.

Twenty-five cents for this little helper.

Capital Kitchen

By Susan Mills.

IT'S almost time to be thinking about school. And it's high time mothers were planning good school lunches. Children who hurry home for quick meals should have special consideration.

The noon lunch, whether eaten at school or at home, should include one substantial warm dish beside its glass of milk and a good-sized serving of green vegetable or fruit. This main dish may vary from soups to sandwiches, or include creamed dishes or scalloped dishes. This is the ideal place to use one of the valuable protein foods so necessary in the child's diet for building new body tissue.

Meats supply one of the very best sources of protein for the active child. Proteins from animal sources are conceded to be most valuable for growth. Outside of a little care in selecting lean rather than fat meats, in choosing mild rather than highly seasoned meats and to use methods in their cooking that will not toughen them, the child may have almost any kind that the rest of the family enjoys. For younger children the noon meal is the ideal time to serve meats.

Vary the warm lunch from day to day; a toasted bacon and tomato sandwich for one day, a creamed ham mixture on toast another day. Hot dishes which the hungry boy or girl will absorb with gusto are escalloped potatoes with bacon, baked liver loaf with tomato sauce, spaghetti with ground beef and tomato sauce, creamed dried beef and hard cooked eggs served in toast boxes, vegetable beef soup or cream of potato soup seasoned with thin slices of frankfurters.

Any of these dishes will be just as tasty to the rest of the family, too. Here are some recipes for hot lunch dishes:

Baked Liver Loaf.

Cook one pound of liver in boiling water for 5 minutes. Drain and grind. Add 1 cup bread crumbs, 2 tablespoons tomato ketchup, 1 tablespoons chopped onion, 1 egg and the juice of ½ lemon. Season. Mix well and turn into a loaf pan lined with bacon. Bake slowly for 1 hour. Serve with tomato sauce.

Fur and Soft Lines Give New Sports Clothes Dressy Look

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Women are certainly due to look prettier in their new fall sports clothes than sports clothes usually make them.

You've seen the new dressier sports coats . . . the ones cut like dressy coats with fur put on in soft, dressy ways. And there are soft, dressier sports hats to wear with them.

And they are not all cloches and berets, either. Though those are both very smart sports hats . . . two of the very smartest in fact.

They can be soft, too. The berets larger than they were and considerably detailed . . . with tucks or seams or ribbon inserts. And the cloche (and there's your golf hat) with a tucked, or seamed or crushed crown to soften its crisp outlines.

But newer, and dressier, than either of these are flatter looking hats with quite shallow crowns and medium wide brims. They'll be stitched . . . with row after row of stitching . . . or trimmed with ribbon bands and perky little bows.

A hat of this type is sketched at the lower left in the illustration and you can easily see that it's a type that is becoming to many, many women. One, too, which can be worn both with tailored tweeds and with the more softly tailored general daytime dresses. A real practical hat, in fact.

Another kind of sports hat which has the dressier look that goes along with dressier sports coats makes you think a little of the cloche. (That's the hat shown at the upper right in the illustration.)

Higher Crown.

But its crown is a bit higher (and that's new when most crowns are quite shallow) and its brim has a little roll to it where the real cloche brim dips down.

In this particular sketch the crown isn't really so high as it looks. But there are upstanding tucks which give it an illusion of height. And the perky feather trim does the same thing.

Puppets Fill Gap in Games On Rainy Day

Children Make Own Dolls Out of Corn Husks, Nuts and Apples.

THE age-old childish plaint, "Oh, Mother, what'll I do next?"—the rainy day phobia of all mothers everywhere—can be answered more successfully by scrapbooks and puppets than by ready-made toys, no matter how elaborate and new.

These noble standbys of youthful entertainment can be given a new twist, however, to make them more intriguing. Puppets, for example, are usually a flop if children try to make them on too ambitious a pattern. Try making dolls out of corn husks, nuts or dried apples. Hickory nuts make funny faces if you use the pointed end for a nose with the embellishments of paint for eyes and mouth. Cornsilk stuck on at judicious points makes hair or beards, even sideburns if your child has a Civil War hero.

Dried apples are more plastic material for faces. There are soft enough for the clever child with a dash of talent in modeling to pinch cheeks and chins into some semblance of reality. Pine cones, small ones, can be pasted on for noses and berries used for eyes. The entire head can be attached to a clothes pin, which is, of course, the body.

As for scrapbooks, you can work in a little education and yet give the child a good time. Geographical scrapbooks might even give him a head start on the geography class when school opens.

Tie dyeing is another of those occupations designed to entertain and instruct the child; if not to teach him anything of much positive value, yet to encourage his inventiveness.

So don't give him ready-made dyes. Vegetables will do. Beet root juice makes a vivid red; water in which carrots have been boiled produces a pale yellow, and pounded spinach (children enjoy showing vindictiveness toward this vegetable) gives an adequate green.

Use rags and tie them around a pebble or a button. Dip them in the dye and then untie. Children can get happily covered with lurid shades and do little that's decorative to the rags, but they'll have a lovely time at it.

HUNDRED GRAND

By Erle Stanley Gardner

Annette Morton, adopted daughter of C. Harvey Morton, has been kidnaped and with her Sylvia Galen, social secretary to Mrs. Morton. Terry, of the U. S. Bureau of Investigation, and other detectives are at odds in the handling of the case, which has not yet been announced in the newspapers. The story has only just begun; you can pick it up from this point.

THE big Horton house blazed with lights. Uniformed police stood guard in the grounds. A row of automobiles was parked at the curb. Newspapermen waited in a compact group, besieging the police for information.

In the big high-ceilinged library—a cheerful fire crackling in the grate, shelves of richly bound volumes stretching tier on tier—Mr. and Mrs. Morton sat in conference with a group of officers.

The poise of Millicent Morton had dropped from her completely. She was quivering with nervous emotion. The C. Harvey Morton who had dominated directors' meetings was now only a haggard individual who stared helplessly from his wife to the officers.

Detective Frank Mayer asked most of the questions. Capt. Arthur Carr listened attentively. Lieut. Pelton took copious notes. Roger Terry sat at the far corner of the table with an expression of complete detachment on his face. He might have been a spectator sitting in a front row, watching a carefully rehearsed play. Harvey Oxeman, a private detective, seemed bursting with his own importance.

Parents Unknown.

"The child was adopted?" asked Mayer.

"Yes," said Morton. "My wife and I never had children of our own. We adopted this child."

"Where was she adopted?"

"In San Francisco."

"Did you know her parents?"

"No. Her mother had released her to one of the asylums. But that doesn't make any difference, does it? In other words, all of this stuff doesn't have to be made public?"

Oxeman said importantly, "You never can tell what's going to be a lead."

Mayer ignored the comment and asked, "Can you fix the exact time that they left home?"

"No. I don't know exactly when it was—some time the first part of the afternoon."

Woman Talked.

"And it was a woman's voice that called you over the telephone and told you about getting the ransom money?"

"Yes."

"You should," said Capt. Carr importantly, "have notified the police right then. All of this delay is helping the kidnapers. If you'd got in touch with us right away we'd have broadcast the kidnaping over the radio, and instructed every police car to keep a sharp lookout."

Roger Terry's voice sounded a little bored.

"Don't you think, captain," he asked, "that it's invariably the rule that kidnapers never make a ransom demand until after they have the victim in a safe place?"

Might Be a Blind.

"There's a chance," Oxeman volunteered, "that this was the kid's real mother that wanted to get her back. May be it ain't a regular ransom snatch, and the ransom business was just a blind."

Terry turned uncordial eyes to the private detective.

"How did you get in on this business anyway?" he asked.

"Morton employed me," Oxeman said.

Terry looked inquiringly at Morton, who explained, "The man told me that he had a live lead he could follow up, and that it wouldn't cost me anything if he didn't get my daughter back."

"He wanted to chisel in on the notoriety," said Terry, "and get his name in the papers, with the chance of picking up a little easy coin by riding along on the work the officers did."

"That ain't so," said Oxeman aggressively.

"Well," countered Terry, "if you've got a live lead, where is it?"

Detectives at Odds.

"I don't have to spill all of my stuff to you and let you bust in and take the credit," said Oxeman.

Terry got to his feet.

"Well, gentlemen," he said, "I think there's no necessity for prolonging the agony with the parents. I think we all understand each other perfectly."

"What I want to know," Capt. Carr asked, "is whether you boys are going to work with us."

"Just what do you mean by that?" said Terry.

"Whether you want to pool information."

"Can you guarantee that information we give you won't reach the newspapers?"

"Reasonably so."

"Let's put our cooperation on this basis," Terry remarked thoughtfully. "If we want the police to do anything to cooperate with us, we'll ask to have it done. If you want us to cooperate with you on anything you ask us."

"In other words," said Capt. Carr, "you're not going to pool information. You're going to hold out on us."

"I wouldn't go as far as to say that, captain, but we're going to handle this thing in our own way."

"Why, don't you trust us?"

Terry glanced significantly toward the child's parents.

"I think we're going a lot too far in this present discussion, captain. But since you've raised the question, I feel that you can't give us any definite assurance that you can keep anything from the press."

Harry Oxeman spoke up eagerly. "I'm perfectly willing to cooperate. Anything that my operatives uncover, I'll place at your disposal."

His offer was greeted with contemptuous silence.

"I think we understand each other," Terry said, and turned to Mr. Morton. "I'm going to want a room here in the house, Mr. Morton," he said. "Some place where I can stay and be constantly on the job."

Not a Chiseler.

"I'll want to keep a couple of men here," Capt. Carr added.

Oxeman stared steadily at the police captain and said, "Look here, Captain, I know you think I'm horning in on this business, but lots of times a private agency can do things that the officers can't do. I want it understood that I'm working for Mr. Morton, and I want it understood that I'm a regular licensed private detective in good standing. I want to be able to come and go from this house as I please. You fellows think I'm a chisler. I don't give a damn what you think. I'm making a living and I'm going to do these people just as much good as you are. Now if I'm going to have any trouble getting through the police lines, I want to know it now."

Capt. Carr sighed wearily.

"Okay," he said, "you can come and go. If Mr. Moton gets any satisfaction out of hiring you, I'm not going to deprive him of that satisfaction."

Morton Perplexed.

Morton cleared his throat and looked in puzzled perplexity from one to the other.

"It seems to me, gentlemen," he said, "that the primary function of the various police officers is to get my child back and not to fight over a lot of petty matters."

"If Capt. Carr would leave our men in charge," Roger Terry suggested, "and simply let us call on him for * * *"

"I've got the responsibility of this thing," Capt. Carr said. "You don't figure in the public mind at all. You don't figure in the press. I'm not going to subordinate myself to any one where I can't avoid the responsibility."

"How about the telephones?" Morton inquired. "You've got some one on the line taking care of that?"

"That's all fixed," Capt. Carr assured him.

Morton was insistent. He said, "How am I to know that I get all the important messages?"

Trust Is Essential.

"You've got to trust us, Mr. Morton. I give you my word that we'll pass through any message that has to do with ransom, or has to do with your child. Right now you're being deluged with telephone calls from people who are giving a lot of bum leads, from a lot of chiselers who want to horn in on the case, from a lot of newspaper people who want interviews. There's even been one party who wanted an indorsement of some sort of a burglar alarm."

Mrs. Morton got to her feet and stared at the officers with eyes that were dazed with grief, but which held a trace of belligerency.

"See here, gentlemen," she said, "this is our chold. There's a hundred thousand dollars' ransom to be paid. We've got the money. We want to pay it. We can't get in contact with the kidnapers while all of you people are thronging around the house. The kidnapers aren't fools; they know this. Why don't you go away and let us get our child back? Then you can do anything you want to try to catch the kidnapers."

"Because the story's in the newspapers," Captain Carr answered, bluntly. "Something your chauffeur said to a traffic officer started an inquiry, and the newspapers picked it up. No matter what happens from now until the child is returned, you're going to have the white light of publicity focused on this house."

What Today Means

"Virgo."

IF September 12 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. to 12 noon, from 2 to 4 p. m. and from 6 to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 a. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m and 8 to 10 p. m.

This day may prove coducive to giving into tempation to make excuses for avoiding interviews. This might prove a poor and costly policy. Unless there is a good reason for not seeing callers, complications may result that might require a great deal of valuable time to straighten out. In money matters it may be advisable to avoid haggling, as it might possibly be productive of hard feelings and disgust. Should a friend try to divert your attention from business to indulge in play it may be good judgment to consider carefully the consequences. You should make or receive some money if diligence is exercised on this date. It might not prove auspicious for speculative ventures, or games of chance. Social activities should be carefully planned and formality should be avoided if possible. Invitations issued through a third party may be misconstrued or lost. There may be an influence at work on this date that might cause confusion in personal affairs, if one is careless.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those engaged in courtship, can not afford to be cantankerous with each other, so it might be well to be careful what you say and how you say it.

If a woman and September 12 is your birthday, you may have every right to have an optimistic feeling about the future. Financial affairs may take an unexpected turn for the better. Little worries probabaly will be dissipated. Courage and faith should be cultivated to a high degree, for these two traits will possibly prove the foundation on which your success will be founded. In domestic affairs love may play a vital part in your future happiness, so it might be best to develop a receptive state of mind regarding it and before you spurn it, think twice.

The child born on September 12, when young and in its teens, may be a rather enigmatical type of youngster. It probably will develop a great deal of depth of character and have a reserve force of energy that may be astonishing.

If a man and September 12 is your birthday anniversary, you may be inclined to be a silent type of mortal. Your intellectuality and ability will bring you success and money, if you are not too self-contained and will allow the world to recognize your gifts.

Middle-Class Paris Starts Commuting

Parisians are taking to commuting. Until recently almost every person who worked in Paris lived in Paris. But within the last year large numbers of the middle-class have moved to the suburbs and dash as frantically to catch French suburban trains as New Yorkers do to catch the "5:15."

Even when the commuters are prosperous enough to own private automobiles, they use the new electric trains, according to a correspondent of the London Sunday Observer.

The only drawback to living in the suburbs of Paris is the lack of educational advantages for the children, reports the correspondent. There are only three "lycees" for boys in the suburbs and none for girls.

Tourists See London For Price of Penny

Want to see London on a penny? It can be done—providing you're in London. Miniature tours of the city including the Houses of Parliament, Westminster Abbey, the National Gallery, County Hall, and Cleopatra's Needle may now be had for 1 penny.

The conducted tours leave every few minutes from Waterloo station. Visitors to London claim the tours are well worth the cost. Sightseeing has picked up considerably since the penny price went into effect.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

"Pop-Pop-Pop-Pop-Pop."

Most everybody knows what popcorn is, but Benny and Jenny didn't. Neither did Bettie nor any of the others. And they certainly didn't know anything about a popper. When Blackie brought the wagon up with all of those things in it, there was a bag of popcorn and a popper in it, but the ears of corn were such little things that they didn't look like they were even good enough to feed to Hee-Haw, and so they got stuffed back somewhere and were forgotten.

Bettie had been cleaning up and moving things around in the kitchen that day, and in moving the bag of little corn about, some of the grains had fallen on the hot stove, and of course they popped open and jumped off and danced around on the floor. It scared Bettie, and she couldn't imagine what was the matter with the little grains, and so she threw the bag back on the shelf. But the corn had danced around in such a funny way that she couldn't get it off of her mind, and so she threw some more grains on the stove. Just as soon as it got hot, it blew up into a big white ball just as the others had done, and it flew off on the floor and danced all around. When she saw that it couldn't hurt anybody, it looked like something that she might get some fun out of, and so she decided to play a trick on the crowd, and she picked up the grains that were on the floor and put them in the fire.

When Grandma came in from the garden with her apron full of butter beans, she wanted to know what Bettie was snickering about.

"Oh, it is nothing," Bettie said. "I was just thinking how scared people get sometimes over tiny little things. A piece of wood popped in the stove just now, and I jumped just like somebody had hit me, and I was laughing over how foolish I was."

But she was still foolish all through supper, and Grandpa wanted to know if she had hit her funny-bone on something. He never had seen her in such a giggling humor.

When supper was over, and the dishes had all been washed and put away, Bettie got some of the popcorn out of the bag and told them all to come in the kitchen and see some fun. She said she had heard of snowdrops, and she always thought they must be some sort of round drops of snow, but now she was sure that they were made on the fire and were hot instead of cold. That sounded mighty foolish to the crowd, and they all grinned about it as much as Bettie had been doing, but they came in the kitchen to see what was going to happen.

Bettie took a few grains of corn and threw them on the stove, and in a minute they popped open, turned right white and hopped off on the floor. Then Howler grabbed an ear of corn and just stripped the grains off on top of the stove and they began to pop like so many firecrackers, and hop all over the floor. Grandma had begun backing toward the door when Bettie put the first few grains on the stove, and when Howler threw all that lot on, the "pop-pop-pop" was just too much for her, and she backed faster. But now Benny and Jenny began backing faster still, and they backed into Grandma so fast that they backed her out of the door, and the lot of them fell in a heap down the steps and on the ground. She still didn't tell them a thing about the way the first grains had scared her. But Howler was looking around on the shelves, and directly he came out with the popper.

"I knew that if Mr. Man bought popcorn he got a popper, too, and here it is," he said. "Now come on to the fireplace and I will show you how to use it."

"Well, well," Bettie said, "and I thought that thing was some sort of a sifter."

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Radium Poisoning.

FROM time to time reports of radium poisoning appear in the public press. Cases of radium poisoning will occur whenever the victim has taken radium into the body either by mouth or by injection. It is now believed that even tiny fractions of radium remain permanently in the body and the rays constantly emitted produce radium poisoning.

The use of radium in the treatment of cancer must not be confused with radium poisoning. Radium emits the alpha, beta, and gamma rays, and in the treatment of cancer only the gamma rays are used. The alpha and beta rays are filtered out by means of metal shields. When radium is taken by mouth, however, the dangerous alpha and beta rays are free to act and continue to do so probably during the lifetime of the patient.

Radium solutions have been used to some extent in the treatment of gout, arthritis, cancer, and other conditions. A tiny fraction of radium is thus deposited by the circulation of blood forming areas and the resulting irritation brings about an increase in both the red and the white cells, with an apparent improvement in health. Unfortunately this increase in cells is but temporary and is quickly followed by a drop and anemia ensues.

Radium taken by mouth is most dangerous and many will recall the deaths reported a little more than a year ago following the use of a patented radium water.

Little progress has been made in combating radium poisoning. The best means now devised employs the intensive use of calcium accompanied by parathormone from the parathyroid glands. Experiment has shown that patients can lose under intensive calcium therapy about one-half the body radium.

Solutions of radium for the treatment of internal diseases must be used, if at all, with great caution. In fact, all radium preparations should be used only by those highly skilled in this special field.

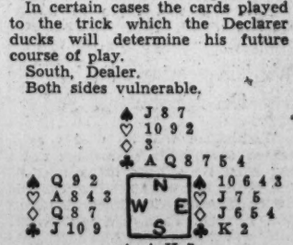
The "Sink or Swim" Duck and Finesse.

It is easy enough to duck if one is confident of being able to swim out, and to take a finesse when it does not mean the difference between success and complete disaster; but when a line of play means either everything or nothing, many players get what the hunters call buck fever. Often the Declarer's contract will depend upon risking a finesse when, if the finesse loses, not only a trick but the entire suit will be lost. Thus, in the following diagram, when the establishment of the suit is vital to the success of the contract, the Declarer must proceed boldly in a line of play which will result, if the cards are not distributed exactly as he hopes, in his never winning a trick even with his Ace.

If North has no entry, and two tricks in clubs are not sufficient South must lead the club three and duck, playing neither of North's honors. If North had the lead instead of South, North would simply lead the five of clubs and allow East or West to win it. Now, when South regains the lead, the six of clubs will be led and the Queen finessed. If East holds the King South will never win even one trick in clubs, though Dummy holds the Ace. If the Queen wins and the Ace clears the suit, then the suit has developed five tricks. There may not be much hope that this will happen, but where it is the only chance it must be attempted.

In certain cases the cards played to the trick which the Declarer ducks will determine his future course of play.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1◇	Pass	2♣	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Against the three-no-trump contract West opens the heart three, on which Dummy plays the nine. East the Jack and South the King. South now leads the club three, West plays the nine, Dummy the four and East the deuce. West cleverly continues with the club Jack immediately, hoping that South, by inverse psychology, will suspect him of attempting some sort of ruse and will finesse. The first club trick, however, was most enlightening for South. East allowed West to hold the trick with the nine, whereas if East had held the Ten or Jack, regardless of what other cards he might have had, he would surely have overtaken the first trick to lead a heart, for East could have no way of knowing that West held the Ace of hearts, and if South held the heart Ace and West the heart Queen, West could not continue the suit without presenting a trick to North's Ten. Following this line of reasoning, South can read two possible distributions in clubs—either West originally held K J 10 9 and East a singleton, or East now has the unguarded King. In either case the suit can not be brought in if the Queen is finessed, so Dummy's club Ace is put up. As it happens, the King falls and South takes 11 tricks.

Even if South's reasoning had been wrong, if East had followed to the second club but had not played the King, the hand could still have been made against practically any distribution. North would simply have led a third round of clubs and South would have dropped the heart Queen. Upon regaining the lead South would have led a heart and it would have been very difficult for East and West to avoid either letting Dummy in with the Ten of hearts or establishing the eighth and ninth tricks in diamonds.

Tips Given on Care Of Knitted Suit

Vacation From Wear Best to Restore Shape.

The care and feeding of the knitted suit should be carefully studied before purchase of one of these long-lived but rather fragile costumes. The laissez-faire method of skirt rejuvenation—simply turning the skirt around so it bags slightly in the front instead of the back—is a helpful thing to know in emergencies but is only the rudiment of the science of preserving the suit intact for years.

The "Women's Wear Daily" offers these suggestions:

Never hang on a hanger any sort of heavy knit. Lacy knits particularly react unbecomingly; the shoulders stretch into small points and the skirt, if the weather is even faintly damp, will grow several inches longer.

Fold knits in tissue paper the way careful packers do and put them away in a drawer.

When the skirt becomes slightly baggy, and even the most expensive do, the best thing to do outside of having it reblocked is to give it a vacation from wear. A little rest and it'll come around into shape. Home steaming will help.

Apaches Leave Cabaret When Sign Is Changed

American visitors in Paris used to shudder delightedly as they entered the Cabaret des Assassins, famous as a rendezvous of terrible apaches. Now the tourist can visit the same restaurant minus the shudders because its name has been changed to Le Lapin Agile. In other words, The Agile Rabbit. When the old sign Cabaret des Assassins was removed the apaches went with it. When the rabbit appeared, literary men and artists began to frequent the place.

Only Child Found Free of Handicap

Chicago Survey of 100 Shows Them Normal.

Only children are neither backward nor peculiar, science has concluded. In a study presented to the American Psychological Society at its recent meeting at Columbia University, New York, Dr. Paul A. Witty, of Northwestern University, showed that the only child, far from lagging behind his fellows, frequently surpasses them.

Dr. Witty made a survey of 100 only children and of 100 children with brothers and sisters, all students in Chicago high schools. The two groups were found approximately equal in 18 measures and ratings of physical development, in social and economic status, and in test-intelligence.

Buy Cantaloupes, Housewives Urged

They'll Remain Stable in Price, Say Experts.

(Associated Press.)

The city housewife, who can not step into the garden and pick fruit for the table, is advised by the Bureau of Home Economics to buy plenty of cantaloupes, grapes and bananas in the immediate future.

There are plentiful supplies of the three fruits. They can be expected to remain comparatively stable in price in the face of a rising trend, reports indicate.

Cantaloupes are plentiful this year because, for the most part, they were aided rather than harmed by the sun which destroyed many crops.

In choosing cantaloupes, say the department's fruit specialists, pick those with none of the stem left on the melon. The ripe melon comes off the vine almost at the touch, leaving a smooth place where it was attached. The bureau also warns against depending on the old-fashioned test of pressing the melon at the stem end. The melon which is picked green often "goes soft" and will yield to pressure exactly as the vine-ripened fruit does.

Grapes should be a good source of fruit for the woman who is watching the food budget, since there is a good supply. But apples, due at this time of the year, are not so plentiful, except in the Far West, says the bureau.

Fruits are extremely valuable in the diet, say food experts, because they help the body to preserve the necessary margin of alkaline. They offset the acid effects of bread, cereals, meat, fish and eggs.

Almost all fruits supply the vitamin C, and vitamins A and B are also found in cantaloupes, watermelons, grapes, bananas and yellow peaches.

Mexico City Divorces Made Only for Export

Lawyers Fattening on United States Trade in Land of Lifetime Weddings Typical of Bizarre and Enchanting Contrasts There.

Travelers today are turning from Europe to discover the charm of Mexico. This exotic country has become a mecca for tourists, artists, honeymooners, divorce seekers and students. What is the spell Mexico weaves around its visitors? Following is the first of a series of articles on Mexico by a member of the staff of The Post Woman's Page.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 11.—The average United States citizen visualizes Mexico as a barren, sun-scorched wasteland dotted with adobe houses, decorated with cactus and a few snow-covered peaks and inhabited by men with either bandit or bull-fighting proclivities.

"But we haven't had any honest-to-goodness bandits for a half dozen years," protested a native, "because our government is now what we want. Contrary to what most foreigners think, we are a very peaceful people, few of us even trying to be matadors.

"And as for women doing all the work—well, look at that fellow crossing the street."

He pointed to a bronze-colored, barefoot man in a wide-brimmed hat trotting along the sidewalk, balancing a fruit-filled basket of amazing proportions on his head.

"Probably on his way to the market plaza, where he will work until midnight," continued the native. "And about the scenery. Where is the wasteland?"

Charm in Contrasts.

Where, indeed? Certainly not in or surrounding Mexico City, where multicolored roses, pansies, asters, geraniums and carnations scent the air with fragrance. Where the heavily-foliaged elms, willows and eucalyptus trees of the plaza compete in beauty with long-fronded palms that line the wide streets.

Yet the charm of Mexico lies not so much in its colorful scenery and ideal weather as in its contrasts. Tropical plants are outlined against a background of snow-crowned peaks. The most modern automobiles glide by burros loaded with alfalfa. Women wash clothes on rocks of a stream that flows within sound of an up-to-date laundry.

A rudely constructed wooden plow swings between two oxen in a field crossed daily by an airplane. On one corner in the capital stands a modernistic building, the tallest in the city. Half a block away, on the opposite side of the street, is the low House of Tiles, dating from the early seventeenth century.

Newlyweds and Divorcees.

In the heart of the capital on the edge of the Almeda Plaza is the National Theater, completed in 1934. Its famous Tiffany glass curtain is a modern achievement in the most suitable of modern settings. But only 25 miles away, at Teotihuacan, are ancient pyramids erected to the gods of the sun and moon, larger at the base than the pyramids of Egypt, remnants of a civilaztion so ancient its dates have never been determined.

Even the visitors constitute studies in contrasts. Students doing research work and attending the university ride in trolleys with tourists bent only on pleasure. Honeymooners select the same hotels as persons seeking divorces.

"I believe, though, we have more newlyweds than divorce seekers," said Thomas S. Gore, founder of the Geneve, the largest and most complete hotel in the entire republic. "If they continue to come Mexico will soon replace Niagara Falls and Atlantic City as the mecca for honeymooners, just as it is rapidly forging ahead of Reno for those wanting divorces."

Mexican divorces, incidentally, seem to have been designed especially for citizens of the United States.

No Divorce Market at Home.

"We don't want them here," said a saleswoman in Mexico City's largest department store. "And we don't need them. When we marry in Mexico, it is a lifetime proposition."

"If my living depended on the divorces I get for Mexicans," said a prominent attorney in the Capital, "I would have to enter another line of work."

No greater variety of types can be found anywhere in the world than in "The Zocalo," the principal street of Mexico City. Bordered on the north by the most important cathedral in Mexico and on the east by the National Palace, "The Zocalo" is now, as in the past, the scene of military parades and fiesta celebrations. It is, too, the place where high officials rub shoulders with peons; where itinerant vendors display their ties, shoes, hats and candies before independent shopkeepers; where worker, beggar, Indian and foreigner walk, eye each other, come closer, and then probably converse and trade.

"Now You Offer."

Colorful figures are seen, too, at the market plazas where everything is bought and sold—pottery, fruit, vegetables, flowers, medicinal herbs, furniture and clothing.

Here, as in many stores, bargaining is the unwritten law. The buyer who stops to look at sarapes will see the stolid, fathomless face of a wrinkled Indian woman light up with expressive smiles.

If the buyer asks, "How much?" the quick response as to price will invariably be followed by "This is the asking price. Now you offer."

At Xochimilco, 15 miles from Mexico City, women and little girls do most of the selling. Sometimes they display their flowers before their thatched dwellings. More often they carry their wares closer to the bridge where the boats start down the canals.

Hot Dog Stand—Mexican Style.

Visitors, upon arriving, are surrounded by small girls carrying bouquets of violets and pansies. At temporary stands women cook enchillades, bake tortillas and roast cracknels over charcoal fires.

Men, too, are busy at Xochimilco. Barefooted and wearing huge sombreros, loosely fitted shirts and trousers held at the waist with colorful sashes, they pole the flat-bottomed, flower-decked boats down the canals fringed with tropical flowers, straight willow trees, fruits and farm products now growing on square plots of ground that were once the floating gardens the Indians planted on huge rafts.

But even here is a contrast. The boat so leisurely plying the canal must be rowed to the side occasionally to make way for a Mexican speedboat.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Is there any cure for a philandering man? I am engaged to marry a man whom I deeply love, but don't trust where other women are concerned. He loves me, I know, but that doesn't keep him from brightening up with intense interest every time a new girl comes on the scene.

• • • •

I am a quiet, bookish sort of person and the bond which drew us together was an intellectual one at first. I am not particularly good looking, and my fiance is the kind of man who is tremendously interested in good-looking girls. He pays court to every good-looking girl who comes his way, until he finally tires of her and returns to me. I don't mean to say he neglects me for other girls, exactly, but it is obvious I can never occupy his mind to the exclusion of other women. If it wasn't for this, I would say we were ideally suited to each other.

• • • •

I am very jealous of him, perhaps because I am so plain and he is so attractive; but I have managed to keep him from knowing it. But how would it be after marriage? Is there anything I can do to tactfully overcome this heart-breaking tendency of his? DORCAS.

Like Cures Like.

DEAR DORCAS: The only cure for a philandering man is to be wedded to a philandering woman. Since you quite obviously don't qualify for the latter role, I'm afraid you will have to accept your fiance for what he is, or reject him altogether.

• • • •

Yet thousands of plain women have married equal thousands of flirtatious heartbreakers and managed to be happy. How did they do it? By counting themselves fortunate to have the man at any price, sharing his name, his home, his fortunes, treasuring the crumbs and crusts and occasional slices of attention he thoughtlessly tossed them from time to time; and by shutting their eyes to, and discounting, the importance of passing other women in his emotional life by playing a mother role, more than a wife's.

• • • •

But these were phlegmatic women. It may be that in some obscure manner their latent vanity was flattered by other women's obvious and unavailing interest in their husbands—unavailing, that is, to the extent of breaking up their homes.

• • • •

As a matter of fact, when the flirtatious man does dare marriage, it usually is with a plain woman, perhaps because she is such a hen-like foil for his chanticleer strutting, and once married, he usually stays married. He can flirt without entailing serious responsibilities, unless his wife takes a notion to rebel.

• • • •

However, to a proud, sensitive, love-hungry woman, a flirtatious husband can be a crucifying experience. His attentions to other women will be a constant affront to her bleeding ego, and in the end will make of her a bitter, inhibited, neurotic, insanely jealous wife—or a divorcee with the same unpleasant characteristics.

You must analyze your own nature, and act accordingly. M. H.

Beauty Alone Fails to Lure, Says Actress

True Charmers Are Good Talkers and Listeners, She Asserts.

By Frances Mangum.

AS THE divorce mill continues to grind, many women find its grist gives food for thought. Irene Dunn, cinema star, holds that the majority of divorces go to women who are physically attractive.

"How does one account for that?" she queries. "Is it because they're listless and lazy, or just don't give a darn?"

"In my opinion it's a question of personality," she declared. Like many others, Miss Dunn feels beautiful women are too often content with themselves as they are, and believe mere pulchritude is sufficient unto itself.

Outshine Beauty.

Women who have less claim to physical charm cultivate another kind. In so doing, it is generally agreed, they far outshine mere beauty.

"After all," asserted Miss Dunn, "beauty is but skin deep, and, what's more important, its appeal is of the same thickness. It wears out rapidly unless, of course, it is backed by personality."

"My advice to girls who would cultivate another charm than beauty is: read good books, learn to appreciate music and above all be interesting conversationalists and alert listeners."

The Essentials.

Ten thousand girls who met this year in Cleveland under the leadership of Miss Virginia R. Wing discussed ten qualities of genuine charm, which they felt was more essential in an attractive woman than mere good looks.

These qualities are: 1. Alertness. 2. Good temper. 3. Vitality. 4. Belief in self. 5. Sympathy and honesty. 6. Genuine respect and appreciation of others' efforts even when not in your behalf. 7. Cleanliness. 8. Harmony of dress with coloring and type. 9. Buoyance of mind. 10. Intelligent use of artificial aids to beauty.

Instead of a set of commandments these are suggestions for the individual to ponder over and apply to her own problems as she sees fit.

Bee Can Sting and Live To Sting Another Time

It has always been something of a comfort to a person stung by a bee to think, "Well, it hurt him more than it did me." For years, popular belief has claimed the worker bee died soon after stinging. But now Dr. J. G. Myers, of the Imperial College of Tropical Agriculture, Trinidad, West Indies, has proved that a bee can sting and then live to sting again.

Dr. Myers, who is now in London, has made several experiments with bees. He learned that only once out of every three occasions when a bee was induced to sting a handkerchief did the bee lose its stinger. He has also seen several kinds of insects stung more than once by the same bee without any damage to the latter.

Extravagant Esthonians.

Many an American bride has been accused of "burning money" soon after her marriage. In Esthonia the bride is encouraged to do so—literally. When she first enters her new home the bride throws money on the fire. It's an old Esthonian custom.

Beauty is but skin deep with an appeal of the same thickness, says Irene Dunn.

Oval Toques To Reappear With Winter

"Touseled" Heads Return With Circular Veils and "Pill Boxes."

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (AP).—Oval toques with fore-and-aft lines perched on "tousled" heads are described by Marjorie Howard fashion commentator, as one of the new winter trends.

The return of the circular veil to be worn with toques as well as pill-box hats is also predicted by Miss Howard.

"Fur caps are also important," she said. "As for brimmed hats, the Tyrolean or fedora influence is still at work for sports wear, with quills and feathers to give them added height," she said.

"Large brims and both raised and low crowns are being made, their importance depending on the acceptance of the heavy fur collar."

Feather Trimming.

Aigrette and ostrich feather trimming will feminize winter hats, and veils will add softness and novelty, she said. The visor-shaped veil, lace and patent-leather chin straps and a few bonnets were other millinery innovations classified by Miss Howard.

Wide adoption of the curly fringe and the chignon of curls has doubtless killed this fashion for the smart woman, she indicated, and in its place may come "the tousled style of hairdressing and with it the fluffing-up gesture which women haven't done for years, but which female impersonators always think they do."

"High shoes to be worn with Russian suits were the surprise sprung by Worth at his recent Paris opening," she continued. "They were of black suede, strapped with black kid and laced up the side. To be becoming, they must either meet the skirt top, or be worn with dark stockings.

Oxfords Come Back.

"The high line in low shoes, covering most of the instep, holds the attention this year. Heels are neither high nor low. The oxford is a growing favorite because of its comfort, and is worn even with afternoon clothes.

"Gaiters and spats have come back, to the joy of women with vulnerable ankles.

"Discretion is the important thing in gloves. Novelties for evening are long, made of satin or moire with puff tops. But you will be right with or without them.

"For daytime there are fabric gloves attached to the sleeves of the coat, and fur gloves to be worn in place of a muff."

Bizarre shapes in buttons, cameo-head buckles and diamond clip earrings worn at the tip instead of the lobe of the ears were other details noted by the fashion commentator.

Chinese Fortunes Told By Soles of Feet

The lines of your feet tell just as much as the lines in your hands to Chinese fortune tellers. In the land of silk and poppies the fortune tellers read the lines on the soles of the feet in addition to those on the palms of the hands.

PILLAR to POST

SHE WAS young and pretty and so her faux pas was forgivable. It happened at her first party at Fort Myer, when there was a tea-dance after the garrison review in honor of the Mexican polo-ists.

She had been thrilled by the gallant cavalry and artillery regiments passing by in the bright sunshine, with the flags of the United States and Mexico flying side by side in token of friendship.

She had been awed by the extraordinary beauty of Senora de Limon, wife of the Mexical general, who graced the reviewing stand. And on her way to the hop room at headquarters, where the tea-dance was to take place, she stopped on a stair landing to examine a battle-scarred flag that was reverently preserved in a glassed-in frame hung on the wall.

• • • •

"Tell me," she inquired of young Lieut. Alexander McCone, a military aide at the White House, who came dashing up the stairs in company with several Mexican army officers, "what does this mean?"

He paused. She pointed to the legend, which should have adequately explained the flag to her.

It read: "Presented in 1848 by the ladies of the New Orleans gallant regiment which, from its landing at Vera Cruz to its entry of the famed City of the Montezumas, has been foremost in every battle sustaining by the valor and sacrifices of its officers and men the flag of our beloved country."

• • • •

At the moment many dark skinned young Mexicans in olive drab were rushing by the White House aid and the pretty young lady.

"Haven't you ever heard of the Mexican War?" softly answered Lieut. McCone. "I wouldn't bring that up now," he chided, smiling into her eyes.

In His Park.

Tickets are being rapidly sold for the epic matches between the Mexican Army polo-ists and the United States Army team, and many high officials have purchased boxes—but the Secretary of the Interior is not one of them.

"Honest Harold," when solicited over the telephone by a member of the polo committee, chuckled that inasmuch as the games are going to be played in his park (Potomac Park is under the jurisdiction of the Interior Department) he ought to get a box free.

Aztec Slippers.

The most intriguing slippers seen this summer were worn on the small and slender feet of Senora de Limon. They were embroidered in an Aztec design of orange, green and gold. But few people could transfer their gaze from her wonderful, liquid dark eyes to notice the slippers.

Among the more striking of the Latin beauties at the Fort Myer tea dance was the tiny wife of Lieut. Barksdale. She was born in Cuba and christened with the pretty name of Graciela. Of course she speaks Spanish and was busy entertaining the Mexican polo-ists who speak no English.

Serenade.

Mrs. W. H. Colburn, another pretty Army wife who was an American girl raised in Mexico, was pressed into service entertaining the Mexicans, with Mrs. James Duke, who also speaks Spanish.

They performed so well the Mexicans declare they are coming back some evening to serenade them. Wonder what their husbands will think when they hear the strumming of guitars under the windows of their domiciles.

Christening Ceremony Broken Up by Guest

For the first time in the history of the Christian church a christening ceremony was broken up recently in London. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Davis were in the midst of having a name bestowed upon their child. Just as the ceremony had gotten under way an uninvited woman guest, a former friend of the parents, interrupted the proceedings.

Reason for the sensational interruption: the child was not being given the name chosen for it by the uninvited guest, a Miss Gertrude Edmunds.

One Last Woman Holds Lighthouse Tending Job

Work Becomes Too Strenuous for Feminine Keepers With Increased Use of Machinery, So Federal Government Culls Them Out.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

IN THIS day of women engineers, doctors, farmers, aviators, dentists, even barbers, there remains one line of business in which women have failed to make any headway. As lighthouse keepers they have gone backward, losing what little advantage they once had.

Twenty years ago a number of women kept beacons lighted night after night to warn boats of hidden reefs, shallows, and other dangers. Today there is only one woman lighthouse keeper regularly employed by the United States Government, according to George R. Putnam, commissioner of lighthouses.

The lighthouses are no fewer, Mr. Putnam added. But, with only a single exception, they are tended by men. The exception is Mrs. Fannie M. Salter, a motherly-looking soul nearing 50 who keeps a light burning on Turkey Point in northeast Maryland.

For nine years Mrs. Salter every night at sunset has climbed to the top of the little tower of the Turkey Point lighthouse, a gleaming lamp in her hand. Every night for nine years she has placed the lamp carefully inside the big lens so its guiding rays might shine far out over the waters.

Succeeded Husband.

"The Turkey Point station, situated not far from the entrance to the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, guides boats plying between Baltimore and Philadelphia," explained Mr. Putnam. "A good many small boats on their way from Baltimore up the Susquehanna River also pass by Turkey Point. So, while the station is a small one, it's important. It's 101 years old, by the way."

Mrs. Salter inherited her job, after a fashion. Her husband had tended the light for years. When he died in 1925 she asked to be appointed in his place. She finally received an appointment from President Coolidge.

"At that time we were gradually replacing women lighthouse keepers with men," said the commissioner of all lighthouses. "The mechanical apparatus had reached the point where it was hard for women to handle it. The amount of machinery at the stations has increased year after year. Gasoline launches have replaced rowboats. Many fog signals are operated by compressed air, which means heavy wheels, sometimes five feet across, have to be turned to set the machinery in motion. It takes a big, husky man to do the work. And then, women are rather helpless in lots of ways." A smile tempered his words.

Women Fail as Tinkerers.

"It's like this," he continued. "If the roof of the tower or of the light tender's house needs repairing we have to send a crew of men to do the work when a woman is in charge of the lighthouse. But if the keeper is a man all we need do is send him some shingles and roofing paint. He'll fix the roof himself. And he'll tinker with broken machinery until he has repaired it. Women aren't much good as tinkerers."

Keeping the light burning every single night from sunset to sunrise is only part of the job of tending a lighthouse, Mr. Putnam explained.

"Whenever the light is obscured by fog or snow the keeper must see that the fog signal is in operation. At some stations the signal is a bell. Cranking the bell's mechanism is about three times as hard as cranking a Ford and each cranking is good for only about three hours. You can see what a dandy time a woman lighthouse keeper would have on a foggy night. She would have to keep that bell ringing, no matter how many times she had to crank it.

"And that isn't all," he continued. "If anything went wrong with the mechanism she'd have to strike the bell by hand. There have been cases where lighthouse keepers stood outside and rang the fog bell by hand for 24 hours at a stretch without a minute's relief. In nasty, cold weather, too."

Good River Lamplighters.

Although he doesn't favor women as lighthouse keepers, Mr. Putnam admits they can hold their own when it comes to river lamplighting. Boats are guided on navigable rivers by lamps mounted on posts instead of by lighthouses.

"A good many women are employed as lamplighters, especially along the Mississippi and Ohio," said the commissioner. "Some of them have held their jobs for 30 years or more. Most of them live on small farms close to the water. That's why they got their jobs—because they live along the river. When the Government needs additional lamplighters the captain of the Lighthouse Service's supply vessel takes a trip down the river and negotiates with whomever lives nearest the place where the light is to be placed."

River lamplighters are employed on short-term contracts, usually for one year. In most cases the contracts are renewed year after year.

"The pay isn't much, but then the work isn't much either," said the lighthouse commissioner. "As a rule each woman lamplighter walks only a few steps from her house to hang the lantern on the post. Some of them have to row a mile or two before they can place their lanterns. The ones who have only a few steps to go are paid about $5 a month. The ones who have to go mile or so get about $10. That money comes in mighty handy to those river-front women. Some of them have had to depend upon that small cash income for their own and their children's clothing.

"Aside from the money it brings in, the job seems to have a certain fascination," he continued. "Once a woman begins carrying a lighted lantern at dusk to a tall post on the water's edge, she wants to keep on doing it night after night. I've never known one to get tired of the work. The romance of the thing gets them, I guess."

Movies Dictate Students' Taste In Literature

High School Survey Shows Filmed Novels Most Widely Read.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (Spl.). The majority of the books read by high school students are those they have first seen on the screen of the local movie house.

This is revealed by a recent survey conducted among 500 girls and boys at the Abraham Lincoln High School Annex, and described in the current number of "High Points," board of education publication.

More high school girls and boys read novels than any other form of literature, the survey reveals. Louisa May Alcott is the favorite author among girls, and Conan Doyle the favorite among boys. The favorite novel of both boys and girls is Sinclair Lewis' "Arrowsmith."

"That Arrowsmith heads the list in both cases," says Jesse Grumetter, who conducted the survey, "is not so much owing to the fact that Sinclair Lewis was awarded the Nobel Prize for literature as that it was one of the outstanding talkies of the last two or three years. The power of the cinema to stimulate the reading of good books as well as trashy ones must not be underestimated."

"The novel," says the report, "is decidedly the most popular type of literature among boys as well as girls, 71 per cent of the latter preferring it, as compared with 57 per cent of the former.

"It is interesting to note that travel literature, while little read, is six times as popular among boys as among girls. The wanderlust is more commonly found among men than among women. Lowest on the list of preferences stand poetry and biography. Only one girl and eight boys out of the 500 expressed a preference for poetry. These figures attest to the frankness of the answers, for even high school boys and girls know that to claim a love for poetry is to place oneself in an ethereal plane where dwell the so-called intelligentia.

The survey showed that boys read more than girls. The weekly average for the boys was three and nine-tenths books, as compared with two and one-third for the girls.

Intent to Kill Charge Made By Grand Jury

John Howell to Face Trial; One of 70 Indicted Here Yesterday.

Seventy indictments, most of them charging the commission of lesser offenses, were returned by the District grand jury yesterday. In three cases the grand jury reported that there was insufficient evidence upon which it could return an accusation.

John Howell, colored, was charged with having shot Abraham Lipshultz, storekeeper, of 206 Fourth street southwest, because the latter told him he could not sell him liquor. Howell was named in one indictment charging assault with intent to kill, and in another with assault with intent to rob.

The grand jury was told that Howell entered Lipshultz's store August 15 and asked to purchase liquor. He was told that the sale could not be made because it was after the closing hour and he then asked for beer. When he was informed that it was too late for beer also, he allegedly drew a gun and demanded that Lipshultz open the cash register.

The proprietor ran toward the rear of the store and Howell shot him twice, once in the arm and once in the chest.

Another indictment charged Florence Virginia Craig, colored, with shooting her husband, Robert Craig, also colored, August 25 at 2818 Robinson place southeast. The woman told police her husband had beaten her. Two colored men, John E. Jackson and James Gaskins, were accused of robbing the delicatessen of Samuel Chaikin, on Vermont avenue, August 28. They are accused of snatching $55 from the cash drawer.

Those indicted were:

Garner W. Windle (two charges), Charles Beal, Normand A. Marnard, Robert Brown, Upton Dorsey, Frank Morris, Alice Carter, Robert N. Langston, Annie Bell, Turner Landor, John Thomas, and Sidney Harris, violation liquor taxing act of 1934; George E. Ward, James R. Peed, Henry C. Alexander, William E. Metz, Lawrence E. Cook, and William Thomas, joy-riding and grand larceny.

Bowman (two charges), joy-riding; Fred Faison, Joseph Dawson, Adella Broomfield, Eva Graham and John Edward Jackson, assault with a dangerous weapon; Donald J. Hamilton and John Howell, assault with intent to commit robbery and assault with intent to kill.

Edwards, Ray Allen, Essex Morean, John Kidd, Robert Wilson, George Carter, Jesse W. Springs, Leroy D. Washington, George M. Washington, Frank Mooreman, and Henry D. Mosby, and Horace Potts, receiving stolen property; George Gill, gaming; Thomas H. Ratcliffe, Harrison T. Stone, false pretenses; Ruth Anna Hopkins, forging a Government check; Thomas Triplett, incest and carnal knowledge, and Florence Virginia Craig, murder.

The grand jury declined to indict in three cases. They were James F. Graham, grand larceny; Wilbur Davidson, assault with a dangerous weapon, and Frank Kendrick and Amos Kendrick, violation National motor vehicle theft act.

Accomac Tax Law Evasions Charged

State Staff Is Auditing Treasurer's Accounts.

Richmond, Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Charges that the law against treasurers holding out tax tickets for their friends is being evaded in Accomac County by making out checks were made today by L. McCarthy Downs, State auditor of public accounts, in a letter to H. Ames Drummond, Accomac Commonwealth's attorney.

The letter was written after the auditor had so notified Gov. Peery, who directed that the matter be laid before Mr. Drummond.

Mr. Downs' staff is auditing the accounts of the Accomac treasurer, J. N. Belote.

The letter recites that the auditors found in the office of the treasurer a check, signed by J. N. Belote, for $247.47 and dated June 29, and three checks signed by W. P. Godwin, a deputy treasurer, one of date March 14, for $800, another June 25, for $3,244.45, and another June 25, for $1,600.

There is a legendary story that William the Conqueror called his three sons together to determine how his kingdom should be divided among them upon his death. He asked each of them, according to the story, what kind of a bird he would be if he had his choice. Robert, is said, announced he would be a hawk; William Rufus declared he wanted to be an eagle; while Henry said he would rather be a starling. To Robert he gave England, and to Henry he gave no lands at all. Henry he said, needed no lands for he would become famous without them.

The story, legend or not, was strangely borne out in later years. Henry, who got no legacy save 5,000 pounds, finally became ruler of the lands of both his brothers.

At first he bought some property which was later taken from him by his own brothers, then he wandered about until he was invited to become the lord of Domfront by the inhabitants. He eventually allied with his brother Rufus of England, and received from him the counties of Coutances and Bayeux.

Upon Rufus' death in 1100 Henry took over the throne of England, publishing a charter of rights of his subjects — a document which formed the basis of the historic Magna Charta.

Robert invaded England and unsuccessfully attempted to take the crown, yet Henry assured him complete title to his possessions in Normandy and gave him a pension. A year later war between the brothers broke out again, and this time Robert was taken prisoner and confined in Cardiff Castle until he died in 1134.

League Chiefs Eliminate Part Of Russian Bid

Portugal and Switzerland Expected to Vote No on Soviet Issue.

Geneva Sept. 11 (AP).—Still divided over the wording of the invitation to be sent Moscow, leaders of the League of Nations tonight were nevertheless determined to secure Russia's membership in the interests of world peace.

In the face of the refusal of some delegates to sign, league leaders agreed to eliminate from the original draft of the bid to Russia the assurances it contained of the league's certainty that Russia has and will fulfill her international obligations.

A sincere, direct invitation should suffice, these delegates maintained, and France, Russia's chief advocate at the league bar, agred that the important thing was to get as many signatures as quickly as possible.

These signatures, it was estimated tonight, probably will number 36, but Portugal and Switzerland, observers believed, will vote no, when the Soviet issue is submited to the league assembly.

Portugal and Argentina yesterday abstained from voting at the informal session of the league council at which it was decided to give Russia permanent place on the council along with England, France and Italy. This, it was reported, Russia demanded as the condition of her joining.

Meanwhile, the league, wanting to be sure that Russia will accept if she is bid, kept in close touch with Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, who has been vacationing at Marienbad, Czechoslovakia.

Eduoard Benes, Czechoslovakia's foreign minister and the president of the league council, was reported to be negotiating with Litvinoff as to the wording of an invitation that would be acceptable to Moscow.

The French, apparently unworried by Germany's refusal to sign the eastern security pact France has so vigorously sponsored, went ahead with plans to build up an eastern defense league to include Russia, Czechoslovakia, the Baltic States and Poland, if she is willing.

New Treatment for Pneumonia Seen in Quinine Preparation

Tests on Humans Proved 'Very Encouraging,' Society Told.

Cleveland, Sept. 11 (AP).—A new drug made from quinine, which promises a new treatment for pneumonia was described to the American Chemical Society here today by scientists of the Mellon Institute of Pittsburgh.

This quinine derivative has been used on animals with remarkable results, and tried out also on human beings with effects announced today as "very encouraging."

To get their new preparation, the institute chemists began with optochin, a drug known to physicians for many years. This old drug was highly toxic to pneumonia germs, but of little use because it also caused blindness. The new drug causes no blindness.

The development is regarded as one of the important chemical accomplishments in several years. Twice previously this year it has been described confidentially to medical men. Today's was the first public announcement.

The report was made by C. L. Butler, Alice G. Renfrew and Leonard H. Cretcher before the division of medicinal chemistry. They stressed a warning that physicians should not try ordinary chemical means of producing the new drugs because the slightest impurity would have poisonous effects.

Once the drug is safely standardized it can be used without elaborate or expensive technique.

It is fatal to all four known types of pneumonia bacteria. To date it has been tried only on human beings whose physicians had given up hope. No details were revealed except that the results had been "very encouraging."

Hopkins Names Miller Regional Relief Agent

Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins announced yesterday the appointment of Malcolm J. Miller, former relief administrator in South Carolina, as regional representative in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas, Alabama and Mississippi. Miller's headquarters will be in New Orleans, the Associated Press said.

F. M. Baker has been named South Carolina State Administrator.

Truck Victim Burns to Death

Machine Catches Fire After Hitting Tree on Leesburg Road.

Ben Pullen, 22, an employe of the Globe Bottling Co., of Alexandria, was burned to death yesterday when a truck in which he was riding crashed into a tree and burst into flames on the Washington-Leesburg Highway near the estate of Former Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley.

The driver, Joseph E. Finnacon, 29, of Alexandria, was thrown clear of the truck. He received only slight lacerations. Pullen, who lives in Alexandria, was a helper on the truck.

Finnacon said the truck got out of control on a long hill and he was unable to keep it on the road.

Nashville Grocers Fight Relief Stores

Assert Commissary Plan Will Ruin 100 Dealers.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 11 (AP). Huge grocery commissaries will be established by the TERA to feed Tennessee's 81,000 relief-roll families this winter. The announcement was made today by Col. Walter L. Simpson, TERA administrator, who said the move was initiated in order that the most food may be obtained for the decreasing amount of relief money available.

The action by the TERA today immediately precipitated protests from grocers who sent telegrams to Secretary of State Hull, both Tennessee Senators and Representative Joseph W. Byrns.

The grocers asserted today that "we think the proposed program is both unethical and unsound. We believe that instead of alleviating distress and relief it will increase it. If the warehouse is completed it will mean that at least 100 Nashville grocers must go out of business. If necessary, we will go to President Roosevelt with the matter."

Allison Jolts Wood in 3 Sets to Gain Tennis Finals With Ailing Perry

English Star Hurts Ankle But Wins

Limps Way to Victory Over Kirby Before 10,000 Crowd.

Foe's Reckless Tennis Swamps Wood by 6-3, 6-2 and 6-3.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 11 (A.P.).—Wilmer Allison, redneck Texan, who wasn't good enough for the 1934 Davis Cup team, tonight was the only barrier that separated Fred Perry, of England from his second straight American championship and complete domination of the lawn tennis world.

Today on the rolled turf of the West Side Stadium, and with nearly 10,000 spectators looking on from the big concrete saucer, these two narrowed down the fifty-third annual singles tournament to a duel between themselves. Perry, playing under wraps, and bothered by the recurrence of an old ankle injury, toyed with Vernon Kirby, of South Africa, to win 6—2, 2—6, 6—4, 6—2. Allison, playing with the fury of a Texas cyclone, blew away Sidney B. Wood, of New York, 6—3, 6—2, 6—3.

Tomorrow they will meet on the center court with the championship at stake, and Allison showed enough today to guarantee his backers that Perry will have to work for every point.

Allison's Win Surprise.

Perry's victory was expected, for the Englishman is the acknowledged champion of the world, while Kirby is a brash young man from the land of the Zulus. But Allison's win came as a stunning surprise. When the man who wasn't good enough for the Cup team took the man who was, and in straight sets, the gallery was almost too shocked to give him the applause his triumph merited.

Allison's was no fluke victory. True, Wood was not the same Wood who carried Perry to five sets at Wimbledon and who beat Jack Crawford in cup play, but many of his mistakes were due to the relentless pressure applied by the Texan. Not once did the Texan let up. From start to finish he attacked with a rapacity that forced Wood, game fighter that he is, to bend before the storm. Not once during the three sets did Allison use safety-first tactics. Hiss was an all-or-nothing game, and he hit out for the lines and the corners with an abandon that let everybody in the stadium know that he wanted to win or lose the point without delay.

Dodgers Beat Reds, 5-2; Leonard Gives 4 Hits

Brooklyn, Sept. 11 (A.P.).—The Dodgers easily defeated the Reds, 5 to 2, today as Emil (Dutch) Leonard limited the last-place club to four hits and didn't pass a batsman.

Lee Grissom, rookie left-hander who started for Cincinnati, failed to retire a man in the first, when the Dodgers scored four runs. He was replaced by Ray Kolp after two hits, a walk and an error had brought in one run and left the bases full. Two more hits off Kolp finished the rally.

Covelli Stops Guzman in 1st Round

Right to Jaw Flattens Floridian; Guggino Is K. O. Winner.

By Lewis Atchison.

The Riding and Hunt Club's semi-final, a substitute bout, resulted in a kayo, Carl Guggino, flashy Florida featherweight, flooring Jimmy Fitzpatrick with a crushing right cross to the jaw. Fitzpatrick, a game youngster, who stepped out of his class to accept the fight, went down for eight in the first round when he bumped headlong into one of Guggino's left uppercuts.

Britton Outpointed.

Bobby Britton's record of 20 victories in 21 fights, backed up by his famed father's reputation, was but a weak defense for the hard right-hand shots of Bill Bullock and he lost the duke in the opening six rounder. Both boys were body punchers, but Bullock was easily the better. Britton was a sucker for everything his opponent had and appeared to be on the verge of a knockout in the final heat.

Wright Wins on Foul.

Knocked down for a count of 8 in the first round and thumped and pounded from pillar to post thereafter, Carey Wright won on a foul from Frankie Carris, of Philadelphia, in the third round of a scheduled six-round bout. Though struck twice by palpably low blows, Wright kept his feet and vainly attempted to ward off the punishing attack of his rival.

Wright crumpled after the second blow landed in foul territory and Carris drove him into the ropes with a stiff belt on the chin just as the bell sounded. He failed to answer the summons for the fourth and left the ring to be examined by the boxing commission physician, Dr. Knowles. The doctor pronounced Wright physically unable to continue and Referee Kid Sullivan awarded him the decision.

Clowning Jimmy Reed clowned his way through a six-rounder with Petey Bevens, handing the Walter Reed glove wielder a fancy pasting all the while, and got a draw for his efforts. Reed landed on every part of Bevens' anatomy with everything the rule books allow, and on the face of it won all but a single round, but the judges didn't see it that way.

Yanks Divide But Gain in Flag Race

Slice Lead of Tigers, Trimmed by Red Sox, to Four Games.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 11 (A.P.).—The Yankees and the Browns split their closing double-header today, New York winning the opener, 7 to 4, with a 15-hit assault on Dick Coffman and Bill McAfee, and St. Louis taking the sunset edition, 7 to 3, by cuffing Johnny Allen and Jimmy Deshong when the hits counted.

The even break, along with Detroit's defeat, enabled the Yanks to cut the Tigers' margin to four games. New York took the season's series from the Browns, 17 to 5.

The Browns drove Johnny Broaca out in the opener with a ninth-inning rally which Lefty Gomez quelled, then bunched their seven blows in the second game with passes to gain an early lead.

Yarosz Beats Dundee for Crown

Pennsylvanian Takes Title on Points as 28,000 Watch.

FORBES FIELD, Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 11 (A.P.).—Young Teddy Yarosz tonight won the middleweight championship of the world by defeating Vince Dundee, 30-year-old title holder, of Newark, N. J., in a slashing 15-round bout before a crowd of 28,000 fans.

Dundee weighed 158½ and Yarosz 157¼.

The decision was not unanimous; it required the vote of Referee Al Grayber to award the bout to Yarosz. Judge Leo Houck, Penn State boxing coach, voted for Dundee, while Dr. George McBeth dropped his ballot on the Yarosz side.

Moss Fields, hard-hitting Weirton, W. Va., welterweight, defeated Joe Fortunoni, of Newark, N. J., by a technical knockout in the fifth round of a six-round preliminary.

In another scheduled six-rounder that was ended in the second, Young Stuhley, of Chicago, knocked out Al Salbano, of Syracuse, N. Y. Stuhley, who holds a decision over Dundee, the middleweight champion, outclassed his opponent in the brief bout. They are middleweights.

Two sluggers, Paul Pirrone, of Cleveland, and Al Diamond, of Paterson, N. J., fought a fast eight-round draw in the semifinal. Jack Dempsey refereed the bout. Pirrone weighed 157½; Diamond, 158½.

Lee, Cubs Hurler, Blanks Braves, 2-0

Boston, Sept. 11 (A.P.).—Bill Lee, tall right-hand Chicago Cub hurler, shut out the Braves here today, 2 to 0, allowing the Tribesmen only six hits.

Although Ed Brandt, Braves' pitcher, also held the Cubs to a half-dozen hits, he walked seven men, giving the Cubs their first chance to score in the third inning. Hack doubled to right and W. Herman and Cuyler walked to fill the bases, Hack scoring when Stephenson flied out to left field.

Schulte Hurt, Nats Bow In 11th

Dykes' Pinch Blow With 3 On Beats Whitehill for Chisox, 3-2.

7 Double Plays Feature Game; Score Tied in 9th and in 10th.

COMISKEY PARK, Chicago, Sept. 11 (Spl.).—The old order changeth all right. The plugging of the dykes, famed in song and story, was given a new twist this afternoon when the Dykes, Jimmy Dykes, to be exact, plugged Earl Whitehill's singing fast ball for a single that released the run that ungulfed the Nats, 3 to 2.

Whether or not the Nats suffered a simple or a compound fracture today was unknown at press time, but it was at least a clean break for their one-game winning streak. In a Chicago hospital tonight, Outfielder Fred Schulte was awaiting X-ray photographs which will show the extent of the injury to his left ankle, suffered on a futile slide into the plate in the eleventh inning. Early reports intimated a possible fracture.

Seven Double Plays.

In today's presentation of the series of Who Cares, the Nats and the Chisox staged a million-dollar ball game, throwing seven double plays and 25 hits into the proceedings despite the sparsity of scoring. It was 1-1 at the end of the ninth and 2-2 at the end of the tenth, and in that eleventh Whitehill was the victim of a series of circumstances not entirely of his own making.

The Nats presented the strange spectacle of Catcher Luke Sewell playing third base in the last of the eleventh, as the result of the injury that put Schulte out of the line-up, and the Sox were quick to take advantage of Sewell's presence at the novel position.

Simmons Starts Rally.

Al Simmons started it all by beating out a slow roller to the inept Sewell and Whitehill tossed in a bit of contributory negligence by wild-pitching Simmons to second. To third Simmons raced on Bonura's infield out, and Acting Manager Al Schacht ordered Appling and Hayes passed to fill the bases for double-play possibilities, bringing the rookie Mauldin to bat.

But Mauldin was ordered to throw down his weapons by Jimmy Dykes, who stepped into the picture in the role of pinch-hitter and Whitehill had worked the count to the dramatic proportions of three balls and two strikes on the White Sox manager, before Dykes interrupted the Jacobson, 16, Triumphs on 19th as Goodman Misses 8-Footer.

By Dave Herman
(Post Staff Correspondent).

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Chunky, baby-faced Bobby Jacobson, 16-year-old son of a New York stock broker, ended the championship aspirations of 24-year-old Johnny Goodman, 1933 open ruler, in the second round of the all-match play National amateur golf tournament today with a stirring, dramatic 19-hole victory that knocked the dope bucket into a thousand splinters.

Goodman's defeat, as shocking and unexpected as Ouimet's setback at the hands of young Bobby Jones yesterday, preceded that of several other favored stars, among whom were none other than Johnny Fischer, of Walker Cup fame, and Jess Guilford, champion in 1921.

McCarthy Victorious.

Martin F. McCarthy, of Beaver Dam Country Club, Washington, saved the District from a complete rout by overcoming Milton P. Warner, of New Haven, Conn., 3 and 2.

Surveyor Awakens to Capture Rockingham Feature Easily at Odds of 19 to 1

Albequerque, Favorite, Is Third

Victory Second in Seven Starts for Whitney Two-Year-Old.

SALEM, N. H., Sept. 11 (AP).—C. V. Whitney's Surveyor, winner of only one race in six previous starts and that last April at Pimlico, today showed his heels to seven other 2-year-olds in the 5½ furlong feature at Rockingham Park.

Taken under restraint early in the race by Earl Porter, the son of John P. Grier, moved up steadily in the last five-sixtenths of a mile, went to the front with a rush in the stretch and was going away at the finish. A length back trailed Cloud Sweeper from the Banncastle Farm, while Jack Howard's Albuquerque, the odds-on favorite, was a like distance to the rear.

Surveyor was given little consideration in the betting, paying $40.30 for a $2 straight ticket after running the distance in 1:07.

Charley Corbett shot Albuquerque into an early lead and hit the half-mile post with a length and a half advantage over Jessie D. M. and Surveyor back in fourth place moving up fast. The favorite managed to stay within striking distance to the final strides, but then weakened as Charley Rosengarten brought Cloud Sweeper from far back to take the place.

Sound Advice Scores.

Belmont Park Racetrack, Sept. 11 (AP).—Sound Advice, the full brother to Good Advice and Wise Daughter which finished far back in the rich hopeful, regained his winning form here today when he easily defeated a smart field in the Nursery Handicap, 6-furlong dash down the Widener course.

Quoted at 10 to 1, Miss Barbara M. West's colt led virtually every step of the trip and triumphed by three lengths to collect $2,445 for his owner.

Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons saddled four youngsters for the race. Two of them, both owned by William Woodward, accounted for second and third, Vicaress beating Gallant Prince by a length and a half. The Fitz entry was held at 3 to 5. Despite last night's cloudburst, the track was almost at its best. Sound Advice made the good time of 1:11 3-5. Of the eight starters, four are eligible for the Futurity, namely Sailor Beware, Go Quick, Dasher and Conte.

There was considerable swerving at the start. Sound Advice, Vicaress and Go Quick sped away from the others, heads apart. The latter two gradually dropped behind, finding the winner's pace too speedy. In the final quarter the son of Wise Counsellor-Wise Mother easily drew away. Vicaress held on for the place as Gallant Prince, last away, closed with a remarkable burst of speed to head Go Quick for the show. Tangerloo swerved all during the running.

Riegel Only Virginia Survivor; Howell Beaten on 19th Hole

THE COUNTRY CLUB, Brookline, Mass., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Bobby Riegel, 18-year-old theater usher, was the only Virginia golfer who survived the second day's firing in the National amateur golf championship today. The slim Richmond star, Middle Atlantic champion, defeated F. D. Ross, of Hartford, Conn., 2 and 1, to enter the third round.

The third Virginian to lose was Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, who bowed to Thad Street, Charleston, S. C., ace, by 1 up. Street shot a 74 to Harper's 75, clinching the verdict with a par 4 on the home hole.

SWEET MOLLIE, rushed into contention in the opening three-sixteenths, wore down LADY ADAIR before reaching the stretch and drew out rapidly in the last furlong. LADY ADAIR took command at once, was rated along under slight restraint and, though holding on well, was no match for the winner in the closing test. WINGED FLIGHT came with good energy in the closing drive. PIPPA made up some ground. COONEY dropped back soon after the start and, though making up some ground in the stretch, was never threatened. HIGH FINANCE dropped back steadily after showing early speed. SATURNINO was never prominent.

SECOND RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, ridden out. Went to post at 3:10. Off at 3:13½. Winner, Mrs. D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLAYING ON, $3.30, $2.90, $2.70; CABOUSE, $8.70, $6.90; ELDEE, $4.20.

PLAYING ON, unruly at the post, was away fast and, rated along in front, was never menaced, though roused in the stretch. CABOUSE moved up fast after leaving the back stretch, but was unable to reach the leader under intermittent punishment. ELDEE went well placed and held on well. CASH SURRENDER could never enter serious contention. PANA FRANKA, early speed, but tired when the real issue came. MONKS STAR raced far back throughout. NEREUS, away slowly, had scant chance and was worked out an additional three-sixteenths.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, ridden out. Went to post at 3:47. Off at 3:48. Winner, Mrs. M. Colford's ch. g. UPPERCUT, sluggish during the early running, was roused repeatedly nearing the far turn, moved up fast on the outside, went to the front when reaching the stretch and continued determinedly to the end. LIBERTY OAK had speed from the outset and held on courageously to the end. PLAYFUL MARTHA, unable to keep up during the early stages, came to the outside in the stretch and closed with a belated rush. DARK TYRANT, well placed, weakened under urging. LAMPORTE, well up early while racing on the inside, dropped back steadily. VACILLATE tired. SHASTA STAR was a trailer all the way.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:20. Off at 4:23½. Winner, Mrs. M. J. White's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HERNANDO, $8.80, $5.00, $3.00; ST. OMER, $6.20, $3.20; CHAIN, $2.60.

HERNANDO, never far back, moved up stoutly through the stretch, wore down CHAIN, and drew clear at the end. ST. OMER, away fast, lacked speed to keep up and, though tiring, finished a game fourth. WEDDING RING came on the outside, leaving the back stretch and closed with a rush. CHAIN, hustled to the front, had good speed, but weakened inside the last sixteenth. WEDDING RING went well placed throughout. CATERER saved ground in the stretch, but was unable to reach the leaders. DECORATE had early speed, but stopped badly.

FIFTH RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Record Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:55½. Off at 5:00½. Winner, C. V. Whitney's ch. c. SURVEYOR, restrained early, moved up steadily in the last five-sixteenths, went to the front with a rush in the stretch, and was going away at the finish. CLOUD SWEEPER, outrun early, came to the outside for the closing test and closed with a rush. ALBUQUERQUE, hustled to the front, drew out in the first three-sixteenths but weakened inside the closing sixteenth. HAPPY HELEN closed with a rush after being outrun early. JESSIE D. M. tired after showing early speed. FOREVER YOUNG faltered in the last quarter-mile. WISE PRINCE was never prominent and is capable of much better.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:30½. Off at 5:31. Winner, A. A. Baroni's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PIETY, $7.70, $3.80, $2.70; MUMSIE, $3.90, $2.90; FREE, $3.40.

PIETY followed in closest attendance of the pace, came to the outside of MUMSIE straightening out in the stretch, and outlasted her at the finish. MUMSIE went to the front at once, was rated along under slight restraint and held on tenaciously when challenged, but was unable to withstand the closing bid of the winner. FREE, well placed, dropped back, but finished willingly in the closing furlong. HICKORY LAD, a trailer early, moved up on the outside, made a determined bid to reach the leaders, but was not good enough. RED JUG, in close quarters in the run down the back stretch, was taken up repeatedly and was never a threat.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:04. Off at 6:05. Winner, L. T. Whitehill's b. or br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALLOTMENT, $12.40, $5.60, $3.20; TRAFFIC JUDGE, $3.80, $2.50; PLUMAGE, $2.40.

ALLOTMENT, rated along in nearest pursuit of the pace, went to the front nearing the stretch and, hard ridden at the end, held TRAFFIC JUDGE safe. The latter, restrained early, moved up on the outside, closed willingly in the drive, but was unable to reach the winner. PLUMAGE took command at once, was rated along under slight restraint, saved ground in the stretch, but was unable to keep pace in the final drive. SANTERNO, outrun early, closed a big gap. HARKY, well up and on the inside, weakened after going the first half-mile. KINDACORN was never prominent. NIGHT VINTAGE dropped far back after going the first quarter-mile.

Heurichs Defeat Acacias, 8 to 3, in Post's Week-Day Title Play-Off Series

11 Strikeouts Credited to Scrivener

Southpaw Hurling Ace Yields but Five Hits; Brewers Always Top.

ARCHIE SCRIVENER, diminutive left-hander of Heurich's team, put a damper on the title aspirations of the Acacia Insurance nine yesterday when he pitched the Brewers to a convincing 8-3 victory in The Post Association interleague week-day championship tourney. In its initial appearance in competition among the seven week-day league championship teams, the Heurich club justified its preseries choice as favorite by its steady fielding and potent hitting.

Another lively battle is listed for this afternoon on the South Ellipse, bringing together College Park, winner of the Maryland suburban loop, and Government Printing Office, the pennant hope of the Departmental League, in another second-round contest. Both these nines were victorious in their first-round games. Play will start at 4 o'clock.

Beall Gets Three Hits.

With the exception of Charlie Beall, who whacked out three solid hits, Pitcher Scrivener was a real puzzle to the Insurance team hitters. In all, only five safe blows were given by Scrivener, who personally retired almost half of the Acacia batters with his 11 strikeouts. He boosted his number of victims considerably in the ninth when he fanned the side.

The Brewers wasted no time getting off to a comfortable lead. In the first inning Radke led off with a single, Russell, next up, smacked another of Joe Sullivan's pitches on the nose for a double, and both scored on Bill Shelton's bingle to left field. Shelton took second on the throw to the plate, went to third on an infield out and tallied with the third run on Dick Knight's lofty fly to right field.

Rally Again in Fifth.

This opening assault was sufficient to win the ball game, but the Brewers broke out in another hitting rash in the fifth to sew up the game. Shelton and Russell again delivered in timely fashion to bring in 4 more runs. Successive hits by Ralph Bennie, Larry Britt and Scrivener accounted for another inconsequential run in the eighth.

Hurler Fans 15 Men, But Is Defeated, 11-8

Upperville, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.). The Upperville nine won a game on errors from the Springs of Warrenton, 11 to 8. They stretched seven scattered hits into 11 runs on fumbles by the Springs infield. The Springs hammered the ball for 14 hits.

Currier, pitching for the Springs, struck out 15 men. Spicer, who relieved him in the last inning, fanned two more. Brown and Levi, who did the hurling for Upperville got eight strike-outs between them.

Washington-Lee High Squad Drills on New Stadium Field

WITH a new stadium ready and new equipment ordered, the Washington Lee High School Generals, of Ballston, are getting in shape for the coming football season. The squad has not been weakened materially this year through graduation as it has been in the past years. Three first-string back field men and five linemen are returning this season. The back field men are Boswell, Birch and Fixx. The linemen are Capt. O'Brien, Strickler, Apperson, Blake and Welch. June graduation deprived the Little Generals of the following lettermen: Berry and Bell, backs; Goins and Long, linemen.

With this string of lettermen and the candidates out for the squad, Coach O. L. Driver is looking forward to a successful season. The line now training as the first string averages about 175 pounds and the back field about 150.

The present schedule for the Generals: September 28, Gonzaga, home; October 5, Winchester, there; October 19, Fredericksburg, there; October 26, St. John's, home; November 2, Alexandria, home; November 16, Western, home; November 29, Charlottesville, there.

Navy Gridders Divided Into 2 Squads

Lively Scrimmage Is Held; Borries, Clark Star in Practice.

ANNAPOLIS, Sept. 11 (Spl.). With the segregation of the big squad of 88 players, 46 going to the A or varsity group, and 42 to the B squad or shock troops, Navy gridiron mentors today set the stage for the drive in whipping a team into shape for the opening engagement with William and Mary on September 29.

Although the players suffered somewhat from a scrimmage session in the murky weather of yesterday, they were put through another lively session today, although under somewhat more favorable elements, and there was zip in the manner in which plays were run off. Two teams were picked from the A squad, and frequent changes were made so that all aspirants for the several positions had a chance to demonstrate their ability.

Tentative Line-Up.

Head Coach Tom Hamilton has said that all jobs are open for the best talent. The divisions were termed the "whites" and "garnets," by colors of jersey jackets worn. What might be termed a tentative line-up was found in the first group of "whites" to take to the field.

There were the veterans "Buzz" Borries, Bill Clark, Tommy King and Dick Pratt in the back field, with Borries and Pratt alternating in directing plays. Robert Shaw was at center; Capt. Dick Burns and Vogel, guards; Bentley and Baird, tackles, and Dornin and Mandelkorn, ends. Three big shots missing from this group however, were Dave Zabriskie, guard, and "Kutch" Cutter and "Beppo" Lambert, tackles. Borries was in particularly good form circling the flanks and handling passes, while Clark measured up to his old-time line-smashing.

Golfer in 3d Round Without a Stroke

Brookline, Mass., Sept. 11 (AP). There have been 177 matches played in the National Amateur Golf Championship, but Leo J. Martin, of Waltham, Mass., was in the third round tonight without taking part in one of them or so much as firing a single shot.

Martin, a former Massachusetts State caddie champion, is the only player to advance by default through the first two rounds. His first scheduled opponent, Bob Gardner, of Chicago, former champion, withdrew at the last minute because of his mother's illness. His rival today, A. W. Fowler, jr., of Hopkins, Ky., failed to appear.

Dog Racing Ruled Out In New Jersey Decree

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 11 (AP). Chancellor Luther A. Campbell today signed a decree holding parimutuel betting and laws governing dog racing in New Jersey unconstitutional.

Charging the Atlantic Kennel Club contested the commission's right to collect a tax of 1½ per cent on gross wages, the commission applied to the vice chancellor for an order restraining the track from operating.

Welcome Wins Pony Show Honors

WARRENTON, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Welcome, a black Shetland pony, owned and ridden by Jackie Somerville, 5, won the grand championship at the pony show sponsored by the Warrenton Junior Hunt at Stonelea, home of Miss Mildred Gaines, near here. The diminutive pony, under 12 hands, was one of the two that took first place in the class for saddle pairs, being teamed with Stout Fella, young Harrison Nesbit up. In addition, Welcome took two seconds and three thirds, placing in all six of the classes in which it was entered.

Nymph, another small black mare, owned by Miss Allison Hagnar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander B. Hagnar, of Warrenton, was adjudged reserve champion, winning blue ribbons in the class for saddle ponies under 12 hands and in the lead class. Alex Calvert's Dangle also won two blue, first in the class for saddle ponies over 12 hands and then in the jumping class for ponies over 12 hands. Dangle was ridden by Miss Bettina Belmont, of Middleburg, Va., daughter of the late Raymond Belmont.

Three Bought by Reds From Clubs in Minors

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Larry McPhail, general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, announced today the purchase of three minor league players as a part of the campaign to rebuild the team for 1935.

"Peaches" Davis, a pitcher, was bought outright from Fort Worth, of the Texas League. He will report next spring. June Barnes, a pitcher from the Wilmington Club, of the Piedmont League, and Frank McCormick, a first sacker, from the Beckley (W. Va.) Club, of the Middle Atlantic League, joined the Reds here today.

G. W. Booters In Strenuous Practice

1934 Football Proves No Puzzle; McGibbony Is Consistent.

CAMP LETTS, Md., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—The new football (1934 model) was just another football to the educated toes of George Washington's punting candidates here today and with Cecil McGibbony, the talented sophomore back, setting the pace, the Colonial booters were raising the pigskin high, wide and handsome in the first strenuous kicking session of the training season.

McGibbony was kicking the pill consistently in long, 50-yard spirals and found the supposedly different latest-model ball no harder to control than that of 1933 and preceding eras. Tuffy Leemans, ace-kicker of the Colonials last season, only got in a few boots, being still handicapped by a twisted ankle.

Gets Good Distance.

Ben Plotnicki, quarter back, was trying his hand, so to speak, at the kicking art with considerable success, as were Dean Alexander, massive full back; Dale Prather, tackle, and Herb Reeves, sophomore back. Prather gets tremendous distance on his kicks, but lacks consistency. None experienced the difficulty in kicking which was supposed to accompany the new ball.

The rest of the squad engaged in no scrimmage, the strained muscles resulting from Sunday's and yesterday's long session, still keeping the players rather tied up. The coaching staff is mindful of the comparatively small number of men available and is easing up the training for a few days. Scrimmages will be held the latter part of the week, possibly against the freshmen now working out in Washington under Johnnie Baker and Zuzu Stewart, George Washington stars last season.

Still in Hospital.

An indication of the heavy training the boys have been put through may be gleaned from a look at Ed Watts, tackle, whose weight had dropped from 238 pounds to 217 in three days. He dropped 17 pounds yesterday.

Coach at Warrenton Quits; Work Delayed

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Football practice of the Warrenton High School squad, which was scheduled to begin next Monday, will be delayed due to the resignation this week of William W. Wood, last year's coach.

P. B. Smith, jr., principal, will name a coach as soon as possible to work the Warrenton eleven into shape for its first game of the season, tentative scheduled for October 6.

Rowe, in Relief Role, Bows to Red Sox, 4-3

Tigers Held Safe by Grove Who Gets Credit for Victory in 11th.

DETROIT, Sept. 11 (AP).—The skill of Lynnwood (Schoolboy) Rowe was pitted against the equal cunning of Robert Moses Grove today and the Boston Red Sox defeated the league-leading Tigers, 4 to 3, in an 11-inning contest.

Going to the mound in the eighth inning to relieve the harassed Alvin Crowder, off whom Boston had scored three runs and six hits, Rowe worked the remainder of the game, allowing four hits, two of them dovetailing for the winning run.

next pitch for a single to left that won the ball game.

The Nats were giving splendid performances all afternoon in the fine art of self-frustration, leaving teammates on the bases on occasions when a hit of any description would have won the ball game.

As late as eleventh inning Washington was in a fair way toward winning when Schulte led off with a double and Susko sacrificed him to third. Dave Harris batted for Kerr and slammed a ball wide of the pitcher's box that Ted Lyons came up with in a spectacular play to cut Schulte off at the plate. It was on this play that Schulte's spikes caught in the plate, twisting his ankle.

Back in the eighth inning, the Fates played a cruel trick on the Nats at a time when a game-winning rally was imminent. The Sox were leading, 1-0, when Stone beat out a hit to Appling and went to third on Myer's double with none out. Manush's single to right scored Stone and put Myer on third. Bolton popped out and up came Schulte. Lyons' next pitch was wild and Schulte ducked. But his bat didn't. The result: a weak grounder to Lyons that was turned into a double-play.

Score in Fourth.

Back in the fourth inning the Sox got off to a 1-to-0 lead when Susko let Hayes' grounder trickle through his legs at a time when Simmons was on third, and this figure stood up until the eighth, with Lyons and Whitehill hooked up in a sensational duel.

Football in Virginia . . .

UNIVERSITY, Va., Sept. 11 (AP). The University of Virginia's search for a center goes on each day as the squad goes through morning and afternoon workouts. The problem of who'll do the snapping back for the Cavaliers is far from solved.

Horace Hallett, who has been understudying the pivot position for two seasons, is far and away the best passer, but he lacks the swiftness in backing up the line on defense that is needed for the job.

Ken Morton, regular end last year; Bob Spaulding, varsity tackle understudy, and Wier Tucker, flankman on the '33 first-year team, have all been given a trial over the ball. They all have real possibilities, but some of them have played the position before and each has a lot to learn.

Maybe in the end the job will go to George Coen, the man who served faithfully with the reserves last year, but who did not figure greatly in varsity play. Coen has added to his weight over the summer and now touches 180 pounds. He is a willing worker and is being given much consideration by Coaches Tebell and Slaughter.

Emory-Henry Hopes High.

Emory, Va., Sept. 11 (AP).—Coach "Pedie" Jackson, who usually sees the hole rather than the doughnut, is unable to do much first-class worrying this season when he casts his critical eye over the excellent material assembled for Emory and Henry's football team.

It's true, as Pedie points out, there's no rugged tackle to fill the shoes kicked off at the end of last season by "Tarzan" Wells. Furthermore, the diminutive Wasp coach could use a couple of reserve backs to "spell" the aces he has in harness.

But, all in all, prospects are rosy out here in the Southwest where Jackson, an almost habitual winner, is molding the 1934 edition of the Emory and Henry eleven. It looks like another winner.

Some indication of the team's strength will be gained Saturday when the Wasps start their ten-game schedule against the Tigers of Guilford College.

Mackey-Barker Fine Guards.

"Pedie" is willing to concede that in Capt. Paul Mackey and Major Barker he has two of the finest guards he has coached out here at Emory. Propps and Fulk at the ends are more than adequate, and when they falter there's Miller and Wilde to relieve them. Wiley Weaver, another veteran, will snap 'em back from the center position with Stanley Farmer as his understudy.

That leaves only the tackles. Duane Sands, a veteran of two seasons, will be in there at the right side of the line. Shaeffer, Payne, and Hensley are fighting it out for the other tackle assignment.

Behind this veteran forewall, "Pedie" will parade a veteran quartet of backs—Mark Kegley, Young, Starke and Marshall. These lads average something less than 160 pounds but they're, oh, so fast.

Particularly pleasing has been the work of Mark Kegley in practice sessions. He has taken on some weight and has learned a thing or two more about kicking. He probably will do most of the punting.

Here's the schedule:

October 6, William and Mary at Williamsburg; 13, Richmond University at Bluefield; 20, Roanoke College at Emory; 27, Carson-Newman at Emory.

Cadets Working Hard.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 11 (AP). — Coach Bill Raftery started V. M. I. Cadets concentrating on offensive tactics today, with punting and passing plays being added to basic running plays, group work on fundamentals, which has been stressed heretofore, occupied less time as coaches carefully checked assignments in dummy scrimmage.

Raftery paid special attention to such passers and punters as Eddie Law, Selden McMillin, Meredith Urick, Wayt Clark and John Penn.

Harrisonburg Wins, 1-0, Over Staunton

Gains 1st Win in Bi-County Series as Good Hurls Three-Hit Game.

HARRISONBURG, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Benny Good pitched Harrisonburg to its first victory in three games played in the tenth annual bi-county series today as he blanked Staunton 1 to 0. He allowed only three hits and fanned seven. Johnny Stephens held Harrisonburg to six hits, but two of these were bunched in the fifth inning for the lone run of the game. The game was a brilliant mound duel and was played in 1 hour and 25 minutes.

Harrisonburg continued in its batting slump, having scored only four runs in the last five games. Staunton blanked the Valley Leaguers, 4 to 0, yesterday, and took the opening game of the series, 3 to 1, which Good also pitched.

McFall's Hit Decides.

Huffman's double was the only extra base hit of the game. McFall, Harrisonburg shortstop, was the only player to get two hits, one of which drove over the lone run. This came after Shifflett had singled and was sacrificed by Good. Shifflett was safe by a step at the plate before McFall was nailed trying to take second on the throw-in.

The clubs play at Staunton tomorrow.

Columbia Jr. Golf Crown to Johnson

Harvey Johnson won the Columbia Country Club's Junior Golf championship yesterday afternoon, defeating Junior Slater, 8 and 7, in the final round of the first flight competition. Slater had defeated Jim Thompson, 6 and 4, and Johnson had beaten Junior Dodge, 3 and 2, to gain the final in morning rounds.

In the second flight, George Flathers defeated Webster Anderson, 3 and 2, for the honors after beating Earl Skinker, 5 and 4. Webster eliminated D. Powell, 2 and 1. K. W. Corby won from Marty West in the third flight final, 2 and 1. Corby went to the ultimate round with a 5 and 3 win over Pete Wilson and West with a 2 and 1 conquest of Junior Dean.

Police Victory Nets Title at Alexandria

Second Series Game With Post Nine Due Today; School Elevens Out

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—The second game in the Commercial League championship play-off between The Post and Police teams takes place tomorrow afternoon at Baggetts. Shout Taylor, for the Coppers, and Doug Morgan, for The Post, have been assigned the mound job for the battle.

Monday the Police team swamped The Post, 7 to 2, and a victory for it tomorrow gives it the title. If The Post team wins, the deciding game will be played Friday.

The Celtics worked out at Baggetts today in preparation for Sunday's twin bill with the Elks at Fredericksburg. Lefty Scrivener will pitch the opener in an attempt to win his third straight over the "Down Staters." Twice this season and on consecutive Sundays the sensational left-hander has southpawed the Elk hitters into submission.

Preliminary grid training began at Episcopal High School this afternoon. Coach Caldwell instructed the squad in blocking and passing for the greater part of the session. The team will probably get down to serious conditioning within the week.

Alexandria High School football warriors worked out at Hayden's Field here this afternoon under the observing eye of Coach Given. Some 30 candidates reporting for the drill were kept busy learning the art of tackling, blocking, kicking and essential fundamentals.

Outstanding players and the positions that are expected to be filled are: Center—Eddie Beach; guards—Noble, Roberson and Sanderson; tackles—Capts. Luckett and Fritter; ends—Pullman, Stewart and Nugent; backs—Shu, Fones, Hammersley, Davis, Frinks, Ewald and Ennis. Fones probably will be tried at the quarter back post. Shu, husky back, is to take care of the passing and kicking. Hammesley and Davis are fine looking prospects. Some of the most promising linemen are Geidd, Merchant, Apperson, Jefferies, Cornell, Howard, Moriarty, O'Neil, Wood, Whalen and Mitchell.

The Twins mentor has the necessary material for another great eleven. Of course, there are several weeks of grind before the players and coach. The opening game will be played in Washington against the Eastern High eleven on Friday, September 21.

Phils, Cards Split In Double-Header

Red Birds Lose First, 5-0; Dean Saves Second, 6-4.

Philadelphia, Sept. 11 (AP).—The Phillies and St. Louis split a double bill today, the Quakers winning the first fray 5 to 0 and the Red Birds taking the second 6 to 4.

The Cardinals won the second contest by belting Hansen and Cy Moore for six runs in the first five innings. The Phillies came back to knock Carleton and Hallahan from the mound, but Dizzy Dean saved the game.

Stocks Crawl Up One-tenth In Lighter Sale

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—The stock market pursued its course apathetically today while Wall street studied the Maine vote, with its apparent support for the New Deal.

Share prices stiffened a little, particularly gold and silver and other outstanding weak issues of the past few sessions. But the market generally was mixed and uncertain.

The slow-moving stock market was obscured by active trading and sharp declines in United States Government bonds.

Dollar Turns Soft.

Financial markets seemed to have had another mild seizure of inflationary illusions. The dollar turned soft against European exchanges and selling in Government bonds spread to other sections of the investment market.

Judging from commission-house comment, there was much confusion in speculative quarters as to the longer-term implications of the Maine vote and whether it could be accepted as a barometer of the National trend. The consensus seemed to be, however, that the New Deal had found favor in Maine and that it might discourage any tendency by the Federal Government to draw the purse strings on expenditures.

Stock Rally Expected.

Having declined 11 out of the past 12 sessions, the stock market was considered in a technical position that warranted a rally and some short covering took place on that theory.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks advanced one-tenth of a point, although declines outnumbered the gains in the list at the finish. Turnover was 631,160 shares, against 696,000 yesterday.

United States Smelting & Refining, on an early extension of its decline, touched 109¼, compared with last week's peak of 141. It later rallied nearly 6 points and finished with a net gain of 1¾ at 114¾. American Telephone, California Packing, J. I. Case, Cerro de Pasco, Liggett & Myers B and Schenley Distillers were among issues recovering a point or more.

Woolen Preferred Loses.

American Woolen preferred lost more than 3 points on the failure of directors to declare another dividend. Bottle stocks were weak, with Hazel Atlas off 5¼ and Owens off 3¼ points. U. S. Steel preferred sold at a new 1934 low with a fractional decline. Bethlehem Steel preferred lost 3⅛. Rail shares firmed, however.

Most active commodities moved higher, wheat closing ½ to 1 cent a bushel up and cotton rallying for net gains of 60 to 70 cents a bale. Hogs were a conspicuous exception as a further decline there carried the top price down to $6.90 compared with the summer peak above $8 a hundredweight.

Dwindling hopes for an early pickup in speculation in stocks were expressed in a further drop in the market value of stock exchange seats. A seat sold at $76,000, only $8,000 above the depression low established in 1932. Other than a further sharp gain of $114,000,000 in commercial loans, as revealed in the weekly Federal Reserve Member Bank condition statement, business observers found nothing in the news to show how the seasonal trends were moving.

Government Approves Ruling As Aid in Balancing Oil Supply

Regulations Controlling Collection of Taxes Under Revenue Act of 1934 Are Designed to Prevent Evasion and Assist Check-up.

An additional facility for the use of the Oil Administration in enforcing the program for balancing the supply of crude oil with consumptive demand was announced today simultaneously by the Treasury and the Oil Administration in approving rules and regulations governing the collection of taxes on crude oil provided for in the revenue act of 1934.

The tax is one-tenth of a cent a barrel on crude petroleum at the point of production, and one-tenth of a cent a barrel on crude oil at the refinery and gasoline produced from natural gas.

Commissioner Guy L. Helvering, of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, announced the approval of the regulations, which were worked out jointly by the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Petroleum Administrative Board, acting on behalf of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, the Oil Administrator.

Rule to Prevent Evasion.

As approved by the Treasury Department, the regulations are designed to prevent the evasion of the tax, and also will operate as a method of assisting Administrator Ickes in checking up on the production of illegal or "hot" oil, the term applied to oil produced in excess of allowables.

Severe penalties are provided for failure to pay the taxes or for deliberately evading them. Failure to file return can be penalized by adding 25 per cent of the tax as an additional payment, while a penalty of 50 per cent of the tax is provided for making false or fraudulent returns.

The provisions of Section 35 of the Criminal Code, enacted by the 73d Congress just before adjourning, which permit a maximum fine of $10,000 and/or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, also are made applicable to the regulations governing the taxes. Any person making a false affidavit or any other fraudulent representation in connection with the taxes becomes liable to this 10-year penalty.

To assist Administrator Ickes in enforcing the program for balancing crude oil production with demand, the law provides that all records of all persons required to pay the tax shall be accessible for inspection by agents of the Federal Government of the State Government engaged in regulating the production of oil as well as agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

A fine of $500 is provided for hindering or obstructing officers of the Bureau of Internal Revenue while in the course of their duties. These internal revenue officers are also given very broad power to inspect properties with the right to guage tanks and examine pipeline connections.

The regulations provide in detail for the type of records which must be kept, not only by producers, but also by purchasers, refiners and transporters, to facilitate the obtaining of full and accurate information as to the tax due on the oil handled.

Requirement on Measuring.

All producers are required to measure accurately the amount of oil produced and keep records of such measurements. All receptacles used for storage must be capable of accurate measurement, and no device may be used to prevent such measurement.

Collectors of internal revenue are given authority to require charts showing all the details of production, including the number of wells, the number and size of storage tanks, and all the outlets from producing properties. All these records are to be available to State and Federal agents dealing with oil production.

The regulations require the bonding of producers and purchasers. The $500 bond is conditioned not only upon payment of the taxes and upon the making of returns, but also upon the keeping of detailed records to show the source of all crude petroleum, the amount produced, and the disposition thereof. On failure to make bond a producer or purchaser is liable to a fine of $1,000.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.

London—Trading on the stock exchange was slightly more active, especially in industrials, which were strong on general buying. Foreign bonds, mining shares, and transatlantic issues held steady, while other sections were inclined to ease. The market closed steady. Argentine bonds were firm on rumors of a conversion plan.

Paris—Continued heaviness prevailed on the bourse today, industrials sagging all along the line. The refusal of Germany to join the Eastern Locarno security pact caused Young plan bonds to drop 15 points, while Dawes loans declined 75. The closing was heavy.

Bond Market Depressed by Federal Loans

General List Loses Fraction as Sales Mount to $14,809,000.

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—The listed bond market was depressed today by the renewed heaviness of U. S. Government securities, several of which dropped more than a point without attracting any appreciable support.

Transfers totaled $14,809,000, par value, with the Federals accounting for about $7,430,000 of this aggregate. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate loans yielded three-tenths of a point at 83.

The fall of the "Governments" occasioned some concern in the financial district in view of the Treasury's new conversion program involving some $1,725,000,000. While the exchange offering for the called Liberty Fourth 4¼ seemed highly satisfactory yesterday, the retiring issue reacted 20-32nds of a point today, to 100.16, a new low for the year. They finished at 100.18.

Three of the Federal Farm and Home Owners Loan bonds dropped to new record lows. The Home Loan 3s were off 1 point at 95.26, the 4s were down 1.2 at 95.26 and Federal Farm 3s yielded 1.1 also at 95.26.

New 1934 lows were touched by Treasury 3s of 1946-48, off 15-32ds, at 98.31, and Treasury 3¼s of 1944-46, off 19-32ds, at 100.9. Aside from Liberty 3½s, which ended unchanged, losses elsewhere in the Government department ranged from 6-32ds to 27-32ds.

How much influence the "New Deal" victory in the Maine election had on the Government group and on other "gilt-edge" bonds was a matter of conjecture. Some dealers attributed the down-turn partly to selling by holders on the theory that the Maine results implied approval of inflationary policies which would ultimately cut the value of fixed income securities.

At the same time it was pointed out that heavy Government expenditures would call for new financing in the future which might necessitate interest rates higher than those now current.

In the foreign division both Chechoslovakian 8s closed at 98½ for gains of 5 and 6 points. Antwerp City 5s were up 4½, at 100, while the Argentines and Brazilians were firm. The Germans were quiet and somewhat irregular.

Wholesale Prices Advance

Wholesale commodity prices advanced slightly during the week ended September 8, according to the index of the National Fertilizer Association. This index advanced one point during the week, moving up from 75.9 to 76. During the preceding week the index advanced nine points, two weeks ago it advanced eight points, and three weeks ago it advanced two points. The latest index number, 76, compares with the index number, 74, a month ago and 67.3 a year ago. (The three-year average 1926-1928 equals 100.) The index is at the highest point recorded since the early part of 1931. The lowest point during the last several years was reached on March 4, 1933, when the index stood at 55.8.

During the latest week seven of the 14 groups in the index were affected by price changes. Two groups advanced and five declined slightly. Foods and textiles advanced. Grains, feeds and live stock, building materials, metals, fertilizer materials, and fats and oils declined, but none of the losses was very large. The gains appeared in the most heavily weighted groups.

Prices for 26 individual commodities advanced, while the prices for 22 declined during the latest week. This is the smallest number of advances in several weeks. A week ago there were 43 advances and 23 declines. Two weeks ago there were 29 advances and 16 declines. Three weeks ago there were 35 advances and 28 declines. Higher prices were noted for cotton, corn, wheat, oats, barley, potatoes, apples, eggs, lard, ham, pork, lambs, silk, flour, tin, hides, coffee and rubber. The declining commodities included hogs and most feedstuffs which previously had materially advanced, cotton yarns, burlap, heavy melting steel, silver, brick, lumber and calfskins. Both the advances and declines in the prices for individual commodities were comparatively small.

The dividend on the common stock of New England Power Association, controlled by International Hydro-Electric, was also omitted. Three months ago the dividend was reduced to 25 cents from 50 cents.

The International Hydro-Electric system omitted the quarterly dividend of 87½ cents on the $3.50 convertible preferred stock due at this time.

Novadel Agene Corporation has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, payable October 1 to stock of record September 20.

At the annual meeting of the Vanadium Corporation of America the following was elected directors to fill vacancies: Oscar Copper, Lewis G. Bissell, Charles Rees, and P. J. Gibbons, A. A. Corey, president, told stockholders that the company's gross business for the first eight months of the year amounted to $2,443,058 against $1,541,813 in the same period last year.

Directors of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad Co. today declared the regular 2½ per cent semiannual interest on the 5 per cent adjustment bonds.

Matthew S. Sloan, chairman of the board, reported that net operating revenue for the first eight months of the year was $701,771 more than for the like 1933 period.

General business conditions in the Southwest continued to show improvement over last year, the chairman added, in spite of the record-breaking drought.

Wheat Values Move Upward In Late Dealing

Cash Prices Jump to New Top Record for Present Season.

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—Wheat futures advanced late today, responsive to the fact that cash wheat and cash corn had risen to fresh top price records for the season.

December wheat, which earlier dropped to $1.06, rebounded 1¾ cents. Expectance that the Canadian Government crop report would make a bullish exhibit was an additional stimulating factor.

Closing quotations for wheat were firm, ⅛ to 1 cent over yesterday's finish, December new 1.07⅞-½, corn ⅝-⅝ up, December new 79¾-⅞, oats ⅜-⅞ up, and provisions varying from 10 cents decline to 22 cents gain.

Bearish Interpretation.

Transient downturns of wheat prices in the forepart of the day were due largely to a rather general bearish interpretation of the United States Government crop report.

Resting orders to purchase on declines, however, were considerably in evidence. Furthermore, much stress in some quarters was placed on talk that official figures indicated this year's domestic wheat production totaled but 494,000,000 bushels to satisfy a minimum consumption of 650,000,000 bushels.

It was also emphasized that in five major grains there had been a loss of 1,080,000,000 bushels from last year, and 2,236,000,000 from a 5-year average.

Notice was likewise taken of Australian reports of persistent dry hot weather adverse to crop prospects. Contributing to strength of wheat was attention given the fact that the corn crop showed 122,000,000 bushels shrinkage in the last month, and promised the smallest output in 40 years.

Corn Condition Zero.

Moreover, the Kansas State crop summary told of 21 counties in which the condition of the corn crop was zero, and said that only 14 other counties reported a condition of 10 or above.

Corn and oats buying was encouraged owing to announcement the Government would lend 55 cents a bushel for corn held in sealed cribs on farms. This is an advance of 10 cents on the old loan price, and will include corn grading as low as No. 4.

Lard prices broke severely owing to a sharp setback in hog values, but afterward rallied with grains. Dry salt meats were in small supply, and were strongly held.

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Samuel T. Bledsoe, president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Co., said his road would show an improvement in earnings in 1934 over 1933 if conditions in its territory "continue as they are or improve during the remainder of the year." Net income in 1933 was equal to $2.98 a share on the preferred stock. Despite the drought, daily shipments of grain had been averaging more than twice the daily average for the like 1933 period, said Bledsoe.

Tobacco Belt Crop Boosts Nation's Total

(Copyright, 1934.)

Improved crops throughout the tobacco belt lifted the Agriculture Department's estimate of the total crop this week to 1,078,117,000 pounds for the Nation.

This estimate, higher than estimates during July and August, was still 22 per cent below the 1933 crop of 1,385,107,000 pounds and considerable below the 1927-31 average of 1,470,556,000 pounds.

All sections of the burley belt except Missouri showed improvement during August with the result the estimated burley yield rose from 277,198,000 pounds, forecast last month, to 294,360,000 pounds. Except for southern Maryland and Virginia sun-cured, production was estimated at less than last year.

Production of fire-cured types showed an increase over last month with an estimated total of 119,252,000 pounds.

Cigar filler types improved during the month, the September forecast being 37,675,000 pounds. The estimated cigar binder type production of 28,330,000 pounds showed little change from last month's estimate. Production of cigar wrapper was placed at 6,983,000 pounds, slightly less than the August forecast, but greater than the 1933 crop of 6,156,000 pounds.

Heavy Tobacco Sales.

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 11 (AP).—Heavy sales and averages estimated above $25 a 100 pounds marked the opening of the Middle Belt tobacco markets today.

With approximately 400,000 pounds delivered to the four warehouses at Sanford, blocked sales were reported likely there. Despite the preponderance of lower grades among the offerings, early sales were at an average of $25 per 100 pounds.

Between 800,000 and 1,000,000 pounds were delivered at Oxford and first sales were reported at an average between $26 and $27 a 100 pounds.

Henderson had its biggest opening day break in the history of the market, with 800,000 pounds delivered there. H. W. Stigall, sales supervisor, estimated the average for the early sales was $30 a 100 pounds.

One million pounds glutted the seven warehouses at Durham. Opening prices were estimated to be averaging 30 cents.

Daily Oil Yield Is Decreased 18,072 Barrels

Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 11 (AP).—While Oklahoma crude oil production was falling almost 44,000 barrels last week, a similar increase was noted in California, but scattered reductions brought the total output for the United States down 18,072 barrels from 2,509,551 barrels, 167,851 barrels above the Federal allowable. The estimate was made by the Oil and Gas Journal.

Oklahoma production fell from 460,550 to 416,910 barrels; that of California rose from 460,000 to 502,600 barrels.

In Texas there was a reduction from 1,096,584 to 1,091,411 barrels, the decrease coming despite an advance in east Texas production from 504,357 to 505,033 barrels.

Kansas cut production from 128,000 to 120,900 barrels.

Eastern fields, including Michigan, reduced output from 135,215 to 132,917 barrels; in the Rocky Mountain area there was a decrease from 99,820 to 96,900 barrels.

Canadian Wheat Crop Put Above 1933 Yield

Ottawa, Sept. 11 (AP).—Canada's wheat crop was placed at 277,304,000 bushels by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in a preliminary estimate released today. Last year's estimate was 269,729,000.

New York Produce.

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—EGGS—Receipts, 14,721; steady. All mixed colors unchanged. All white and brown eggs unchanged.

POULTRY—Live, nominal; no quotations. Dressed poultry, steady to firm. Turkeys, fresh, 28@32; other grades unchanged.

BUTTER—Receipts, 11,719; easier. Creamery, higher than extra, 25@25¾; extra (92 score), 24¾; first (88 to 91 scores), 23½@24½; other grades unchanged.

CHEESE—Receipts, 210,970; unsettled. Prices unchanged.

SUGAR—Raw, quiet and unchanged today at 2.86 for Cubas in store, duty paid. No sales were reported. Futures resumed their advance as additional reports from Washington gave details regarding proposed plans by which the Agricultural Adjustment Administration would regulate the marketing of imported sugar during 1935. The market closed net unchanged to 3 points higher except for October, which was nominally 2 points lower. A turnover was 21,180 tons.

A large part of the demand was attributed to hedge lifting against stored sugar, apparently on a favorable view of the outlook for controlled marketing during the coming year.

It was indicated that the Agricultural Administration would arrange for quarterly import quotas for the various offshore sources of sugar supply to spread receipts over the year and prevent dumping. The range follows:

*Bid.

In refined, withdrawals were good and new business was said to be increasing, although still supplied by resale offers at 4.65 to 4.70 compared with the unchanged list price of 4.75 for fine granulated.

After early weakness on Brazilian selling and trade liquidation coffee steadied on renewed trade and local support and European buying.

Santos opened 1 lower and closed 1 lower to 1 higher. Sales, 17,000. No. 7 opened 4 to 7 lower and closed 2 to 9 lower; sales, 9,000. Skyline Drive Opens Sept. 15

34-Mile Virginia Highway Has Cost to Date $1,394,100.

The Skyline Drive, one of the scenic features of the proposed Shenandoah National Park, will be opened Saturday without benefit of ceremony or fanfare, Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes announced yesterday.

The roadway, 34 miles long, with a spur highway adding eight more miles, has been constructed on a veritable mountainside near Luray, Va. It has been under construction for three years and to date has cost $1,394,100.

Although the top surface has not been placed on some sections of the drive, Secretary Ickes decided to open it because of a persistent demand for its use. The work will be completed before fall.

Started as a drought relief measure, the Skyline Drive has been financed by Congressional appropriations and a PWA grant. Construction was begun in August, 1931.

Until recently the National Park Service had planned to open the highway with appropriate ceremonies and there were reports that the President might participate.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Waiting Game.

I am waiting for the doc, to relieve my aching ear; wearily I watch the clock, wondering when he'll be here. Waiting for the doctor's step is a sad and grim ordeal; he should have more vim and pep, he should hustle more, I feel. When his office phone outrings, and he's told I'm sick and sore, he should drop all other things and come speeding to my door. When at last the doc arrives he explains why he is late; he's been saving human lives, he has rescued nine or eight. "I have gone by leaps and jumps," he remarks, from coop to coop, "old MacDonald has the mumps, old Dan Tucker has the croup. I must always chase about, on my weary rounds I whiz, treating one man for the gout, healing someone's rheumatiz. One said patient has the hives, and another has the itch; I am saving human lives, but it does not make me rich." "Your excuses are too thin," I remark, in tone that stings; "when you know that I'm all in, you should drop all other things. After this when I am ill and have stitches in my side, you will bring the healing pill, and let other patients slide." Then he poulticed my old pate, made me feel as good as new; now it is his turn to wait for the money that is due. And I see him watch the clock with a heart that's sad and sore, he is waiting for my knock at his humble office door. But his doorbell never rings, and he's thinking, in his woe, I should drop all other things and bring in the coin I owe.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — A No. 1 Credit Risks — By Harry J. Tuthill

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. 9-12
HOW MEEKLY THEY WALKED IN HERE AND HOW STIFF-NECKED THEY WERE MARCHING OUT AFTER THEY GOT THEIR HANDS ON THAT MONEY. TYPICAL RELATIVES!
I WONDER HOW MUCH WE'RE IN THE RED WITH THE BUTCHER AND GROCER? THE DELIVERY BOYS WERE BOW-LEGGED FROM CARRYING STUFF UP HERE.
THOSE MEN DID SUCH A LAND-OFFICE BUSINESS THAT I KNOW THEY JUST FORGOT TO KEEP TRACK OF OUR CREDIT.
THEY DON'T NEED TO WORRY. THEY'LL GET EVERY NICKEL COMING TO THEM. THE ONLY THING NOT CLEAR TO US, IS WHEN THEY'LL GET IT.
THE GROCER SEEMED VERY ABSENT-MINDED THIS MORNING. I'M SURE WE OWE BOTH OF THOSE MEN SO MUCH THAT THEY'RE AFRAID TO COMPLAIN.
WELL, WE'D NEVER TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THAT. WE'LL PAY OFF. THEY DON'T NEED TO WORRY ABOUT US GOING MODERN BY THROWING OUR STUFF IN A MOVING VAN AFTER DARK AND LEAVING A PHONEY ADDRESS BEHIND.

DIXIE DUGAN — What's in a Name? — By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

EDGERTON HAS DECIDED TO USE A PSEUDONYM OR "PEN-NAME" FOR HIS BOOK, AND HE AND DIXIE HAVE BEEN GOING OVER SCORES OF SUGGESTIONS
"JASPERSON EDGEMORE"—NOPE!—"ASPERSON JEDDMORE"—NOPE!—"DARRELL DORAMUS" NOPE!—I GUESS IT'S NOT SO EASY FOR A YOUNG MAN TO MAKE A NAME FOR HIMSELF—
HOW ABOUT "SUDLEY SMITH"? SUDLEY WAS MY DAD'S NAME.
YEH—BUT "SMITH" IS SUCH A VERY, VERY ODD NAME.
I'VE GOT IT!—WHEN I WAS A KID, MY OLD SCOTCH NURSE USED TO CALL ME A "NAE-GUDE." THAT'S SCOTCH FOR "NO GOOD!" S'POSE THEN I CALL MYSELF "SUDLEY NAEGUDE" THAT'D BE DISTINCTIVE ENOUGH!
AN' IT'D BE CLEVER, TOO!—BUT DOESN'T IT LOOK A LITTLE TOO QUEER—"NAEGUDE"?
I CAN LEAVE OUT ONE OF THE "E'S"—MAKE IT "SUDLEY NAEGUD"
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N.Y.
"SUDLEY NAEGUD"—YES! THAT WOULD BE A DISTINCTIVE NAME—AND FUNNY THING—IT ALREADY SEEMS AS IF I'M USED TO IT THEN "SUDLEY NAEGUD" IT IS.
BUT LITTLE DOES DIXIE DREAM WHAT THIS WILL LEAD TO!

YOU MEAN YOU HAVE SOMETHING WRITTEN OUT?
NOT SOMETHING, MRS. DE STROSS—EVERYTHING! HERE ARE ALL THE QUESTIONS THEY COULD POSSIBLY ASK—AND ALL THE ANSWERS I COULD POSSIBLY THINK UP—I'VE EVEN MARKED IN THE PLACES TO WEEP—
OH, WONDERFUL—
BUT WHAT SHALL I DO IF I JUST DON'T FEEL LIKE CRYING?
I'VE EVEN TAKEN CARE OF THAT—I'VE JUST ORDERED A CRATE OF ONIONS—YOU WILL BE SUPPLIED WITH A FRESH ONE TO SLIP INTO YOUR HANDKERCHIEF BEFORE EACH SESSION OF COURT—AND AFTER THAT REMEMBER—WHEN IN DOUBT—USE THE ONION—

First "Ziegfeld Follies" Was Plodding Into the Old National Just 27 Years Ago

Old Uncle Tom Is Coming Here Week of Oct. 2

"Dames" and "One Night of Love" Recommended; a Drama Fan's Note.

By Gerald G. Gross.
(Batting for Nelson B. Bell.)

Twenty-seven years ago this month Washington was being plastered with signs and advance notices heralding the imminent arrival of a certain stage production, full of music and pretty girls, from New York. Handling the ballyhoo, a pretty responsible job for one of his tender years, was an enthusiastic 22-year-old with ideas.

"Oh, what can we lose?" the show's backers must have thought when they gave him the assignment. Their musical had opened as a hit on the old New York Theater roof, then flopped when transferred to a playhouse. Such a flop it was that for 2 cents the week bookings in Washington and Baltimore would have been canceled.

Apparently no one came forth with 2 cents because Nora Bayes, Mae Murray and the rest of the show were hauled down to the Capitol City. From a Liberty Theater egg the song-dance-comedy concoction became a National theater success. After a week here it was as big, if not bigger, a hit in Baltimore.

A Pleasant Surprise.

Scheduled to close after the Washington and Baltimore engagements had been fulfilled, so gloomy was the outlook when the production left New York, it went on to become something of an institution. Yesterday Chicago had its name in lights.

Yesterday, too, the erstwhile 22-year-old was in this office. It is he who tells the story printed above. Twenty-seven years later he is advance man for "The Affairs of Cellini," which comes to the Palace Friday. Possibly you've read or heard before this the circumstances surrounding the introduction of the "Ziegfeld Follies" to Washington. If so, please excuse it. Even so, we think it's good enough to bear repeating.

Oh, yes, the press agent's name. Ed Rosenbaum. Between him and his United Artists colleague, Mark N. Silver, the District and its environs should be plenty Cellini and Cristo-conscious for the next week.

This is a dirty trick, not only reading but printing this Los Angeles postcard to Nelson Bell, but——

"Could not get so far from home without missing your clever column in The Post. At present time 'One Night of Love' and 'Dames' have their big premier nights here. Both are excellent. (Signed) Guy Robertson."

Incidentally, just incidentally, "Dames" bows in at the Earle Friday. The same theater will exhibit "One Night of Love," said to be a Grace Moore triumph, during the week beginning October 5.

That "Tom" Show.

There was something, after all, to those reports of an amateur production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" being plotted in Washington.

With Eugene Kressin, popular local performer, playing Simon Legree, Harriet Beecher Stowe's classic will be staged the week of October 2 at a house tentatively known as the City Theater. It is on N street northwest between Seventh and Eighth.

James Tate will be producer and director, according to the welcome announcement. Among other salient facts are: (1) The theater is fully equipped and has a seating capacity in orchestra and balcony of 500; (2) none of the "heat-rending moments" or "blood curdling scenes" will be omitted, meaning Eliza will cross the ice and Little Eva will ascend to heaven; (3) Edith L. Allen, who did the same thing at the Roadside Theater, will design settings; (4) Eldred Wilson, ditto, will be stage manager, and (5) all of the characters will be taken by white actors and actresses, although the playhouse is located in a colored neighborhood.

Hurray for the newest "Tom" show!

Stars of This Week.

Otto Kruger, at the Palace in "Chained," played tutor to Francis X. Bushman's son, Ralph, while the film was in production. The former matinee idol's heir has a small role in the picture.

Madeleine Carroll's mother is French and her father an Irish college professor. England's first lady of the screen, she hesitated to embrace Franchot Tone while making "The World Moves On" (Loew's Fox), does not believe in dieting, says "Hollywood lives in a glass house," and has been presented at the Court of St. James.

Seigfried Rumann, also in "The World Moves On," is known as Hollywood's champion gadabout. Since deserting the Broadway stage for the screen, he has seen more of California than most natives.

Peeping Into Next Week.

Lois Wilson, an ingenue back in the silent days, is now typed as a screen mother. That's what she was in "Seed" and that's what she is in "There's Always Tomorrow," heading for the Rialto tomorrow. Directors look at her, then cast her as a mother, though she has no children and even admits her maternal instinct is nothing to brag about.

Joe Sherman, who adapted "Death on the Diamond" (Loew's Fox) to the screen, was a newspaper reporter in Seattle when a trial he was covering gave him the idea of becoming a fictionist.

Although Clarence Muse, colored actor and composer, has what critics pronounced one of America's finest speaking voices, his role in "The Count of Monte Cristo" (RKO-Keith's) does not permit him to utter a sound. He plays Ali, the mute.

Another Who Remembers.

"Pardon my use of pencil," writes E. S., "for I have been critically ill for a long time and find a pen a bit difficult. In your . . . article in today's Post you speak of Robert Warwick appearing in 'The Face in the Moonlight.' As long ago as 1892 I saw Robert Mantell in that play of French life wherein the star impersonated dual characters: the hero and a murderer who resembled one another.

"I hardly think that Warwick ever appeared in the mentioned play. Again you have Richard Bennett in 'The Barker.' I saw Walter Huston in 1927 in that play. Did Bennett soon after take it up? I think not.

"From the time I was 19 in 1888 up to 1928 I had a large collection of theater programs of all the plays I had seen in those 40 years. Two years ago my precious mementoes were destroyed in a fire, much, very much, to my regret. . . . Faithfully yours, (signed E. S."

We meant the film, "The Face in the Moonlight," not the stage play, Mr. E. S. Yes, Walter Huston did take "The Barker" on tour; indeed, he was to have appeared in the particular production which we saw but an eleventh-hour change brought Bennett as "Nifty" instead. Thanks for an interesting letter.

Reminiscences.

Who remembers that spooky serial, "Mysteries of Myra?"

Interest High In Vote Today At Hagerstown

Factional Fights Cause Heavy Registration on Final Day.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 11 (Spl.). With hundreds of new Democrats and Republicans registered today, interest in tomorrow's primary was at fever heat here and in Washington County. The largest primary vote in history was forecast by both parties.

Factional fights in both parties have been in progress here for several weeks, with the outcomes in doubt. The younger Republican element is supporting Harry W. Nice, Baltimore, for the gubernatorial fight and the old guard is backing Philip Lee Goldsborough. Each side has tickets for the State central committee.

The appearance of an anonymous letter sent to all Republican voters intimating that municipal employes had been assessed by one Republican faction leader caused a sensation in Republican ranks today.

On the Democratic side there is also a spirited factional fight, with organization Democrats, led by Attorney General William P. Lane, jr., supporting the Ritchie candidacy, and the other faction led by Dr. J. Hubert Wade, former chairman of the Democratic State central committee, supporting Dr. Charles C. Conley. Both factions have tickets for State central committee and the Wade or anti-Ritchie group has marked sample ballots for other county candidates.

Because of the unusually large tickets for both parties complete returns were not expected until late Thursday or Friday.

Annual Fair Opens In Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—The Fredericksburg fair opened for its annual four-day run today at the city fair grounds.

Farm exhibits were featured in the display section, with attention also being given to the home demonstration exhibits. Members of the 4-H Clubs, Future Farmers of Virginia and other organizations sponsored exhibits.

A public wedding will take place Thursday night, uniting a Spotsylvania County couple, whose names are being withheld until the wedding. Entertainment tonight consisted of a fireworks display and vaudeville acts.

Rallies Close Heated Battle For Allegany

Both Parties Stage Final Meetings in Campaign to Rule County.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 11 (Spl.). Both parties are winding up hot fights for control in Allegany County tonight.

The antiorganization Democrats held a mass meeting at the City Hall, at which the main speaker was W. Carl Richards, member of the Allegany County bar, candidate for the nomination for State senator. Mr. Richards answered State Insurance Commissioner William C. Walsh, Joseph B. Finan, editor of the Cumberland Evening Times, and Edward J. Ryan, organization candidate for the State senatorial nomination.

Finan and Ryan gave radio talks last night in favor of the Ritchie ticket and later with Mr. Walsh appeared at a mass meeting at the City Hall, when registration of Democrats today, this being registration day, was discussed at length. John P. Schellhaus presided at this meeting.

The organization has issued a sample ballot with the names of its candidates marked. It refrains from expressing a choice for the nomination for sheriff, there being five aspirants, declaring it is friendly to all and will give hearty support at the November election to the man who may be nominated.

Sample Ballot Issued.

On the Republican side, the Smith-France-Henderson faction has issued a sample ballot with its favorites marked, while the Nice-for-Governor faction has countered with a marked ballot designating the men it favors. So far no marked sample ballots have shown up from the group supporting Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough for the Republican nomination for Governor. The Cumberland Daily News, the Republican organ, is editorially supporting Mr. Goldsborough.

A mass meeting of colored voters was held last night in the city council chamber at city hall in the interest of the Smith-France-Henderson faction. Addresses were delivered by former Mayor George Henderson, candidate for nomination for attorney general, and Mrs. Howard E. Young, of Balitmore. Colored residents of Cumberland last week organized the Progressive Voters Association of Allegany County. Dr. W. L. Harris, dentist, was elected president. It was stated the object is "to enhance the political, economical, social and industrial status of the colored people."

A new element has just jumped into the primary fight in the Unemployed League of Western Maryland, which held a mass meeting at the city council chamber tonight in behalf of the candidacy of Robert B. Kimble for the Republican nomination for State Senator, and Robert L. Gleen and David Holsinger, candidates for the nomination for House of Delegates.

Mr. Kimble, a member of the last House of Delegates, is a former president of Allegany Trades Council and has been prominent in labor movements. He is opposing J. Glenn Beall, who seeks renomination, and Jonathan Sleeman, member of the last House, who would advance to the State Senate.

This fight is particularly warm, with Mr. Kimble vigorously attacking the record of Senator Beall the past four years. Mr. Kimble is city milk inspector. Last night Messrs. Kimble, Glenn and Holzinger addressed a meeting in Firemen's Hall, Frostburg, the home of both Messrs. Beall and Sleeman.

W. Carl Richards, who is leading the antiorganization fight, made the final political talk over the radio tonight previous to addressing the mass meeting at the city hall. The last two nights two meetings have been going on at the city hall at the same time, the Republicans using the city council chamber and the Democrats the main auditorium. The antiorganization Democrats had a large meeting last night in Odd Fellows Hall in South Cumberland, the railroad shops center.

Both factions have been putting up a vigorous campaign that has not been devoid of personalities. The Ritchie forces would seem to have the edge, as they are better organized. There is, however, considerable anti-Ritchie sentiment, which will concentrate on Dr. Charles H. Conley.

The contest between former Representative Frederick N. Zihlman and former State Senator William A. Gunter for the Republican nomination for the House of Representatives, has been very quiet. Both are residents of this city. Neither candidacy has been lined up with any of the gubernatorial factions.

The Nice organization seems to be the strongest in Allegany County, with adherents freely predicting that it will win. Nice has considerable organization backing, while the anti-Nice element is divided between Smith and Goldsborough.

In "The Tavern"

Mrs. M. A. Hines Rites Held at Lynchburg

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Mary A. Hines, 84, wife of the late Z. T. Hines, who died Monday, were conducted this afternoon at her home here. Her body was taken to her former home at Gretna, Pittsylvania County, for burial.

Funeral services for Robert Monroe Guill, who died late Sunday night at his home at Perkins Park, were conducted this afternoon.

Straight From the Studios

Singer Sought for Role of Jenny Lind in "The Mighty Barnum;" Una Merkel and Charles Butterworth as New Comedy Team.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Sept. 11.—Janet Beecher, the sapphire blonde will play opposite Wallace Beery in "The Mighty Barnum," which is proposed as a most spectacular picture on the Twentieth Century program. Also the cast is otherwise probably settled, with Donald Meek, Charles Judels, Herman Bing and Tammany Young, among those added. Previously announced was Adolphe Menjou as primary support to the star. Miss Beecher has won interest by her impersonations in such features as "Gallant Lady," which starred Ann Harding, and in "The Last Gentleman" with George Arliss.

ANN HARDING.

Much speculation there is about who will be the songbird to enact Jenny Lind in the feature, a role once played in another film by Grace Moore. It is understood that the effort was made to secure Miss Moore, but her concert engagements interfered. Also thought to be a possible choice is Jeanette MacDonald. Real singing stars are all too rare in the film world, which is what makes the selection especially difficult.

New Comedy Team Looks Promising.

Glimmering on the horizon is a new comedy team. That is what may eventuate through the combining of the talents of Charles Butterworth and Una Merkel in "The Night is Young," in which picture they appear in support of Ramon Novarro and Evelyn Laye. . . . Miss Merkel will portray a ballet dancer, who is companion of the heroine, and Butterworth will interpret her fiance, driver of a Viennese horsecar. If this union of comedy talents turns out favorably as anticipated, the two may be starred in a picture. Comedy teams of this order are rather rare, and the Butterworth and Merkel talents should rather ideally match.

Owen Features in Harding Film.

Reginald Owen's popularity is being testified to in various ways since he enjoyed success by his interpretation of the country doctor in "Of Human Bondage" and Louis XV in "Du Barry," starring Dolores del Rio. He is regarded as an unusually versatile actor. . . . The newest assignment for Owen is in the Ann Harding production, "Enchanted April," which Kenneth Macgowan will produce prior to "Becky Sharp."

"Call of the Wild" Going Far North.

When "The Call of the Wild" is made, the company producing it will probably essay a trip to a far-away location, namely Alaska. The time chosen is likely to be the spring of the year. It is understod that Edward Arnold will be one of the principal figures in this Jack London story, which has attained the dignity of a classic.

Fay Wray in Maroin Plot.

The cast of "Cheating Cheaters" has been pretty well assembled. This is the picture that will bring the young Cuban, Cesar Romero, to the fore. In the feminine lead will be Fay Wray, while Francis L. Sullivan, newly brought from England; Hugh O'Connell, Henry Armetta and Ann Shoemaker are others. Filming is to start Monday under the direction of Richard Thorpe. The original is by Max Marion and was adapted by Gladys Unger, Ellen Rivkin and James Mulhauser.

McCrea Mentioned for Train Opus.

Provided the offer of British Gaumont, which he has received, does not prove too alluring, Joel McRea will likely assume the leading role in "Silver Streak," which is to be the story of the new type of train for transcontinental service. The production is to start shortly, and the Burlington line is supplying the train for the picture, and has even changed its name from the Burlington Zephyr to the Silver Streak. As yet no selection has been made of cast or director for the film, though McRea is considered the right leading man possibility.

Independants Find. Paramount Haven.

Paramount is evidently becoming, of a sudden, the gateway for the release of independently-made productions of a sudden, despite the fact that the company itself has some sixty-five features of its own scheduled for the year. The Walter Wanger films are to be released through that organization, with "The President Vanishes" and "The Peacock's Feather," starring Ann Harding, the vanguard of offerings. In addition to this the company has planned to put out six pictures made by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, the first of which is "Crime Without Passion."

Lucille Ball, who appeared in the Eddie Cantor film "Kid Millions," has signed for a seven-year contract with Columbia. She formerly posed for cigarette ads . . . Sidney Howard, the English comedian, who played in "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round," plans to leave for his native land this week, but will return later for pictures here . . . Berta Singerman, the Argentina diseuse, under contract to Fox, is also leaving for a trip that will take her to Cuba, Spain and Portugal. The date set for her departure is September 24, and she will return for picture work about November 16 . . . John Arledge has joined the cast of "Bachelor of Arts" with Tom Brown, Anita Louise, Henry Walthal and Arline Judge. William Thiele will direct "Lottery Lover," with Pat Peterson, Lew Ayres, Sterling Holloway and Peggy Fears as principals.

Virginian Fears Boys Kidnaped, Asks Hunt

Richmond, Sept. 11 (AP).—E. C. Ridley, of Carson, Va., today asked Gov. Peery to advise him how to locate his two boys whom he fears have been kidnaped.

The boys, Broadus Ridley, 17, and Hampton Ridley, 13, have been missing since August 22.

Winchester Schools Open.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 11 (Spl.).—Winchester's four public schools opened today with a full program and a registration of 2,226 students, about the same number as enrolled last year.

Actress to Wed Director.

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 11 (AP).—The engagement of Lyda Roberti, musical comedy and screen actress, to R. A. Golden, assistant film director, was disclosed today. Golden said they would marry late this month.
